Hadassah Chapter Holds International Sale

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

While expo '67 and its more recent successor in Tokyo drew millions of visitors from all parts of the world, Belleville's were treated to a similar international fair on Tuesday night at the Synagogue. Co-ordinated by the local chapter of Hadassah under the direction of Mrs. Norman Albert, the bazaar was a mosaic of international culture and consisted of booths representing Italy, Tibet, India, the West Indies, and the Canadian Indians as well as the host organization. A wealth of hand hooked rugs, pictures and wall hangings was displayed by the local branch of the Ontario Hooking Guild.

In addition, paintings by local Dutch artists, and Jewish artists as well as Canadians articles were either offered for sale or displayed for the viewing pleasure of the guests.

In the foyer, a number of exquisitely beautiful artifacts, representing some aspects of Jewish culture were displayed on two tables. These included a Menorah, an eight-branched candelabra, a deep blue velvet container for a prayer shawl, an oil painting of a Rabbi, a black skull cap called yarmeska intricately embroidered in gold and some copies of the Hebrew Scriptures with beautifully engraved metal covers. The other exhibit was a table set for the passover feast, with a copy of The Haggadah for the head of the family to read, candles, wine and a large, round tray on which were arranged saucers of ceremonial food. Mrs. J. Burke, a member of Hadassah explained that every article on these intensely complicated ceremonies had to be studied and observed by all Jewish families thus passing the ancient traditions from generation to generation.

Inside, the delicious odor of home baked Jewish foods including Challah, a glazed ceremonial bread, traditional honey cakes, strudel squares and latkas (potato pancakes) mingled with the aroma of coffee and tea. Another display table featured Sabbath candles, a ceremonial tablecloth adorned with Menorah motifs, miniature flags of Israel, replicas of the Hadassah crest, candy dishes, an authentic Yemenite costume made of a heavy damask cloth and richly embroidered in gold, and a host of other articles, each associated with some aspect of the religious and secular life of Israel.

The Hadassah 'boutique' featured pastel colored soaps in ornamental dishes adorned with flowers, leaves and lace. The Tibetan booth manned by two Tibetan men and two women featured a number of embroidered wool and silk handbags, jewellery made of bronze and semi - precious stones, and hand woven carpets. All the articles were handmade by highly skilled craftsmen.

Mrs. Salvadore Mariño of Italy looked after a booth filled with leather handbags, skirts and belts as well as silk scarves. Dolls dressed in the traditional costumes of Rome and Genoa were displayed, also a doll dressed as a Swiss guard who traditionally acts as a bodyguard to the Pope.

Some of the legendary wealth of the Indies was displayed on the booth representing India. The artifacts included an exquisitely carved tray of beaten silver, scarves of silk and gossamer-fine cotton, ornately woven shawls, a sari interwoven with gold with a matching choli (brief, bolero-like top) and replicas of the famous houseboats of Kashmir.

A Canadian Indian booth, with Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Maracle of the Tyendinaga Reservation in charge, featured leather crafts, and bead work, an incense burner, a religious mask, and a turtle rattle used in ceremonial dancing. Mr. Maracle explained that the crafts were the work of Mohawks. Cree and Micmacs. Other items included a replica of a tom-tom, ash trays shaped like leaves and bead bands and belts made of natural dyestuffs.

Other displays included etchings and wood relief work from the "Dance Div" exhibitures by Tony Lassing, and an oil painting on deerskin by Shirley Yanover.

Mrs. R. G. Walsh dealt with the highlight of the discussion and interest groups. One of the most interesting was on nationalism vs internationalism.

Mrs. P. T. Seibert gave a most interesting resume of the five guided tours, especially of Philadelphia's outdoor market and meat processing plant, though neither was as impressive as the dinner prepared and served in her own home by a blind American member.

Mrs. J. M. Haig shared with the group her witty and unbounced adaptation for various personalities at the conference, especially for IFUW past president Professor E. P. Hulst-Steyn Parve from the Netherlands.

All four spoke of the hospitality preferred and the goodwill at the conference, with the exhortation that members plan to attend the 18th Conference in Japan in 1974.

The evening was climaxed with refreshments and a tour of Portugal via Mrs. G. E. Boyce's slides.

Reports Given by University Club Delegates

Belleville and District University Women's Club held its November meeting in the Cosby Library Art Gallery.

After the business meeting, club members were treated to a review of the International Federation of University Women's Conference, held in Philadelphia last August by the four members who attended.

Mrs. G. E. Boyce reported that there were women present from five continents and 40 national organizations. As a first, four Russian women attended as observers.

Her report included the resolutions passed, the constitutional changes, made the reasons thereof, and an outline of present aims. The reasons were most enlightening. For instance, political participation may be a laudable pursuit for women in Canada or the U.S., but not so in Latin America.

Surprise Party on 40th Anniversary

A surprise party was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Belch Jr. to honor their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Belch on the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

Clifford Belch Jr. congratulated his parents on behalf of his family. A corsage of yellow 'mums was then given to Mrs. Belch by daughter Mrs. Stalker. Mr. Belch was presented with a white boutoniere by another daughter, Elizabeth.

Daughters Barb Wannamaker and Muriel Gagne presented each of their parents with a purse of money on behalf of the family. A television set was then unveiled by the granddaughters.

At the buffet style salad supper, a three-tier cake centred the table along with white candles and a poster commemorating the occasion designed by granddaughters Christine and Lynn Belch.

All their 11 children and 15 grandchildren were present.

Mr. and Mrs. Belch later attended a party held in their honor at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Gagne, Foxboro. They were presented with a clock and lace table cloth by other relatives.

U.C.W. Meeting

FRANKFORD UCW UNIT 3

Mrs. Milton Grills, the leader, welcomed the gathering.

The secretary's report was read and approved. Mrs. Gordon Savage gave the treasurer's report. Several items of business were discussed. The UCW will cater at the sales barn, Hoard's Station on Dec. 13. Members were reminded of the Christmas general meeting on Dec. 7. All are invited.

Mrs. Nellie Carter continued this portion of the meeting with Threads of gold and silver in the pattern He has planned. A hymn was sung, followed by prayer.

A social hour and auction sale followed, which was enjoyed by everyone.

Birds of A Feather?

Andrew Maracle, a Mohawk from the Tyendinaga Reservation shows a pair of moccasins to Vinay Bagaya, a native of India who in turn displays an embroidered shawl. Mr. Maracle jokingly recalled that his people who call themselves Ayeh-hon-weh (people of the land) were mistakenly dubbed Indians by Columbus who thought he had landed in India. This exchange took place at the International fair held at the Synagogue on Tuesday night.

District Women's Institutes

QUINTE WI

Mrs. Mitchell, president, opened the meeting welcoming members and guests. The roll call "What have you done for your Institute?" showed much interest in the Institute by the response. Mrs. Clifford reported on district meeting.

The district is planning a special celebration at Gilead Hall April 5 to commemorate the 75th anniversary of the created Women's Institutes of Ontario.

Conveners for the Afternoon were Mrs. J. Parrott and Mrs. Noble Brown. Mrs. Parrott gave a reading on motto "good resolutions are not worth much until they ripen into good deeds" was prepared by Mrs. N. Brown and given by Mrs. C. Ross. Mrs. J. Parrott concluded with a very humorous talk about a WI meeting and finished with a poem, The Knack of Sewing with Knits short course, is progressing well. There are 13 women taking the course and all are anticipating that all will have their dresses and samples completed in due time.

The meeting was closed and a social half-hour was enjoyed.

George Grant won the lucky draw prize.

LONSDALE WI

On Nov. 16 the WI met with a good attendance. President, Mrs. J. Stafford chaired the meeting and opened in the usual manner. Roll call was answered by a "school day happening". In the absence of Mrs. L. McGuinness the minutes of the last meeting and the treasurer's report were read by Mrs. J. Bell. Business of the WI was taken care of. An invitation to 4-H achievement day at RCI Nov. 27 was acknowledged. A paper drive was discussed. Plans for the concert to be held Dec. 4 were made.

Mrs. R. Walsh introduced the guest speaker, Mr. Pollard of Napanee ARC Industries for Mentally Retarded. He was assisted by Mrs. Martin. Slides were shown of the work the pupils do and he described each one's achievement. All that is needed is patience and perseverance with the pupils who are so grateful for the least thing they accomplish.

He demonstrated articles that are being made at the school. Mrs. Walsh thanked the speaker and presented him with a gift of appreciation.

Mrs. Stafford closed the meeting. This was followed by a social half hour presided over by Mrs. B. Allen and Mrs. J. Bell. Next meeting will be held Dec. 14.

Miss Grace Warren and Mrs. Carman gave the highlights of the Trent Valley area convention held in Belleville on Oct. 10 and 11.

Mrs. Carman also gave a paper on agriculture and Canadian Industries.

It was decided to postpone a donation to Sherrett House and the nursing home in Deloro until the new year.

Saturday, December 4 was chosen as the date for a tea and bake sale to be held in the Senior Citizens' room of the Memorial Building.

Mrs. Carman acted as auctioneer for the sale of articles brought by members to the meeting and realized $14.55 for the treasury.

Successful Living

Those Were the Days When News Was Hard to Get

By DORIS CLARK

My friend Helen, a writer, with a weekly column of her own, tells me that printer's ink runs in her veins. Her lively interest in politics was soaked up with her first bow of crackle-pop-snap or its reasonable facsimile a h-v-y duty ago, in a small Ontario suburb.

Party politics were common fare at the dinner table. When Mackenzie King was facing his first election as representative in the (then) Berlin riding, and one of the youngest men to be nominated a member of Parliament, the election took place on a Saturday. There were no radios to spread the news like wildfire. Neither was there a Sunday edition of the St. Thomas paper.

Helen's father hitched up the horse and drove into St. Thomas to meet the Sunday train. There he could obtain a copy of the Detroit newspaper, which did carry a section of Ontario events. Otherwise he would have had to wait until Monday morning to learn of his friend Mac's election.

Helen can't remember being allowed to leave the dinner table ahead of the adults. The affairs of the world were hashed over at dinner, rousing the keen interest of all ages and both sexes in what was going on.

Dear Doris: I wear my hair long and leave it straight but it is very noticeable how uneven the sides are. The more I cut them to straighten them, the more uneven they are.

Also how can I have the silky-smooth, soft hair? I wash it every second day, use conditioners and a creme rinse, but I feel it could be softer. — Hair.

Dear Hair: It is a tricky business trying to even up two sides, when the fair is on your own head. Something like trying to make the toast and the marmalade come out even.

Better get to a good hairdresser and have her even it up once and for all.

Only extremely oily hair needs washing every other day,but brushing can work a brush, bend forward and brush from the roots to the ends. Do 100 strokes every day.

If your diet is wrong, improve it. Get plenty of the protein which shapes up into hair — meat, eggs, cheese, milk, nuts. And cut down on the potato chips, greasy foods and sweets.

Dear Doris: You helped me once before, Doris. I was wondering if you could do the same again.

This time it is quite different. Not very long ago I had a nice figure; now I don't have one at all. All I have left is a good set of hips, no bust, and a pot belly.

I've done basic exercise and tummy exercise and that doesn't help. I am 30 years old and too young to be going downhill for no reason at all. I've asked the doctor for hormone shots to build up my breasts, but he refuses to do this. This past spring I weighed 125 pounds. Now I weigh 99 and I feel downright miserable.

Sometimes I feel older than my mother and she's in her 70's. — Old at Thirty

Dear Thirty: You are going to lose more than a good bust measurement if something is not done soon. You shouldn't be losing 26 pounds for no reason at all.

Either you have forgotten to tell me about some debilitating factor, like a long illness, a heartsick worry, a night-and-day job, or a home life full of tension. Whatever it is, you need concentrated concern; the kind of concern to be had from doctor, psychiatrist, social worker or diagnostic specialist.

Start with a complete physical examination and move on from there to your individual means of salvation before you have to be carried out in a box.

Little Touch of Elegance For the Simplest Dish

By ALICE DENHOFF

Some of the most delicious, gourmet-type foods are in reality simply everyday dishes done with a flair. Our old standby, mushrooms, have a way of dressing up pedestrian dishes.

At a recent buffet dinner, the main hot dish was a wonderful stew, yes, just a stew but one that rated raves and a request for the recipe. If you're interested, here it is:

BEEF STEW, FRENCH STYLE

3 pounds boneless chuck, cut into 2-inch cubes
2½ cups beef stock or consomme
¼ cup chopped onion
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
2 tablespoons olive or salad oil
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon ground thyme
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper
1 bay leaf, crumbled
2 medium carrots, shredded
¼ cup flour
¼ pound diced salt pork
¼ cup butter or margarine
½ pound fresh mushrooms or 1 (6-ounce) can sliced mushrooms
4 small whole onions

Place meat in Dutch oven or large saucepan with next 8 ingredients. Stir in carrots. Let stand 12 hours to marinate. Remove meat and drain, reserving marinade.

Coat meat with flour; set aside.

In a large skillet, fry salt pork to render fat; add butter. Add meat to hot fat; brown on all sides.

Bring marinade to boiling point; add meat. Cover and simmer 2 hours or until meat is almost tender.

Meanwhile, rinse, pat dry and slice fresh mushrooms, or drain canned mushrooms. Add to stew along with whole onions. Cover and simmer 15 minutes longer or until onions are tender. Serve hot. Serves 10.

CHINESE PORK AND MUSHROOMS

2 pounds boneless pork shoulder
4 tablespoons salad oil
¾ pound (3¼ cups) sliced mushrooms
2 cups sliced celery
1½ teaspoons salt
1 can (10½ ounces) chicken broth, heated
1 package (7 ounces) frozen snow peas
3 tablespoons cornstarch
2 tablespoons sherry
2½ teaspoons soy sauce
½ teaspoon sugar
½ teaspoon ground ginger
¼ teaspoon ground black pepper

Cut pork in slivers 1 inch wide by ¼ inch thick. Heat 2 tablespoons of the oil in a large skillet. Add pork and sauté until done; remove from skillet. Heat remaining 2 tablespoons oil in same skillet. Add mushrooms, celery and ½ teaspoon of the salt. Stir and sauté 2 to 3 minutes. Add broth and snow peas; cook, covered, 2 minutes longer. Blend 1-3 cup cold water with cornstarch, sherry, soy sauce, remaining teaspoon salt, sugar, ginger and black pepper. Stir into vegetable mixture. Add meat. Bring to boiling point; reduce heat and cook and stir until thickened, about 4 minutes. Serve with hot rice or Chinese noodles. Serves 4.

MUSHROOMS-STUFFED FLANK STEAK

1 (2 pound) flank steak
¼ cup soy sauce
¼ cup dry sherry,
2 tablespoons wine vinegar
½ teaspoon ground black pepper
½ pound fresh mushrooms or 1 can (6 to 8 ounces) sliced mushrooms
3 tablespoons butter of margarine
½ cup chopped onion
½ teaspoon salt

Place meat in a snug-fitting pan or plastic bag; set aside. Combine next 4 ingredients. Pour over meat and cover or seal. Refrigerate 2 hours. Meanwhile, rinse, pat dry and slice fresh mushrooms (makes about 2½ cups) or drain canned mushrooms. Heat butter in a medium skillet. Add mushrooms and onion; saute until mushrooms are golden brown. Season with salt. Remove meat from marinade, reserving marinade.

Place steak on a cutting board; spoon mushroom mixture lengthwise on meat. Roll, jelly-roll fashion starting at long side. Using a very sharp knife, cut meat into 2-inch thick slices. Roll each slice tightly and skewer with a toothpick. Arrange on broiler rack in pan. Brush with reserved marinade. Broil 6 to 8 inches from heat for 5 minutes on each side. Makes 4 to 6 portions of a delectable dish.

Happy Days Here Again

KINGSTON — I was a happy reunion for the Belleville Quintes as they skated off with a 4-1 win over the Kingston Aces last night.

In renewing acquaintances with their traditional OHA Senior A rivals, the Quintes also became re-acquainted with the win column after an absence of seven games.

Keeping with the theme of the evening centre George Godson re-joined the team after a one game absence and was re-united with familiar linemates Lorne O'Donnell and George Godson. The union proved to be a happy one as the unit had a hand in three Belleville goals.

The only untimely meeting of the night for Belleville occurred when Ralph Paine ran into his old Kingston "buddy" Charlie Convery. The pair collided at rnid ice, fore Convery to his knees.

Play continued until it dawned upon officials that the Rocky Kingston player was still down . . . blood staining the ice. Convery was led to the Kingston dressing room to receive stitches over one eye. He returned to finish the third period.

Plane's return to the bench was uneventful until the Belleville captain noticed a slight fog in vision. Coach Gener Poirier said, "he sat down and his vision started to get hazy. I think he got a slight concussion from the accidental collision, but it's nothing serious."

Action began rather slowly until the 13.22 mark of the first period when Godson fired home a rebound after Aces' Skip Wing had made initial stops on Ferguson and O'Donnell.

Less than five minutes later Plane made it 2-0 by catching the corner of the Kingston net. Godson and Ferguson drew assists.

Winger Perry Chittick upped the count to 3-0 in the middle period before rookie Mike Flanigan brought the home crowd to their feet with a hard drive past Steve Rexe. It was the fourth goal in two games for Flanigan.

Steve Rexe came up with his best stop among the 21 that he was called on to make when he smothered a hard Kingston drive late in the third period. Wing, at the other end of the ice, was tested 29 times by the Quintes.

With less than two minutes to play in the game Jim Ferguson clicked for his 16th goal of the season with Godson and O'Donnell helping on the play.

Belleville drew four of the game's five minor penalties.

Enthusiasm does not readily describe coach Poirier's reaction to his team's performance. "It was a real team effort. Everyone pulled together."

The win by Belleville lifted them into a fifth place tie with the Woodstock Royals, two points ahead of Kingston.

Friday the Quintes are at home for the first time Gail Hawrets, while Saturday night they have a return engagement with the Aces at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

On the Run

Steve Rexe takes the not-to-gentle approach as he chases Tom Carty from the crease in last night's OHA Senior A contest in Kingston. The Quintes had the Aces on the run for much of the night as they recorded a 4-1 victory for their first win in eight starts. The two-point effort lifted Belleville into a fifth place tie with the Woodstock Royals.

CJBQ's Golden Grater

Jack Devine, whose familiar gravel voice broadcasting the local and global sports scene, has graced Quinte area radio airwaves since he became the station's first announcer in 1946. At one time active in various sports, Jack's membership in national athletic associations has added a further dimension to CJBQ's sports scene. In his fledgling announcing days, the station's Sports Director reported local news and ran regular music programs, including a country and western show regularly featuring the Rhythm Ranch Riders. Today, he lunits his days at CJBQ to sports and the advertising department.

Devine Still Calls the Plays

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Radio station CJBQ's first announcer, whose gravel voice is still a familiar part of Quinte broadcasting, takes an outside interest in his profession.

Not only does Jack Devine take an active interest in the area sports scene . . . his national interests have long added to the CJBQ sports coverage.

He became involved in public relations while in the Air Force. This inevitably led to his being hired for the non-broadcasting Voice of the Bay of Quinte.

While final preparations were being made for the opening day of broadcasting, more than half a year lapsed. In the interim, Jack gained experience as a sportswriter and news journalist with The Ontario Intelligencer.

His experience as a lacrosse hockey and softball player stood him in good stead for his career as a sports reporter. Once on the station, these interests expanded.

In 1959, he broadcasted the locally famous world championship hockey playoffs from Bratislava and Prague in Czechoslovakia. The Belleville McFarlands, local Senior 'A' team at le time, emerged victorious while representing Canada. That year, they brought home global recognition, and Jack Devine called the plays as he saw them.

When he first started, local hockey and baseball was covered much more intensely than now. Teams such as the Belleville Bedmen, Belleville ANAP Veterans, the Belleville Glen Roys and the junior 'B' teams, Belleville Rockets and Belleville Bluehawks dominated the on ice scene.

It was during these early broadcasts that local hockey star, Dennis Holl, now playing with the Chicago Blackhawks NHL team, began to rise in the leagues.

Baseball reports centred around the Central Ontario Baseball League, following the action of such teams as the Belleville Kiwan'a Juniors and the Bata Shoemen.

As vice president in charge of junior hockey for all of Canada, as recently elected first vice president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association, and organizer of the Trent Valley Intermediate Hockey League, Jack has exemplified his motto for in-depth sports coverage — "In order to do something, you must get involved."

"Many people in radio, newspaper and television sports reporting don't get involved in sports, and this is too bad," he explains.

"You can get a better picture of what's going on. I'm not downgrading the educational aspect, but whether or not the real educational importance."

As a member of the Canadian Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association, of which he is a past president, Jack says he is not too impressed with modern day shop talks.

"There seems to be too much emphasis on that piece of paper.

"People have to be prepared to work at it and establish a good rapport with sources.

With the increase in power to 10,000 watts, CJBQ's sports scene may undergo a change.

"In a five minute sports cast, you only get a chance to use four minutes of material. You have to try and get a balance between local and national; that's why we fill in with music announcers broadcasting scores. The larger the field of listeners, the wider our scope in the same time period.

Hospital Takes Top Spot In Gas House Hockey Standings

The Hospital sewed up temporary-position of first place in the Gas House Hockey League last night with a 5-3 win over The Intelligencer. In other games Tuesday Wannamaker Esso upset Wilson Concrete 5-4, Mustangs edged the High School Teachers 4-3 and Rollins Lumber downed Stewart Warner 6-1.

Moe Hunter had a hand in all 5 of goals for the Hospital, counting three himself and assisting on markers by linemates Hylie Bryant and Sid Faulkner. For The Intell it was Fred Stickle, Ray Summers and Terry Hiddleston getting the goals.

Wannamakers got two goals from Ron Urch and singles by Alec Belch, Dave Fox and Doug MacDonald to upset the previously unbeaten Wilson squad. Vaughn Cunningham replied twice for the losers with Garry Thompson and Dave Millar each scoring one.

The Mustangs finally broke into the win column after close losses in their first two games. Larry Fritz was top lamplighter with two goals, while Pug Kellar and Tom Woodley completed the 4-3 win total. For the Teachers it was Allan Mott, Pat Assistine and Brian MacKenzie getting goals.

Cranmer Picks Winning Keys

TORONTO (CP) — Dave Cranmer, running back and receiver for Toronto Argonauts, knows the Argos' Grey Cup opposition better than any of his team-mates.

Cranmer played three seasons for Calgary Stampeders before coming to Toronto in a trade last spring. Now he goes against his former team-mates in Sunday's Grey Cup championship in Vancouver.

"There are two keys to beating Calgary," Cranmer said just before Argos started packing to leave today for Vancouver.

"I don't rank them in any particular order because you have to do both," he said. "You've got to locate the holes in their zone defense and you must control their front four."

DAVE CRANMER

Calgary, like most Western Football Conference teams, uses the zone defence. They divided backfield in two halves with one man assigned to cover each zone. Eastern Conference teams concentrate on man-to-man defences with each defensive backfielder assigned to cover one opposition receiver.

"Well," said Cranmer, "there have to be teams between those zones and there should be room for an area in front of the backs and behind the linebackers.

"Those are the places where you can complete passes.

"Let me put it this way: It'll be interesting to see what plays the coaches put in for this game because if we can find those gaps we'll be able to throw against Calgary."

"Most of the time," said Cranmer, "Harris will be in behind Helton.

"But you can't be sure. By the same token, you can't hope to nullify Dunlap (Harris) because he's got a sixth sense. He seems to smell the ball and gets to it with unbelievable speed.

"But if you can control those big tackles and ends, you've taken a good step in the right direction because Harris is not a big man. If a blocker can get to him, you can slow him down, at least."

Cranmer said he thinks the Argo defence, on the other hand, can present other problems for Calgary.

Fight May Be Stopped

LONDON (AP) — British boxing promoter Jack Solomons moved Tuesday to try to stop the scheduled world heavyweight title fight between Joe Frazier and Terry Daniels.

Solomons said he has a signed contract for Daniels to fight Britain's Danny McAlinden at a London's World Sporting Club.

The Frazier-Daniels fight has been scheduled for Jan. 15 in New Orleans. It would be Frazier's first defence of his title since he outpointed Muhammad Ali last March.

The promoter said: "I have requested Mr. Brennan to stop Daniels from boxing Frazier until he fulfils his contract to box Danny McAlinden."

Dick Geoba of Chicago substituted for Daniels on the Nov. 8 card and loss to McAlinden.

Knicks Magic Back

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

That old Knick magic's got the National Basketball Association in its spell.

"We're really playing well now," said Dave DeBusschere as the revitalized New York Knicks walloped Cincinnati Royals 125-110 Tuesday night in New York with a punch reminiscent of past seasons.

DeBusschere's generalization can be spelled "defence." That was the Knicks' formula during their 1969 championship season and that was their magic again Tuesday night.

"Defence creates offence," said New York coach Red Holzman, whose club won its fourth straight game and climbed over the .500 mark for a change after struggling out of the starting gate this year.

KAREEM JABBAR

In the nights other NBA games, Buffalo Braves topped Atlanta Hawks 107-97; Milwaukee Bucks turned back Detroit Pistons 113-104; Cleveland Cavaliers trimmed Baltimore Bullets 108-102; Chicago Bulls smashed Portland Trailblazers 130-94 and Phoenix Suns 128 beat Philadelphia 76ers 107.

New York's run-and-gun offence was powerfully evident right from the start as Dick Barnett led a first-quarter charge with 12 points, hitting his first four field goal tries.

"We're running better and we're handling the ball better," said Holzman, explaining the Knicks' reversal of early-season form that produced an unlikely 6-9 record, and, at one time, had them in last place in the Atlantic Division.

DeBusschere snared 20 rebounds and scored 17 points in but 28 minutes of play against the Royals.

Walt Frazier scored 23 points and passed to team-mates for four more Knicks' baskets.

Led by Barnett, Frazier and Jerry Lucas, the Knicks showed who was boss right away by shooting 66 per cent from the field and carving out a 65-39 halftime lead. It was all downhill for New York after that, despite a game—high 24 points by Cincinnati's Nate Archibald and 23 more by team-mate Jim Fox.

Walt Hazzard, traded last summer, came back to haunt Atlanta as he scored 30 points to lead Buffalo.

Kareem Jabbar scored 31 points to lead hot-shooting Milwaukee over Detroit.

The defending NBA champions, breaking a two-game spin, shot almost 60 per cent from the field.

John Johnson and rookie Austin Carr sparked a second-half scoring binge to lead Cleveland over Baltimore. Johnson wound up with 25 points to lead the Cavaliers.

Chet Walker scored 23 points to lead six Chicago players in double figures.

Sidney Wicks, Portland's ace rookie, scored 25 points for the losers and added a touch of comedy by putting the ball in the wrong basket on one play. Those two points went to Chicago.

Gee-Gees Move

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

University of Ottawa Gee-Gees moved into a second-place tie Tuesday night in the Eastern Division of the Ontario University Athletic Association hockey standings by defeating Queens Golden Gaels 7-4.

In another game, Waterloo Lutheran University Golden Hawks and University of Waterloo Warriors played to a 4-4 tie although the Warriors outshot the Hawks 45-36.

Harry Kumpf scored twice for Lutherans and Bob Bendus and Bill Hogan took singles. Jim Morris, Dennis Farwell, Bill Stinso and John Hall were the marksmen for the Warriors, who led 1-0 after the first period and 3-2 after the second.

At Ottawa, Bob Aube scored three goals for the home team and brother Bert one. Pierre Chartier, Dan Farant and Steve Aubrey added a goal each. Bruce Cameron scored twice for Queens while singles went to Stan Galt and Morris Molt.

Tonight, Guelph plays at York in Toronto.

Patterson Gets KO

The 36-year-old Patterson, who weighed 195 pounds, also knocked Harris down for an eight-count with the same combination in the fourth round.

It was the sixth straight victory for Patterson this year and the 29th knock-out in his 61-fight career.

Harris, 28, of Hyattsville, Md., is now 8-13-1.

Harris, who weighed 218½ pounds, entertained the crowd with some fancy footwork and loud war whoops but never solidly hit the former champion.

Standing calmly in front of a crowd of reporters in a new blue suit, a fragment of an unlit cigar in his hand, Murtaugh quietly announced:

The 54-year-old Irishman said he made up his mind about 10 days ago while returning from a vacation in Puerto Rico. But his decision was not completely surprising.

"He hinted pretty strongly near the end of the season that he wouldn't return if he didn't feel better," said third base coach Frank Oceak.

The Pirates became world champions this year after defeating Baltimore Orioles, in a dramatic seven-game set, with Pittsburgh in the role of underdog.

Last year, the Pirates won the divisional title, then lost three straight games to Cincinnati Reds for the National League pennant.

Despite that loss, Murtaugh was named Manager of the Year for the third time.

In between series wins, Murtaugh has been in and out of managing due to a heart problem.

And health was the major factor for stepping aside again, he admitted.

"But I also knew a decision had to be made some time to step down and I felt it best be now."

Virdon received a one-year contract and said he was pleased.

"I don't think I'd want to take the money the second year if I didn't do well the first," said Virdon, who played for Pittsburgh from 1956 to 1965.

Grey Cup in Ottawa?

OTTAWA (CP) — A bid by Ottawa for the 1973 Grey Cup football game will be made to the Canadian Football League Friday in Vancouver.

Mayor Kenneth Fogarty, in a television interview, said Tuesday night "we feel the time has come for Ottawa again to be chosen as the site of a Grey Cup game."

He noted that the city had proved it was capable of holding the annual championship spectacle in 1967, "and we've been looking at 1973 now for about two years."

Mayor Fogarty said the city would be promising the CFL to have artificial turf in Lansdowne Park in time for a 1973 game and probably would promise to expand seating, with temporary facilities, by about 6,000 seats to 33,000-plus.

WHA Plans European Move

ST. CATHARINES (CP) — The WHA is involved with the International Hockey Association "in to expand the league in Europe," Ben Hunter, WHA executive director, said Tuesday.

"In fact, I think we have a better chance than the National Hockey League," Hunter, also owner-manager of Edmonton Oil Kings of the Western Canada Hockey League, told a B'nai B'rith sports dinner.

"It seems to be a marvellous asset that it appears as if Mr. Danny Ahearne, who runs international hockey, doesn't like the NHL much.

"Europe is the most exciting hockey market of all. We're highly interested in discussing the possibilities of expansion to Europe as that we could have a true world championship."

But Hunter did not say how long it would be before the league would become truly international.

Williams Top National Rookie

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Williams, Atlanta Braves' slugging catcher, was named National League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America today.

Williams, who walloped 33 homers last season, received 18 of the 24 votes cast by two writers from each league city, beating out Philadelphia's Willie Montanez by a wide margin. Montanez, who had 30 homers, received the other six votes.

Williams, 23, came up to the Braves as a third baseman-outfielder and was converted to a catcher during the season. He batted .260 and drove in 87 runs. Montanez, who came to the Phillies as part of the settlement from St. Louis Cardinals when Curt Flood failed to report, drove in 99 runs and batted .253. He was the early favorite for rookie honors and was named to the all-star team at the all-star break in July.

But Williams blossomed in the final two months of his 33 homers were the fifth-best total in the National League. He is only the second catcher to ever win the National League rookie award. The other was Johnny Bench of Cincinnati Reds in 1968.

Williams is the first Atlanta player to win the rookie award and the third Brave in the 32-year history of the award. The others were Alvin Dark in 1948 and Sam Jethroe in 1950—both when the team was still in Boston.

Hill Drops Suit

NEW YORK (AP) — Dave Hill, controversial member of golf's professional tour, has dropped his $3 - million suit against the Professional Golfers Association and gained a reduction in the length of his probation.

Settlement of the case was announced Tuesday in a joint statement by Hill and the PGA.

No details of the settlement were given other than the fact that Hill had withdrawn his suit and his period of probation was cut back from May 21, 1972 to Dec. 31, 1971.

Thus he will be able to start the winter tour in January with a clean slate.

Hill, fined numerous times for infractions, filed his $3-million suit in Memphis this year after he had been assessed $500 for conduct unbecoming a professional.

Goalie Rotation Puts North Stars First

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A year ago Minnesota North Stars were rotating three goaltenders about as fast as a major league baseball team rotates its starting pitchers, without much success.

Now there are two, and the North Stars did the unexpected Tuesday night, taking first place in the National Hockey League's West Division with a 2-1 win over Vancouver Canucks.

And it was goaltending that put them there with lanky Cesare Maniago turning aside 36 shots to move the Stars one point ahead of Chicago Black Hawks.

Tonight, the Black Hawks, who have played one less game than Minnesota, can reclaim top spot with a victory on home ice over Montreal Canadiens. Chicago has yet to lose at home in nine games this year.

Elsewhere, Toronto Maple Leafs are at Pittsburgh Penguins, St. Louis visits New York Rangers, Boston Bruins play the Flyers at Philadelphia, California Golden Seals entertain Detroit Red Wings and Buffalo Sabres are at Los Angeles.

CESARE MANIAGO

Last year the North Stars were hard-pressed to hold third in the West as coach Jack Gordon worked his three netminders—rookie Gilles Gilbert and veterans Maniago and Gump Worsley—with about as much precision as an army drill sergeant assembling rifles.

It was a year of experiment for the new coach as he attempted to mould a tighter defensive unit by concentrating his efforts on the blueline and in goal.

But this year he settled on a two-goalie system, farming the inexperienced Gilbert out. The Stars, who came on strong late in the 1970-71 season in front of Maniago and Worsley, continue to prosper.

They rank second only to Chicago's Tony Esposito and Gary Smith in allowing the fewest goals and while most of the experts looked for Minnesota to finish second in the West this year, few really expected they'd be in first at this late stage.

LORNE WORSLEY

It was Maniago's turn to spark Tuesday night, although he needed the efforts of another veteran, Dean Prentice, and winger Bill Goldsworthy to scrape through against the surprisingly aggressive Canucks.

Dave Balon, acquired in a recent trade with New York, started Vancouver ahead with his first goal as a Canuck at 12:52 of the opening period.

Another former Ranger, Jack Egers, appears to have found his range at St. Louis. The young Sudbury native triggered two goals, giving him four in five games with the Blues since moving to St. Louis in a seven-player trade between the two clubs Nov. 15.

Monumental Decision For Kirkland Lake

KIRKLAND LAKE (CP) — A monument dedicated to 35 National Hockey League players who have claimed this Northern Ontario mining community as their birthplace or residence will be unveiled at a public ceremony Dec. 7.

The monument will be a seven-ton ingot of stainless steel set on a base of taconite, the iron-bearing rock mined nearby. Individual bronze plaques will carry the names of all Kirkland Lake residents who have played in the NHL dating back to 1927 and including 18 who are still active in the league.

Jones and Laughlin Steel Corporation of Pittsburgh, former owner of the nearby Adams Mine, announced Tuesday it is erecting the monument in a newly-developed municipal park "as a gesture of appreciation to the people of Kirkland Lake for the spirit of community partnership which made possible the successful development and operation of the mine."

Earlier this year the Adams Mine was sold to Dofasco, a Canadian steel company.

The list of plaques contains such names as Ralph Backstrom, currently with Los Angeles Kings; Bill Durnan, the former goaltending great with Montreal Canadiens; Ted Lindsay, the former hard-rock winger with Detroit Red Wings; the Plager brothers—Barclay, Bob and Billy—of the current St. Louis Blues defence corps; and Tom Webster, now the subject of a dispute between California Golden Seals and Detroit.

Arlington Mayor Tommy Vandergriff and club owner Bob Short made the dual announcement at a luncheon viewed as a "birthday party" of sorts for the former Washington Senators.

Corner Backs Special Breed

TORONTO (CP) — Dick Thornton and Jim Duncan have one thing in common. They think corner backs in football are extra special athletes.

Thornton is prejudiced. He and Dave Rainey fill the job for Toronto Argonauts, Eastern Football Conference champions. Thornton's flair for theatrics at that position has annoyed some traditionalists.

Duncan is an interested party in that he coaches Calgary Stampeders of the WFC. He commends Thornton's eccentricities as essential to Toronto's success.

The two teams oppose one another in the Grey Cup national final at Vancouver next Sunday.

Eastern coaches observed often this season that Thornton and Rainey could be worked over by a passing quarterback.

If Duncan has the same idea, he's keeping mum on the subject. The Stampeders have an excellent passing quarterback in Jerry Keeling.

"Argos like to blitz," Duncan noted this week. "When you're blitzing your linebackers, you're taking a lot away from the cornerbacks.

"That's the toughest position in football to play. They have to be prepared for pass and run coverage. It takes a tremendous athlete to play cornerback."

Argo assistant coach Frank (Blackie) Johnston agrees, adding that it's perhaps an even more difficult role than the quarterback's.

"Cornerbacks have to have fantastic mental dispositions. ... Often, too, they get blamed for something when it was some other guy's fault."

Swedish Driver Increases Lead

HARROGATE, England (AP) — Swedish Champion Stig Blomqvist, his Saab virtually unmarked after 2,000 miles of punishing motoring, steadily increased his lead today as battered survivors in the toughest auto rally headed toward the finish.

After the final night's dash through mountainous Wales in freezing temperatures Blomqvist was nearly four minutes ahead of his nearest rival in the 2,500-mile British Auto Rally.

Bjorn Waldegaard of Sweden was second in a Porsche with yet another Swede, Carl Orrenius, third in a Saab.

Scandinavians swept the top nine places after Tuesday night's dash through rugged high-speed sections. The Swedish Saabs looked set for the manufacturers team prize with first, third and sixth.

Three Italian Lancias, headed by former winner Sifno Lampinen of Finland, were lying eighth, ninth and tenth.

Only 110 of the 237 cars which started the rally here Saturday were still running today. These will head back to Harrogate today where the first cars are due to finish at approximately 1 p.m. EST.

Supreme Court Goes to Movies

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada went to the movies Tuesday to watch the running of the eighth race of a May, 1965, racing card at Exhibition Park in Vancouver.

During the race, jockey George Miller was thrown from his mount and suffered a broken neck. As a result, he has been in the use of his arms and legs.

Mr. Miller is claiming unspecified damages from the British Columbia Jockey Club Eye In the Sky, a company which operated the photo-finish machinery at the track.

Mr. Miller says the bright lights of the photo-finish caused the accident and amounted to negligence on the part. The race was run off near dusk.

Defence lawyers will present their arguments in court today.

Opening for New Dallas Stadium Thursday

DALLAS (AP) — It should be something like opening night at the Met in the new $25 million Texas Stadium in suburban Irving on U.S. Thanksgiving Day Thursday.

The double row of million aire and company suites should see a classic contest of one-upmanship as stoutly fought as any in the famed Diamond Horseshoe. There also will be National Football League action.

One hundred and seventy private suites encircle the 65-acre stadium area, where Dallas Cowboys will play Los Angeles Rams on 81,000 square feet of synthetic turf below. Ranged on two levels, they look like the promenade decks of some gleaming ocean liner.

The suites are approached along soft-lighted corridors with wall-to-wall carpeting, which in turn are reached by floor-to-floor escalators from specially reserved parking places that cut walking to a minimum.

Just to get into this exclusive club means you have to invest $50,000 in a bond to help build the place. The $50,000 guarantees you your private box so you won't have to sit among the other 65,000 fans crowding the stadium, but it doesn't mean you get tickets for the game. However, you can buy 12 of them for the knockdown price of $10 a throw plus a 12th ticket if you need one for a servant to help hold the place. The tickets, plus parking fees for your three cars, can easily set you back another $1,000, or so each season. College games and other stadium events would, of course, be extra.

When you've got your box and your tickets, there still isn't a chair to sit on until you've fitted the box to suit your taste. That, too, can cost plenty, according to your taste.

But, in the end, you have your own piece of real estate inside the stadium for 35 years or as long as the Cowboys play there. Of course, the box, along with the bond, can be legally sold or transferred if you ever tire of football.

Fourteen are specially leased on a three-year option for he annual fee of $15,000. This includes one minute of commercial time on the stadium's computer-controlled scoreboard during time-outs or breaks in the game.

CJBQ RADIO - 800 CELEBRATES 25th ANNIVERSARY

CJBQ's 25-Year Club at It Still

When CJBQ began broadcasting in 1946, it had 10 staff members. This year, the station recognized their five employees who remain. Although a sales representative, Hammie MacDonald, left, can still deliver livery melodies as he did years ago, Jack "Buck" Buchanan, second from left, put the station on the air. First announcer hired by the station, Jack Devine, far right, combined his advertising duties with his well-known sports broadcasts. Eugene Lang, centre, a well-known classical music expert, and Jimmy Corradi, veteran pianist joined the station part-time. Eugene conducts late Saturday and Sunday night classical music programs as well as FM. Jimmy, absent, is a regular Sunday morning performer on Etchings in Black and White.

Quarter-century of Service Is Marked by Boost in Power

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

At 11:45 a.m. Thursday, Ross Benway, Reeve of Hillier Township in Prince Edward County, and Allan Anderson warden for Prince Edward county, will join top CJBQ personnel at the Bridge Street station to help launch the station's new 10,000 watt voice.

Tomorrow also marks the 25th anniversary of the Voice of the Bay of Quinte.

While the power boost will make little difference to listeners now receiving a strong signal, listeners in the south-eastern portions of Prince Edward County, west of Trenton and those north of Highway 14 Park, will have no trouble picking up the stronger voice of CJBQ.

This is the third power boost for the station. The major step has been in the planning stages for years. On March 14, 1961, power was boosted from 250 watts to its present 1,000. The transmitter site on Foxboro Road, west of Highway 14, was moved to Prince Edward County.

One of the most important feaures in the new system is the automated transmitter system. "This link is probably the major modification to the setup," station manager Frank Murray noted. "Through the transmitter link we can beam the program from the downtown studios to the transmitting site without use of the telephone line. At the same time, we can ship remote control information to the transmitting site.

Jack "Buck" Buchanan, the station's chief engineer, who put the station on the air in 1946, drew attention to 39 remote control operations that can be shipped by the studio-based link in Belleville. Control the status of the new equipment.

Safety valves have been carefully built into the new system by Hillier Township. If a fault occurs, the machinery has been programmed to switch to a standby circuit. If these automatic functions fail, the switchover can be handled manually in the downtown Belleville studio.

Mr. Buchanan said "men will still have to go to the site to repair any damaged components, but the listeners will not suffer through it." Much of the equipment at the old site will be hooked into the new system as a standby unit.

Over the past few months, engineers Buchanan and Doug Vanderwater have been working furiously with engineers from Hoyles, Niblock and Associates, foremost broadcast consultant firm in Canada, to establish the broadcasting patterns which plan areas in which the CJBQ signal will be received. To protect neighboring stations and guarantee optimum range, it took engineers almost two months to plan this pattern.

The station manager referring to "tremendous loyalty of listeners over the years" said their backing prompted the decision to increase the coverage area.

"This acceptance by the listeners encouraged us to provide the most comprehensive service possible. We've tried during the years to reflect every aspect of community life in our programming."

A 12-year veteran of the station, Mr. Murray lauded his "loyal and hard-working staff" for their highly dedicated, professional approach to broadcasting.

"Down through the years, we've had great acceptance from the community. And all these factors combined have made it possible for CJBQ to do rather exciting things."

Mr. Murray recalled the 1959 World Championship hockey broadcasts by Jack Devine in Czechoslovakia, his own coverage of the funeral of Sir Winston Churchill in London, England in 1965; reporting from Ireland, the historic trip of the late U. S. president, John F. Kennedy, when he visited his birthplace there; covering last years flood disaster in East Pakistan; Trenton manager Ted Snider's historic flights with the Canadian Air Force; and local events such as the International Plowing Match in the early 1960s, visits to Belleville by such dignitaries as Princess Elizabeth (now Queen Elizabeth II), Richard M. Nixon in his pre-president days, and performances of local musicians and actors as well as a broadcast by the NORAD band.

CJBQ is one of the few Canadian stations to receive the national Station of the Year Award in 1964 and 1966. The station was recognized for its continuing educational service . . . students both local and from around the world have had a chance to learn broadcasting methods at the station.

Advertising and community effort recognition has also been added to the station's collection of awards and trophies.

"I am confident, with our greatly improved technical facilities, that we are now able to provide even more comprehensive radio programming service for not only the Quinte district, but also for Hastings, Haliburton, Lennox and Addington and the southern part of Prince Edward County."

Mr. Murray, whose own interests in the community . . . he is chairman of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce . . . are well known, says the station is not so smug as to think their service can't stand improvement.

"In fact, we are always looking for new ideas," he said.

"I think I speak for our entire staff when I say that with our bond in pin or, we will continue to maintain our rigid standards of excellence."

Rural Listeners Favorites With City Boy Phil Flagler

Sharp at 12.30 p.m. every day, a man who admits he never spent a day on a farm, but who now feels equally at home discussing crop trends or advertising campaigns, takes over Quinte airwaves.

"I guess I got involved in the show because I was doing the 12 to 2 p.m. time slot at the time," Phil recalls.

"Since I was on, I got detailed to do it."

But from simply being a job, the farm show rapidly became Phil's first love. "I enjoyed going out and around the country. You meet a hell of a lot of people and this gives you an idea of what's going on," he said, reflecting on his 24½ years with CJBQ.

Back in those original days of Quinte area broadcasting, the farmer provided an invaluable source of information and anecdotes. With microphone in hand, and accompanied by CJBQ veteran engineer Jack 'Buck' Buchanan, Phil visited scores of farms in and around the Belleville area.

"The Meet Your Neighbour series was so successful, farmers still talk about it after 23 years," the farm show director commented.

But Phil was not always concerned with the rural setting, which now involves talking with farmers and agricultural representatives in surrounding counties.

When he graduated from the Lorne Green Academy of Radio Arts in 1947, the Belleville native wanted to advance through the many stages of radio.

Phil says he didn't have any intention of sticking in one particular place for any set time. He began with Belleville radio in April of 1947 as record librarian. It took him almost four months to sit down in front of a microphone and introduce the voice that has become famous in this area.

His first break came with the old Lean Back and Listen program . . . a scripted musical selection series. Following this, one of the station's most famous home grown series — Humphrey's House, with Bill Bankier and Phil — was developed.

This program of platter and chatter soon acquainted listeners with the smooth and chatty style that has become known widely in both broadcast and public speaking fields.

In 1953, he became program director following his return to Belleville after his term as manager of the Trenton studios from their origin in 1950. It was then Trenton that Phil became exposed to radio advertising.

While in the branch station, he produced musical programs and his farm show and he sold advertising for CJBQ as well.

"You're always out and meeting people. That's the thing about sales," he says.

But it's not all work for the station's newly - appointed Sales Manager. The chance to meet with listeners and farming friends as well as volunteering for public service, has provided him with a harvest of memories.

Since the city had purchased a new aerial ladder fire truck, organizers felt full use of the vehicle was in order.

Santa would be lowered to the ground from a high factory roof . . . "Getting on to that roof was a trick," Phil chuckled during recollections.

"There I was, standing at the top of the ladder in my Santa Claus suit, when the stage below collapsed."

Trenton Studio on the Air Since 1950

In July of 1950, owners of CJBQ decided the growing community of Trenton, together with Air Force personnel at the then Air Transport Command base, would be better served by separate studios.

In quarters above the old Trent Theatre, CJBQ Trenton spread its fledgling wings under the command of Phil Flagler, who was then just brunching out into sales of advertising.

Anchor man in Trenton until 1954, Phil was replaced by Ted Snider, an Air Force veteran and graduate of the University of Toronto.

The Smithfield native's family has a musical background, and Ted was no slouch in showing his own talents. While studying at U of T, he was playing trumpet with various travelling bands.

"I guess I got bitten by the radio bug when Lorne Greene, Victor Moore and Lister Sinclair were guest lecturing at the university," CJBQ's Trenton manager recalls.

After graduation, he did some theatre, sometimes working with friend George McCowan, who is now a freelance TV producer.

"I wanted something associated with music. Music is my life," he says.

Northern Broadcasting outlet CKWS in Kingston offered Ted his first radio job, which he kept from 1952 until 1954.

Although there are many veteran music programmers at CJBQ, Ted has maintained the only regular programming of the Big Band Sound and Jazz music so much a part of the 1930s, 40s and 50s.

His personal interest in music has led to formation of his own band . . . The Trenton Citizen's Band of up to 60 musicians. Several nights each week, Ted manages to teach night classes. "I started filling in five years ago and I'm still at it," he chuckled, during a brief lull in his daily joint program with CJBQ Program Manager Lee Jourard.

Ted claims "the big band sound is coming back; kids are interested in it as something new," and backs up this statement with references to modern instrumental orchestras such as Chicago (and special instrumentally backed arrangements produced by Andre Previn and the Carpenters . . . both of which he shows much admiration for.

Trenton's manager enjoys getting out of studios now above Dundas Street's Bank of Nova Scotia to meet customers with whom he discusses advertising, and with people who enjoy good music. "I would like to hear from listeners, whether they have a complaint or a pat on the back."

Because of good rapport with Air Transport Command — now CFB Trenton — Ted became a worldwide reporter for CJBQ. Over the years, broadcasts were brought home from Germany, Iceland, Scotland, France and England, to name a few. Local air crews were interviewed, with special series programmed from the station.

Growth of the station also marked expansion of its sister outlet 11 miles west of the chief studios. Several years ago, a secretary cum advertising writer was hired. In 1967, a Trenton newsman was added to the team.

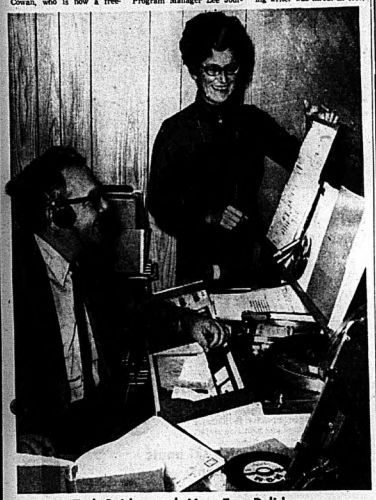
Mrs. Palidwar joined CJBQ in 1966, after working a brief period with the department of agriculture. An English immigrant in 1945, she saw wartime service with the Air Ministry in England.

Her three children are grown up and out of school now, and the station provides an outlet which she really enjoys.

Originally a summer replacement, Mrs. Palidwar returned to take on non-microphone work. Unlike most people who enter radio, she has no aspirations whatsoever, to doing any air work.



Trenton's office services between 40 and 50 regular advertising customers as well as 150 casuals. All must be contacted regularly and their ads updated and rewritten. As well, she cares for Pet Clinic, Coming Events and the Stork Club Reports.

Bob Rowbotham came to Trenton via the weekly Perth Courier newspaper in 1969.

A graduate of Algonquin College's journalism course in Ottawa, Bob feels right at home reporting news from areas west of Trenton, Northwest to Belleville and surrounding areas.

"I guess I like reporting better than broadcasting," he admits.

Four Lands Sell Arms

STOCKHOLM (AP) — Four countries—the United States, the Soviet Union, Britain and France—have supplied more than 90 per cent of the major arms to the third world countries "where all wars have been fought in the last 25 years," the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute reported today.

"The United States is the largest supplier of military equipment in the world, accounting for nearly half the world's total trade in weapons," said the 219-page report. "Since 1950, well over a third of the total major weapons acquired by third world countries has come directly from the United States."

The institute said the export of major weapons—aircraft, naval vessels, armored vehicles and missiles—to the 91 third world countries escalated seven-fold between 1950 and 1970. It said by 1970 this arms trade amounted to more than $1.5 billion a year.

The Soviets entered the arms trade late, the study reported. By the end of the 1950s, six countries had entered into arms deals with Moscow. By the end of the 1960s they were 29 more. Today the Soviet Union is the world's second largest arms supplier.

"In the last 20 years, the Soviet Union has supplied various developing countries, both socialist and nonaligned, with a little over 200 MiG-15s, about 400 MiG-17s, nearly 200 MiG-19s and about 800 MiG-21s," the institute said.

Britain and France acount for more than 20 per cent of these arms deliveries: in 1969, $200 million worth from Britain and $100 million worth from the French.

Questions And Answers

By The Ontario Motor League

QUESTION: How many miles over the speed limit are you allowed before receiving a speed ticket?

ANSWER: None. In any restricted zone it is illegal to speed over the limit, even if there are several cars doing it at the same time.

QUESTION: I am leaving for Florida in December and expect to stay all winter. My driver's licence expires in February. Is it possible to get my licence before I go.

ANSWER: No problem here if you write, quoting your licence number to Department of Transport and Communications, Driver Licencing Branch, Attention: Mr. C. Wild, Ferguson Block, Parliament Buildings, Toronto 182, Ontario.

The department provides this service six months prior to the expiry date. Be sure and tell them when you are leaving so they can hurry it up.

Turn signals are both overlooked and misused. Ontario's traffic laws are quite specific in their requirement for any change in direction to be indicated by the driver of a motor vehicle, yet a few hours driving on Ontario roads would cause any visitor to the province to doubt it.

Perhaps part of the problem is that many drivers are ignorant of what constitutes a change of direction. It does, in fact, mean any deviation from the car's former path. A change of lane is very much a change of direction. Thus, turn signals must be used to switch from one lane to another. A turn signal set in operation does not in itself allow the driver to move in the direction indicated by the signal. Some drivers use them as a sort of magic wand which will instantly clear the way for them to switch lanes or to make a turn. Turn signals merely warn other drivers that you will change direction when it is completely safe to do so. The onus is on you, as the driver who is changing direction, to ensure that it is safe to carry out the intended manoeuvre. It is not up to the motorists to carry out evasive measures to make it safe for you. Many drivers omit using their signals when pulling out into a gap ahead of them. This is dangerous, even though there is no car behind. The driver of the car ahead could be watching your directional signals. If he sees no signal from your car he might make a turn or lane change himself, also without warning, just as you are beginning to pass him.

Don't leave your left hand turn signal flashing when you are parked at the side of the road. It can be distracting to other motorists who might be concentrating on your car to see if you are going to pull away from the curb. As a result, they might miss some traffic problem in another direction.

If you are not sure when it is legally necessary to use turn signals go to your nearest Ontario Department of Transport office and get a copy of The Driver's Handbook. It could be a real lifesaver.

Madoc

The Kiwanis Clubs of Madoc and Tweed are jointly sponsoring the Eastern Ontario Concert Orchestra to be held here early in December. Conductor for the program will be Steven Chorna and guest artist for the evening is Gwen Kingston.

The Madoc village council met on Monday evening with two officials of the OWRC and the consulting engineer to discuss the progress of the lagoon construction. Owing to inclement weather, it has been impossible to complete the lagoon in the specified time. Construction has now stopped until more favorable weather conditions prevail. It is hoped to have one cell completed and in operation by June 30, 1972.

Grant Ketcheson of Madoc Township, who spent five months in Great Britain on a Nuffield Scholarship this year, was guest speaker at the annual banquet of the Hastings County Federation of Agriculture. The interesting and informative presentation took place in the Huntingdon Township Hall at Ivanhoe on Saturday night, November 20.

Four way stop signs have been installed on the corners of Durham Front) and St. Lawrence Streets this week. A number of area residents are having a problem remembering to stop, but strangers, of course, are having no problem with the new regulations now in effect.

Nineteen Cities

Post Office to Take Over Mail Contracts

OTTAWA (CP) — The post office will take over mail delivery service now handled by private contractors in 19 cities and Postmaster-General Jean-Pierre Cote said all employees will be offered post office jobs.

He added after the Commons announcement Tuesday that the employees will be "in exactly the same position" as Montreal's "Lapalme workers" if they do not accept the offer.

But he said unions are co-operating with the post office in the change-over. Negotiations with labor had begun during the summer and ended last week, permitting the announcement.

Mr. Cote told the House the post office will need the men and equipment used by the private contractors in mail delivery. The plan was to integrate major urban services to "establish mail transportation in these centres whose outlawed operation is essential to the maintenance of a national postal network."

The takeover of postal delivery in Montreal last year from G. Lapalme Inc. caused a labor dispute with the firm's 150 employees that still has not been resolved.

The government refused the workers' request to take their seniority and membership in the Confederation of National Trade Unions into the public service.

Mr. Cote said that of the 19 cities, four—Montreal, Quebec City, Windsor and part of Vancouver—are already wholly or partially integrated.

He said the plan will be completed by the end of 1972 and will include 42 communities, creating satellite post offices adjacent to metropolitan centres.

Discussions with the contractors were starting immediately.

The cities were chosen because they each account for one per cent or more of the national total of originating first class mail, or because they account for 10 per cent or more of the total of their region's original mailing volume, Mr. Cote said.

The 19 include: London, Metro Toronto, Hamilton, Windsor, Kitchener-Waterloo and Ottawa-Hull.

Judge to Wait

SUDBURY (CP) — District court Judge George Collins said Tuesday he will not comment on criticism of his remarks about Indians Nov. 16 for at least another week until he sees a transcript of what he said in court about them.

He said at one point there are many stupid Indians and he also criticized Indians for passing up available jobs.

His criticisms have been condemned by Indian groups, the district Indian affairs representative in Sudbury and the Ontario Federation of Labor.

Graduates Warned About Jobs

KINGSTON (CP) — A university placement officer said Tuesday that graduates will have to work harder than their predecessors to find jobs next spring.

David Wroe, director of career planning and placement at Queen's University, said fewer representatives of government and industry are visiting campuses in search of potential recruits than in past years.

"But it would be a mistake to link the number of campus interviews with the number of job opportunities," said Mr. Wroe.

He said a saving by the association indicates a 40-per-cent drop in campus recruiting during the current academic year from 1970-71 and that many employers are inviting students to apply directly to them for interviews. As a result, a graduate will have to go after the job he wants.

"A few years ago it was not impossible for the bright student to have as many as 40 interviews on his campus and then take his pick of the offers he received. This is no longer the case."

May Be Charge For Information

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — Subscribers to Canada official said Tuesday customers may some day be charged for directory assistance from operators when numbers are listed in the telephone directory.

H. C. Potter, Bell's London district manager, said in an interview "the company is looking at it."

He said Bell receives several calls a second for directory assistance. "About 70 to 80 per cent of these are for numbers already in the directory."

Bell pays about $16 million to produce telephone directories and $18 million to provide directory assistance.

Tax Debate Taxes Tempers

House Debates Do Little But Produce Boredom and Boordom

OTTAWA (CP) — Tedium and displays of ill-humor are about the only things MPs and the government are getting out of Commons debates these days, and Tuesday offered little relief.

The House completed its 39th day of debate on the tax bill, without passing one of its 333 clauses and subclauses. That has been the pattern for two weeks, and party whips are hard put to maintain the required 20-member quorum.

The most building for several unproductive weeks, burst out early Tuesday in a testy question-period exchange about leaks of secret cabinet documents, when Prime Minister Trudeau suggested an opposition heckler had been drinking.

He then followed the Speaker's instruction to withdraw the remark, which had been directed at Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton-The Sydneys).

Liberals sat silent in the later instalment of the tax debate as Conservatives and New Democrats disputed whether provisions on taxing resource industries would retard resource development, or distort the economy by providing the industries with too much aid.

Erik Nielsen (PC—Yukon), Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin and other Conservatives predicted the tax concessions in the bill would not be adequate to stimulate Canadian investment in mining and oil development, especially if the government planned to restrict the flow of U.S. capital.

But Max Saltsman (Waterloo), Tom Barnett (Comox-Alberni), David Orlikow, (Winnipeg North) and fellow New Democrats argued that resource industries already are getting excessive tax concessions with little benefit in employment.

They said resource industries should be taxed like other industries, and urged encouragement of manufacturing sectors which would generate more jobs.

Social Credit Leader Real Caouette used the debate to make a plea for tax cuts for individuals through Bank of Canada credits.

The slow progress on the big tax bill, which has been debated since September, threatens the Christmas holiday of MPs.

Only 75 of the 333 items in the bill have been approved. Most of the major and most contentious issues have been debated without resolution, which means they all have to come up again for discussion.

The government already has offered 131 amendments—some of which altered legislative items twice—but some opposition members and a few Liberal backbenchers remain dissatisfied.

After this week, party House leaders are to map out future programs. But failure to agree on quick passage or rebellion in the ranks would destroy the government target of completing work by the end of this year.

That, said one government spokesman, could mean an abbreviated Christmas adjournment.

Admits Interest Conflict

TORONTO (CP) — Ald. Ben Grys conceded Tuesday that he was indirectly involved in a conflict of interest but said he will not resign his seat on Toronto city council.

He made the announcement in a statement in which he also said he is abandoning court proceedings against two fellow-aldermen.

The controversy began last June when Ald. John Sewell demanded that Mr. Grys resign, alleging that he had failed to disclose that his wife held $135,000 in mortgages on two properties she sold to developers when a project involving the properties came before two council committees.

Mr. Sewell and Ald. Karl Jaffary unsuccessfully sought a judicial inquiry. Mr. Grys later named them as defendants in an application to Ontario Supreme Court for a ruling on the issue.

In announcing withdrawal of the action Tuesday, Mr. Grys said that as the case developed, "it became clear to me that I was wrong to say that my wife and I were so separate in our affairs that I could assert that I had no indirect pecuniary interest in my wife's activities."

His statement added that he was ending the court case "by admitting that I had an indirect pecuniary interest . . . and that I should have withdrawn from participation in the committee meetings . . ."

Mr. Grys said he has no "legal or moral" obligation to resign his council seat.

Churches Urged to Lead Fight for Guaranteed Income

KITCHENER (CP) — An official of the Canadian Council of Churches called on members Tuesday to take the lead in striving for a guaranteed minimum income in Canada.

Rev. Floyd Honey, secretary of the council's central committee, told the committee's annual meeting:

"Maybe we should demonstrate in the streets. Whatever we do, let us make no mistake about it, it is going to cost money if we are going to take this seriously as an objective."

Mr. Honey suggested that if a public protest the size of the one mounted against the recent nuclear blast on Amchitka Island was held in support of the guaranteed income the chances of getting it would be better.

"Maybe we should mount a nation-wide church sign-in for a guaranteed minimum income," he said.

Mr. Honey also criticized the Senate committee report on poverty, saying it did not deal with conditions that create poverty.

Instead, he said, the report deals "only with measures to relieve the worst misery of those who suffer from it most acutely."

He called on delegates to work so that the church "can be tutored into an effective lobby for the poor instead of a chaplaincy service for the comfortable."

Disputing arguments that the church should not become involved in such issues as the Amchitka nuclear blast, Mr. Honey said:

"When an administration plays Russian roulette with the earth's crust in an area of known geological weakness and turns a deaf ear to the protests of the people most likely to be affected, this is surely a moral issue."

For the first time in the history of the council, representatives of the National Indian Brotherhood were present, as well as three members of the National Black Coalition of Canada.

The three-day conference ends Thursday.

Last Saturday a number of the dart enthusiasts journeyed to Trenton CFB Junior Ranks Mess where an Astra tournament was being held and made an excellent showing. Those players from the club who were winners were team captain Bill Salter, who won the singles trophy and then teamed up with Jack Asselstine to win the doubles with both getting a trophy. Cash prizes went with the trophies. In the team play composed of Bill Salter, Jack Asselstine, Bob Benn and Dave Feeney they put up a good fight but did not manage to repeat their previous successes. From now on Bill will probably be called Mr. Double out as, up to the time when the team lost, he had doubled out nine successive times, which must be a bit of a record.

Last Saturday evening, despite the miserable weather, 16 couples were on hand to compete in the bi-monthly Mr. and Mrs. Darts. For once, time ran out so that the two couples who should have played off were both declared winners. They were Bob and June Brooks and George and Ruth Woodhouse. Ruth Woodhouse again had high three darts for the ladies with 116 and Jack Asselstine with 140 was men's high three darts. Shortly before 11 p.m. a buffet lunch was set up which all players enjoyed. Cdr. Dave Feeney, again the MC, announced that lunch would again be served at the next Mr. and Mrs. Darts which will be held Sat. Dec. 4.

On the sick list are the following comrades: A. Glew, 627; A. Tuck, 635; E. Brockhurst, 316; W. Shepherd, extended care and W. Dziroc, 701; all in the Belleville General Hospital. Still resting at home are R. Mills, H. Latham and K. Hollands. All have been cared for.

Cambodian Red Camp Is Empty

SAIGON (AP) — One of the South Vietnamese forces advancing into eastern Cambodia reported destroying part of an empty North Vietnese base camp.

"We found many bunkers and destroyed them," said Lt.-Gen. Nguyen Xuan Thinh. "We also found abandoned rocket positions."

Thinh said the 1,000-man Ranger force was spearheaded by 40 armored vehicles and had penetrated 15 miles into Cambodia in the drive launched Sunday to smash headquarters and supply depots of three North Vietnamese divisions. The Rangers were reported nine miles north of Krek.

The operation so far has met only light resistance.

At least 5,000 South Vietnamese troops and part of a 150-vehicle armored brigade were committed to the initial phase of the operation, which is expected to last about a month.

South Vietnamese commanders said they hoped the advance of their troops would force the North Vietnamese to pull back some of their forces who have been threatening Phnom Penh, the Cambodian capital.

Halifax Policeman Beaten by Cyclists

HALIFAX (CP) — A Halifax police inspector was bruised and cut from his toes to above the hairline Tuesday but escaped serious injury, in a beating on a downtown street.

Kenneth Paul was struck in the face by a man outside a tavern Monday night and then dragged to the street where an estimated 12 men kicked and punched him in the face and body.

"It was a real stomping," said one police spokesman who reported that policemen who found the 43-year-old inspector lying in a pool of blood on the street did not recognize him until hospital doctors cleaned blood and grime from his face.

One man was charged with assault causing bodily harm and police said they were searching for others. Police said witnesses reported several of Insp. Paul's assailants wore jackets of the 12th Tribe, a Halifax motorcycle gang.

A police spokesman said the inspector was taken home and he expected a "quick recovery."

Halifax Police Chief G. O. Robinson, noting an increase in crime by gang elements in this port city, announced that all constables have been pulled off their beats. He said officers will no longer walk alone but will work in squad cars. Backup cars will be used when officers answer a call.

U.S. Smoke Is Suspected Of Spoiling Canadian Milk

GUELPH (CP) Traces of a chemical which may have as its origin United States smokestacks have been found in milk samples from Essex and Kent Counties by researchers at the University of Guelph.

The chemical, polychlorinated biphenyls or PCBs, was discovered by researchers at the provincial pesticide residue testing laboratory at the university.

Researchers say there is no definite proof of the effect of PCBs on the reproductive system of wildlife, but the chemical is suspect because of its relationship to DDT compounds.

The use of DDT is restricted in North America, because of its adverse effect on wildlife.

Dr. Richard Frank, director of the laboratory, said "small traces" were in milk from Essex and Kent in the province's extreme southwestern corner.

The source of the PCB contamination is not known, but Dr. Frank said he suspected it originated from smokestacks in the U.S.

McMaster Dean U of T Prexy

TORONTO (CP) — Dr. John Evans, 42, dean of medicine at McMaster University in Hamilton, was named the ninth president of the University of Toronto, Canada's largest, Tuesday.

His appointment, announced by the board of governors, becomes effective July 1. It ended a long search for a successor to Dr. Claude Bissell, who retired last June, a year after announcing his resignation.

John Sword, a former executive vice-president of the university, has been acting president since Dr. Bissell's resignation.

Two others were reported considered for the position: A. W. R. Carrothers, president of the University of Calgary, and Ernest Sirluck, president of the University of Manitoba.

Dr. Evans succeeds Dr. Bissell in one of the toughest academic posts in the country. Dr. Bissell was president for 13 years, and is now a professor at the university which has a full- and part-time student population of 28,000 and an additional 6,800 graduate students.

Dr. Evans takes over at a dramatic time when the entire governing structure of the university has been changed. As of July, the senate and board of governors will be replaced with a single governing council made up mainly of lay persons.

The father of six, Dr. Evans received his undergraduate training in medicine at the University of Toronto, graduating in 1952. Later, as a Rhodes Scholar, he did research with the Nuffield Medical unit at Oxford University and received his doctorate in 1955.

Following a year in London at the National Heart Hospital, he returned to Toronto where he spent several years at the Sunnybrook, Toronto General and Sick Children hospitals.

He spent a year as a research fellow in Harvard in 1966 before coming to the University of Toronto's medical faculty where he stayed for more than four years.

He went to McMaster in May, 1965, and later became dean of medicine and vice-president of health sciences there.

No Probe

QUEBEC (CP) — There will be no official government inquiry into the Oct. 29 La Presse demonstration but a committee of representatives from the justice and social affairs departments has been formed to study a general policy governing future demonstrations, Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said Tuesday.

Mr. Choquette told the national assembly this policy could take the form of an obligatory regulation directed at municipalities or could be the foundation of a proposed law governing demonstrations.

Chretien and Cardinal Both Ready to Tell About Document

OTTAWA (CP) — Both Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien and Fr. Vold Cardinal, head of the Alberta Indian Association, said Tuesday they would be happy to appear before a Commons committee to explain their sides in a dispute arising from a leaked cabinet document.

"I have nothing to hide," declared Mr. Chretien after a series of Commons questions failed to shed much light on Mr. Cardinal's charges that the government is withholding money from his association as a form of blackmail.

Mr. Cardinal, who is in Ottawa, said he wants to appear with Mr. Chretien at the committee. But he suggested that the meeting be held in Alberta where some Indian parents still are keeping their children from non-reserve schools.

The Alberta Indian leader said it is because these children are out of school that Ottawa is holding back funds for a proposed cultural centre in the province.

His support is a cabinet document dated July 29 in which the cabinet approved the concept of cultural and educational centres for Indians.

Mr. Chretien said no firm decision on funding the Alberta centre has yet been made. The blackmail charge was false. He also said that his department is already spending $29 million on Alberta Indians.

Mr. Cardinal said he has been in Ottawa to notify Health Minister John Munro and the secretary of state's department that his association is withdrawing from programs funded by them.

He said he was ending these programs and preparing to lay off 45 Indians working on these projects.

He said Mr. Chretien was "a good guy" but his background made him incapable of understanding what Indians were going through.

Judgment Reserved in Woman's Suit Against Six Nations Reserve Council

TORONTO (CP) — Mr. Justice John Osler Tuesday reserved judgment in an action by Yvonne Bedard against the elected council of the Six Nations Indian reserve at Ohsweken, Ont., which ordered her off the reserve.

Mrs. Bedard sought an injunction against the council and an order to set aside a resolution requiring her to dispose of property on the reserve.

Mrs. Bedard's counsel, Malcolm Montgomery, said she had inherited a house and an acre of land on the reserve from her mother and had transferred title to the property to her brother, Harold Williams of Stoney Creek. Mr. Montgomery said her name was removed from the band list when she brought suit against the council.

Burton Kellock of Brantford, representing the council, said Mrs. Bedard lost her Indian status by marrying a non-Indian.

Children Best Hope Of Needy

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Comedian Danny Kaye said Tuesday if children could be mobilized to help children, the world would "make enormous headway."

The red-haired entertainer told a news conference he hopes to see the day when North America's "trick or treat" for UNICEF will be repeated in one form or another around the world.

He also said he recently visited Pakistan refugee camps in India and the sight was "ghastly, absolutely ghastly."

Kaye was reporting to correspondents on a trip around the world on behalf of the UN Children's Fund—known as UNICEF. It was one of many trips he has made on behalf of the fund that seeks to help the undefied and underprivileged children of the world, and which is financed completely by voluntary donations. In North America the fund is best known for its Halloween collections and its Christmas cards.

PCs Say Ottawa Must Take Lead in Furthering Sex Equality

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government must take the lead in ensuring equality for women, says a Progressive Conservative policy paper released Tuesday.

The paper, prepared by party headquarters for a December policy convention, says "each woman must have the right to decide on her own role in life: Housewife, mother, worker, or a combination of the three."

The paper, the 17th in a series of policy papers for the convention, supports several measures, based on recommendations of the royal commission on the status of women, to give women equal opportunity in the work force. These include:

—Equal employment and promotion opportunities in the public service and appointment of women to federal boards and agencies.

—Day care facilities for single and married female public servants;

—Training programs to help women re-enter the labor force after a long absence.

Other recommended action on matters affecting women:

—Amending the Divorce Act to reduce the three-year separation period as a ground for divorce to one year.

—A federal-provincial conference "to work toward uniformity of approach toward the whole area of equal rights and opportunities for women."

The paper also calls on the Conservative party to reform itself:

"Sex-typing of work within the party organization must cease, just as it must in the work world. . . . The Progressive Conservative party must welcome women who want to run as candidates and must actively encourage them to do so."

True North Is Free to Sing

TORONTO (CP) — After a few days of confusion, there is general agreement among those who stand on guard that the True North is not only strong but also free.

The question arose a week ago when Robert Mountain, city solicitor of Stratford, told a council meeting the municipal still was being charged $76 a year in royalties for performances of music, including O Canada, at the city-owned arena.

Mr. Mountain said the Composers, Authors and Publishers Association of Canada owned the copyright to the anthem and collected royalties for its performance at gatherings where admission was charged.

In the House of Commons today, former prime minister John Diefenbaker defended that Prime Minister Trudeau tell CAPAC that the practice was not acceptable to the government, Parliament or Canadians. Mr. Trudeau said he would be happy to comply.

It was all news to CAPAC. General manager John V. Mills said in Toronto that O Canada had been in the public domain for years and that the copyright had been formally vested in the Canadian government since Oct. 13, 1970.

Lloyd Francis, Liberal member of Parliament for Ottawa West, sought and obtained confirmation of O Canada's status from State Secretary Gerard Pelletier in the Commons Monday.

In an interview outside the chamber, Mr. Francis said a Toronto firm owned the English-language rights prior to their transfer to the government last year.

It had collected approximately $150 in royalties annually, of which half was turned over to the estate of Judge Robert Weir who wrote the English lyrics in 1908.

The rights of Calixa Lavallee, who composed the music in 1880, and Sir Adolphe Routhier, a chief justice of Quebec who produced the French lyrics in 1908, were not involved.

Mr. Francis said the firm's sole purpose was to protect the anthem from commercial use. It had repeatedly offered the rights to the government for $1, an offer that was finally accepted.

So what about that $76 item in the Stratford civic accounts?

It was all a mistake, Mr. Mountain explained Tuesday. The money went to CAPAC for music performed during skating sessions at the arena.

"The city treasurer told me the charge included performances of O Canada. He was misinformed."

Opening lead—two of hearts.

Assume you're in four hearts and West leads a trump. How would you play the hand?

The actual declarer entered his hand with a spade and led a diamond, finessing the queen. East took the king and made the proper return of a trump.

Locked in dummy and unable to come back to his hand for a diamond ruff, declarer led the king and another spade, hoping to find the suit divided 3-3 and thus establish dummy's fourth spade as a trick.

But West won the spade with the ten and played still another trump. As a result, South finished down one; all together, he lost a spade, two diamonds and a club.

Actually, declarer could have made the contract had he not suffered from a blind spot. All he had to do after winning the opening trump lead in dummy was play the ace of diamonds and continue with the queen.

Had he done this, no defense could have stopped him. East would win with the king and return a trump, but this effort would prove fruitless. Declarer would win in dummy with the king, cross to his hand with a spade, ruff a diamond in dummy, and thus manufacture his tenth trick.

Strangely enough, there is very little doubt that South would have made the hand had dummy held the A-x of diamonds instead of the A-Q. In that case, he would probably have led the A-x right away in order to pave the way for a diamond ruff later on.

But the presence of the A-Q in dummy unfortunately produced a finessing position which, in turn, steered South downhill to the tune of down one.

Farm Income Outlook Dismal

OTTAWA (CP) — Farm leaders considered dismal prospects for farm incomes Tuesday while Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson and his provincial counterparts drew plans to improve the marketing of farm goods and help small farmers bolster their operations.

The ministers, meeting privately while about 200 other farm representatives discussed future farm trends at the annual farm-outlook conference, agreed on a plan they said would help small farmers make more money.

The plan, a modification of federal proposals to help less successful farmers improve their operations or move out of agriculture, would include methods of acquiring land and money needed to make farms commercially viable. The government already has allocated $16 million for such a program.

A joint committee was set up to work out details, after which individual provinces can enter agreements with the federal government "in accordance with the particular needs of farm people in that province," a communique issued after the ministers' meeting said.

The meeting also produced a compromise designed to soothe critics and hasten passage of federal farm marketing legislation—Bill C-176.

Mr. Olson agreed to take from the bill all provisions for managing the supplies of farm goods other than eggs and chickens. Producers of those products now are working out ways to share markets.

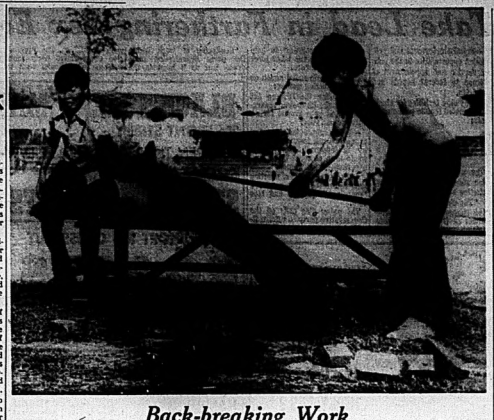
While the ministers huddled over policy matters, the outlook conference heard predictions for serious cash shortages in farm income.

W. G. Morris, head of Statistics Canada's agriculture division, and W. C. Goodeck, a University of Manitoba agriculture economics professor, said farmers will take in $1.5 billion this year, 31 per cent more than in 1970.

But they will be left with only $1.17 billion when they pay depreciation costs and increased operating expenses.

For 1972, the economists said, actual income to farmers will drop to about $1.03 billion, a level both said was seriously low.

Mr. Olson countered the predictions in a closing speech, saying the time was ripe for Canada to seek new world markets as tight domestic policies in the U.S. reduce Canadian competition abroad from that country.



The conference was marked by free-wheeling discussions on prospects for most major farm goods and lobbying by farm organizations promoting particular products.

The Ontario tobacco growers organization distributed bumper stickers saying "Enjoy Smoking Canadian Tobacco" and apple growers passed out free apple juice.

Delegates were summoned to sessions by a lustily-rung cow bell.

For all the good-natured trappings, however, farm leaders left with an impression of tighter world trade conditions, lower prices for grain, possible hog and poultry surpluses in the wake of increased Canadian feed grain production and only a moderately-improved future for dairying.

Beef producers and oilseed farmers can look forward to the brightest future, with steadily increasing markets and prices for both commodities.

Back-breaking Work

As part of an anti-drug campaign, a Laotian karate expert uses a steel pole to break a stack of bricks on the back of another one to demonstrate their skill in what "clean living" can do for you. After the demonstration, police officials set fire to a stack of $4 million worth of opium and heroin. For years Vientiane, the capital of Laos, has served as the main centre of trade for opiads in Southeast Asia and the world. The Laotian government has banned opium growing in recent months. Trudeau Forced to Withdraw Suggestion MP Was Drinking

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau was forced to withdraw a remark he made in the Commons Tuesday that suggested an opposition member who was heckling him had been drinking.

And when Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux decided he was not satisfied with Mr. Trudeau's first withdrawal, he made the prime minister do it over.

The incident occurred following a series of opposition questions on what the government was doing to track down three leaks of confidential government documents in recent days.

The first time Mr. Trudeau said the government considered the leaks a serious breach of morality.

If individual public servants, "egged on by the opposition in many cases," were going to take justice into their own hands and put themselves above elected representatives of the people in releasing documents to the press, then it was a serious thing for the country.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield rose indignantly to demand that Mr. Trudeau either withdraw or clarify that remark.

When Mr. Trudeau did not move in response, Conservative House Leader G. W. Baldwin asked Mr. Lamoureux to instruct the prime minister to withdraw the statement.

Mr. Lamoureux said he did not have the power to ask a member to withdraw such a charge—members were always hurling charges at one another, often without basis.

Mr. Trudeau rose anyway, and was being heavily heckled as he began what might have been anything from a withdrawal to a retort.

He stopped, fooled at Robert Muir (PC—Cape Breton-The Sydneys) who was leading the razzing, and asked:

"Have you had a drink?"

One member of the Commons staff said the last time a member had so directly implied that another member had been drinking was in the mid-1930s, when Conservative Donald Fleming suggested that Liberal James Sinclair—no Mr. Trudeau's father-in-law—had been drinking.

Mr. Muir, known more for invibbing soft drinks than anything else, rose angrily on a point of privilege.

He accused the prime minister of being unable to take heckling without becoming childish and petulant. He asked Mr. Lamoureux to have Mr. Trudeau withdraw the remark, pointing to the prime minister and saying:

"I am not going to have my character besmirched by that over there."

Mr. Lamoureux said the complaint had been made with reason, and asked Mr. Trudeau to withdraw.

Mr. Trudeau said that if his remark had offended Mr. Muir "and if he is known as a drinking man" then he wished to withdraw.

Mr. Lamoureux said it would be much simpler if Mr. Trudeau would make a direct withdrawal.

The prime minister then said he understood that Mr. Muir was a teetotaller and he had not meant any implication of bad conduct with his remarks.

Mr. Muir thanked Mr. Trudeau for the apology, but later said outside the Commons that it was difficult to be satisfied by any apology given by Mr. Trudeau.

St. Jean Baptiste President Says Police 'Invaded' Revel

MONTREAL (CP) — The president of the Montreal branch of the St. Jean Baptiste Day that last June's St. Jean Baptiste Day festivities ended with police "invading" the area, punching and bludgeoning revellers."

Francois-Albert Angers, a retired teacher, said he watched from a hotel balcony as "an army of policemen . . . perhaps 10 or 15 officers in riot gear" entered the square where celebrations were taking place, early in the morning of June 25.

"I saw policemen dragging people by the hair, and saw three officers holding a man up against a police paddy wagon while a fourth punched him in the face several times."

The punching incident occurred some 1,500 feet from where he was standing, he said. Earlier, Mr. Angers had admitted his eyesight was poor.

Mr. Angers said he "didn't see any merrymakers hitting police or resisting although throwing beer bottles might be considered resisting."

The inquiry, chaired by Judge Denis Dion, was ordered by Justice Minister Jerome Choquette after Dollar Maisha, head of the committee that organized the celebration, complained that a report absolving police of any blame for the disruption, was not adequate explanation.

The report, which was presented by Jacques Saulnier, Montreal police chief, gave details of vandalism and said a loud explosion had been heard in the area.

The report said high-ranking officers ordered the area cleared after an explosive device was detonated.

Published and televised accounts described the celebrations as happy until police moved in.

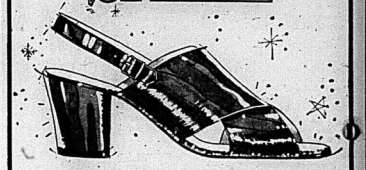
Some 15,000 persons were in the square partaking in celebrations in honor of French Canada's patron saint when police and revellers clashed. About 40 persons were arrested and more, than 100, including policemen, were treated for various injuries.

Mr. Mathieu, who also testified Tuesday, said he did see some beer bottles thrown at police but he could not remember seeing anything thrown from the hotel where he watched the celebrations with other organizers.

Israeli Doctors Strike Over Autopsy Protests

JERUSALEM (AP) — Doctors at Israel's largest hospital called a 24-hour strike today to protest the harassment of pathologists by Jewish religious zealots.

The strike came after Hadassah Hospital's chief pathologist, Dr. Alexander Laufer, received a threatening letter containing a bullet, a spokesman said.



The strike closed down hospital outpatient clinics and prevented all but emergency operations.

Orthodox Jews maintain religious law prohibits autopsies as a desecration of the dead.

"All this devil worship is attracting people to the wrong sort of cult," complained Eleanor Bone, a "white" witch who says the only spells she casts are good ones that help in such ways as trying to remove warts.

Mrs. Bone runs a coven—six couples, plus Mrs. Bone as priestess—in the London suburb of Tooting Bec. Evil spells, she says, have no place in their monthly dances around a fire, but amateur dabbling in the black arts is getting them a bad name.

Church leaders are similarly worried about the growing interest in the occult.

"We are frightened of what seems to be a steady and continuing growth in the popularity of witchcraft and devil worship," said a Church of England spokesman. "and it is frightening to realize it is attracting young people."

There have been a number of bizzare events in England, apparently linked to the black magic craze.

A child's body was stolen from a grave. A young man hanged himself after his girlfriend hexed him. Another youth was charged with murder after the body of an earl's grandson was found next to a bloodstained letter containing the words "Hail Satan."

The letter also had the Lord's Prayer written backwards—a favorite black magic incantation.

"This is a problem that the church has not met for the last 200 years," the Rev. Tom Willis told an Anglican Church synod last weekend.

"But priests are now finding all over the country that they are having to cast out devils and evil spirits.

"People are turning away from material things like cars and refrigerators . . . the supernatural is gaining ascendancy.

Police say some members of the score or so of black magic groups in the London area, who dance naked and conduct perverted church services, are respectable businessmen.

Con men have cashed in on the growing interest in the occult. A Birmingham "faith healer" got an eight-year jail sentence for defrauding £670 out of women by "removing evil spirits" through such techniques as anointing them and having sexual intercourse with them.

A gloomy London restaurant called Cafe Macabre is decorated with plaster skulls and coffin-shaped tables. It saw the stage debut of Alex Sanders, 45-year-old self-proclaimed "King of the Witches," who jakes his ritual stage act around the country.

Mrs. Bone, the white witch, protests about the dabblers in the occult: "There are just too many half-baked groups springing up."

CBLT Walkout Brief

TORONTO (CP) — CBC technicians began reporting back to their jobs today at CBLT, the corporation's television outlet, after walking out Tuesday night in a dispute over contract negotiations.

The walkout put the Channel 6 station off the air for six minutes Tuesday night when about 150 technicians left their jobs about 6:30 for a study session.

It left management staff scrambling to fill the gap and the news and information program Weekday got on the air six minutes late.

It was the only television program disrupted Tuesday night although the station was forced to cancel a taping session of In the Mood and broadcast warnings to an expected studio audience of 200 persons not to attend.

In Edmonton about 15 technicians also walked out for a study session to discuss a conciliation board's report on a new collective agreement.

Peter Bolshy, chairman of Local 71, National Association o Broadcast Employees, said the walkout started spontaneously in one television studio and then snowballed to others.

Will Build At RMC Next Fall

OTTAWA (CP) — Construction of new science and engineering buildings estimated to cost $5,475,000 will begin at Royal Military College in Kingston next fall, it was announced today.

The two new buildings are the first stage in a project that includes a total of five buildings to replace antiquated facilities at RMC, the defence department said, one existing structures will be torn down to make way for the new ones.

GMC, with a student body of about 500, grants degrees in arts, science and engineering.

The modernization plans are still at the design stage, the department said, and a contract for construction will be awarded later.

Thieves Preparing For Grey Cup Game?

TRENTON (Staff) — It may be that a group of undesirables are making sure they have television and radio receivers backed up for the Grey Cup game on Sunday.

The Reids were away from home from 9 a.m. Saturday until 9:30 p.m. Sunday and when they returned found their home entertainment equipment missing.

Missing is a 21-inch black and white television, a 12-inch portable television, an AM-FM stereo set and an AM-FM clock radio also a small amount of costume jewelry disappeared with the holdup items police noted in their report.

Police placed a value of $979 on the loot.

Investigation so far revealed entry to the home was gained through a cellar window, and the perpetrators used a side door to make a clean getaway with their cargo.

Review Urged If Hospital Rejects Doctor

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Hospital Association has recommended that the health minister name a hospitals appointment review board each time a doctor wants to appeal a rejection for practising privileges at a hospital.

However, the OHA said in a brief to a provincial inquiry on hospital privileges, the review board should not have the power to force a hospital board to hire a particular doctor. But it should be able to order a hospital board to reconsider its decision.

All public hospitals and many psychiatric and private hospitals in Ontario belong to the association.

The brief says the present system of appointments has been "outstandingly effective" and the number of complaints small in proportion to appointments over the years.

The association says each hospital should have a written policy about appointments and that all applicants' credentials should be checked with the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Ontario, hospitals where the applicant was previously on staff and, if a recent graduate, with his medical school.

The applicant should be notified in writing of the decision, the OHA says, and of the section under which a rejection was made.

The brief does not say that a hospital board should specify why an applicant was rejected. But it mentions as reasons for rejection: incompetence, "previous undesirable behavior," disciplinary action by a licensing body and an unwillingness at a previous hospital to perform a share of administrative responsibilities, use facilities economically or provide emergency room coverage.

To serve as an information check-point about doctors, the OHA says, the College of Physicians and Surgeons' access to information should be extended.

At present, the college is informed when an appointment has been revoked or privileges suspended, except when this results from voluntary action by the physician.

The brief also says the hospital should have the right to set limits on the desirable number of specialists and general practitioners appointed to staff.

It rejects suggestions that every licensed and practising physician should be on the staff of at least one hospital.

Broadcasting History Aired Tomorrow

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

As a long-term announcer and production manager for CJBQ, Lee Jourard has been spending the last several weeks compiling special archive material in order to produce special 25th anniversary programs for tomorrow.

Although he didn't join the station until 1950, Lee has managed to collect much of CJBQ's history in both taped and written collections.

From the days when listeners dialed 1220; when much of the syndicated programming was received on 16-inch wax transcription records and tape recordings were made on brittle paper tapes, voices which can still be remembered by Quinte listeners will again grace the airwaves.

On the What Do You Think? program Thursday morning, listeners will be invited to identify announcers and programs. The voice of original manager Bill Slovin will be heard as will that of present sports director Jack Devine presenting country and western music; Phil Flagler and his I Hate Humphrey Show; the old Shadow series; the Whistler; Betty and Bob; Lukewela and the Hawaiians; Five-minute Mysteries and another thriller from the days of yesteryear . . . Calling All Cars.

In the old station on Victoria Avenue, the fledgling staff of regular broadcasters, all writers, engineers and program operators, hit the airwaves at 7 p.m. and closed down at 11 p.m.

Only 10 commercial messages were slated for that day, which started with the still-featured program, Up With the Sun.

By today's standards, the original station would be considered archaic, but in 1946, the Voice of the Bay of Quinte had the latest and best materials the post-war era could provide.

"For instance, we would get microphones, but the connectors wouldn't match anything we had," the well-known announcer and theatre performer recalled.

Pre-recorded, on-location broadcasts such as the weekend events from the old McCarthy Theatre, interviews with area farmers and special interviews were recorded on old fashioned acetate recording discs which emerged from these sessions were cut platter discs.

This device was replaced by the modern, portable tape recorder in the 1960s. It weighed 35 pounds.

On March 14, 1951, power was increased to 1,000 watts and listeners dialled to the 800 spot. Oct. 30, 1962 saw establishment of CJBQ-FM, which started at 2,000 watts and later increased to 17,400 at 97.1 on the radio dial.

Art Watkins, the station's present chief FM announcer, joined CJBQ in 1964. Middle-of-the-road music is a specialty, emphasizing musical favorites over the past 25 to 30 years.

"I select what I think will appeal to all tastes as far as possible. We don't play any wie age group," the FM announcer says.

His own particular style of music appears on CJBQ-AM every Sunday between 1:30 and 5 p.m. Sunday Matinee is slightly different from the FM network programming he enjoys, but the music is not dissimilar.

Another veteran announcer who enjoys the more traditional style of music and regrets somewhat the passing trends is Hoaks Hookings.

As regular as rain but with a much more cheerful outlook in the morning, Trent announces the arrival of each new day on Up With the Sun, a CJBQ institution.

His amusing anecdotes have both pleased and riled listeners. "I remember one lady complaining about what she termed the 'filthy stories' I told on the station. I must have got four letters from her in the space of two years as she regularly listened and commented."

Although he admits to a certain amount of sleepiness each morning, "there's a certain freshness about greeting a new day. People are listening as they face the new day and you are sharing it with them."

In the afternoons he plays a little golf during good weather, after breaking shortly after noon.

Although he does regret the passing trends towards more lively music, Trent does appreciate the light, bouncy and happy music so much a part of his regular morning fare.

Tom says he likes CJBQ for its free and easy atmosphere and good taste.

Art Watkins and Lee Jourard

Musical Director Named

Coupled with CJBQ Radio's expansion to 10,000 watts, is a new sound being produced by disc jockeys and programmers.

Not dissimilar to recent formats, the station's music department is now under the directorship of Peter Thompson, a regular afternoon announcer who joined the station as a regular in 1970.

As the station's newly appointed music director, it is his job to improve the sound of the station and provide what he describes as "a demographic picture we want to create for listeners and sponsors.

"Careful planning will also keep us abreast of changes in the music world and the tastes of the community at large."

The CJBQ sound . . . a melding of different types of music, is the station's signature. One of the music director's prime jobs is preparation of weekly playlists. All songs to be aired on the station are listed according to title, artist and length. Announcers submit ideas and the list is compiled.

On the contemporary scene, CJBQ will start releasing its own Top 40 charts on Jan. 1, 1972.

"The old method of having each announcer select his own music was successful," he explained, "but unco-ordinated."

Various other music trend charts, major trade magazines and promotional literature from record companies . . . called 'poop' sheets . . . are studied and promotional records screened. An average of 100 single records and between 20 and 30 albums are received by the station weekly. Large boxes of unacceptable material gather dust in the record library.

An average of a dozen albums is ordered from record companies each week, to guarantee the latest in listening music.

"We have to program to the availability of the product. For instance, you don't play hard rock in the morning. In the evening and early afternoon, when rural people are available, country and western music is the order of the day."

Not only is Peter Thompson the new music director but he is part of the afternoon music team, adding his own special blend of announcing. On the Peter Thompson Program, his rich, well modulated voice is a familiar sound to Quinte listeners driving home from work.

Swinging Daryl D. and CJBQ Friends

Milt Not Worried About Friendship

Not everyone likes CJBQ's Milt Johnston, but then he's not out to win a popularity contest.

As moderator and host on the station's What Do You Think? morning open - line show, Milt has been damned, sworn at, told he is an athlete on the other side, other listeners have heartily supported his views and rallied behind his suggestions.

"I lobbied for quite some time to take over the program," he recalls.

In 1969, long - term morning announcer Tom Hookings was finishing his last year as host of the Why Not Call? program, with a major changeover scheduled for the fall.

The old format was more of a sounding board than the present program. Listeners could call up and air their beefs on the show originally started by program director Lee Jourard.

Milt says he originally saw it as far more serious" than it actually became. The entertainment aspect of a public program such as this apparently didn't enter his thoughts.

Since the first season, he feels there has been something of a change in the controversial format.

"I guess you might say I'm not quite so dogmatic. We've mellowed our outlook since the beginning. More men are calling than in the past, especially this season. We've broadened it away from the juvenile audience.

"Sometimes I'm ready to scream and yell and argue but by and large, it's pretty easy going.

"Although," he chuckled slyly, "I'm not sure if I'm every ready to listen to them and be told by them."

Milt agrees there is a certain amount of role playing in an open-line program. If discussions aren't going smoothly, a slightly different stand often sparks renewed conversation.

"To some degree, I play a role. I don't know how much there is, but most of the time I'm saying what I think pretty precisely . . . sometimes a little far out.

"I guess I've mellowed a little since I first began. I have been known to change my mind or opinion, sometimes to a 360-degree turn, although I can't remember just when."

Program director Lee Jourard, who produces and directs the daily morning special for Milt, says the broadened scope of the station will broaden the listening audience even further.

"Tests have shown that more and more people are listening to What Do You Think?" he adds.

On various occasions, the program has presented guests. One of the most famous programs featured several politicians in Ontario, was broadcast during Prime Minister Trudeau's visit to Belleville.

Milt recalls he approached the subject with some apprehension. "I was a little bit afraid of Pierre because of the reputation he has for his attitude toward the media.

"But I found him very patient and very responsive. I realized, half-way through the show, he was taking his cues from me. I might tend to cut him short if the time was being wasted, but then I didn't feel I should tell the Prime Minister of Canada to desist."

There is great rapport between Milt and Lee — a fact both attest to.

"Lee is a lot more than a guy who just pushes buttons and reads commercials. When I started it was a matter of faith on," says the moderator, "I was also told that I had been jumping up and down saying I could do it. Lee helped me a lot in discussions."

"With the greatest respect to any one else in the station, I wouldn't be comfortable doing the show with anyone else," ex-newspaperman Johnston testified.

Because callers had been used to airing their views with the old type of show, the dialogue style came as a bit of a shock.

Milt and Lee both agree it "took the area awhile to adjust".

"The show has created an area for concern, where people can express concern and foster development.

"More so than any other media," the show's producer added.

Lee monitors prospective callers if time is available. This not only cuts down on cranks — it gives him time to alert Milt to the caller's topic.

He has been accused many times of cutting off people at points which he reprobates.

"People calling have ample opportunity to say what they've got to say . . . within the realms of good taste, lack of libel and broadcast ethics. If we cut off one person in a period, I'll be very surprised."

If anyone does tender a nasty . . . and collections of taped programs to prove just how many times this can occur . . . an eight second delay controlled by Lee Jourard, cuts the caller's words from the air, so that they are not broadcast. In the station archives, many have proved to be unpublishable gems.

Country Gentlemen Lovering and Tompkins

C&W Is A Team Affair

Country and western music is growing and expanding because outside influences are beginning to make their presence felt in Nashville . . . the country music capital of the world.

With some of the world's finest recording studios attracting international stars to make their recordings, musicians in Nashville suppressed the world with their professional approach to music. Artists may have expected backwoods hillbillies "pickin' and a grinnin' on homemade guitars, but were in for quite a surprise when they got there."

Some of the world's best musicians exist of a country or country-folk flavor, has come from writers and musicians in the south.

The big band sound slowly began to influence the country flavor. CJBQ's Dick Lovering recalls how country music began to be flavored with the sounds of Cy Zentner, Kai Winding and the Clebanoff Strings.

Country music was big business and its admirers were, and still are, worldwide.

New songs such as Rose Garden, Snowbird, and Gentle On My Mind, slowly replaced the more nasal sounds particularly featured on old record songs.

Jim Anderson, Canada's Anne Murray and Glen Campbell emerged into the charmed circle of country melody. However, Johnny Cash, who features personality recording in the old style "breaks across all levels."

Because of the popularity of country and western music, CJBQ features two regular programs. The afternoon Lovering corner forms the day's first half of a twin bill, country and western music scene on CJBQ.

"Actually, any kind of music is a state of mind. Whatever an individual can accept as his kind of music is perfectly acceptable.

"One thing, about country music that I believe in is being in time with it but not breaking away from the old standards."

To this end, Harold's night shows feature a generous flavoring of the old and the new. "But always country music."

Harold is an active interest in Quinte area productions . . . namely the Trent Valley Jamboree and any special events that come along.

Dick, who has been in Belleville since 1966, has set down a firmer foot as a regular emcee of the jamboree but his air partner is becoming better known throughout the area.

"Although country music is reaching far-off shores of popularity these days," says Dick "a good number of people in the Quinte area can remember first broadcasts of the Grand Ole Opry of the Wheeling, West Virginia Jamboree.

"They've been enjoying country music almost from the day it was born. With the advent of television, the country music shows, which are broadcast by Quinte area TV stations, are vastly popular."

As a matter of fact, visitors to the more northern regions of this area, would be hard put to find any other type of musical selections in public bake boxes and hotel rooms. Dozens of local 'C' and W' performers have emerged in recent years.

"If it's good, I'll definitely play it."

"Country music is growing by leaps and bounds throughout the world and I'm happy to be a small part of it with our programming," he added.

As the last person to be heard by listeners, CJBQ's Harold Tompkins regularly signs off the station at 1 a.m. inviting any and all listeners to return to the twin voices of CJBQ on which he simulcasts from 11 p.m. nightly.

Teenage Fad Blamed For Lost Road Signs

PECTON (Staff) — An "in" fad among teens could be responsible for the disappearance of several 'stop' signs from Prince Edward intersections, according to county engineer D. F. Clark.

A post-Hallowe'en count revealed that seven new stop signs needed replacement.

Mr. Clark explained, "I understand that the 'in' thing now is stop signs on little girls' bedroom doors."

He suggested a search of county residences might yield the road signs that disappeared Hallowe'en night.

Vandalism also included the destruction of two road signs, two 'stop ahead' signs, two checkerboards and 15 new four-by-four posts. These, compiled with re-erection of 10 signs pulled down but not destroyed, required 184 man hours and 64 truck hours at a cost of $500 for time, vehicles and materials.

The signs on county road seven at Highway 33 Stop and Stop Ahead, have been replaced three times since Hallowe'en.

Mr. Clark said the worst hardest hit by vandalism Hallowe'en night were Bloomfield West Lake, Salmon Point, and the Lake-on-the-Mountain and Waupoos areas.

Picton reeve Albert Piroth asked if council would be prepared to assure police of maximum backing in court action if vandals could be apprehended. "I'm not one for taking the lesser course," he stressed.

Several councillors agreed the biggest problem was catching the persons responsible for the damage.

Mr. Clark observed that in 1969 more than $2,000 damage was reported to signs with the Milford area reportedly the main target for vandalism.

He said he felt it would be very unwise for a lone motorist to make any attempt to learn the names of "four or five ding-a-lings" caught defacing a sign.

The engineer added that a number of ingenious methods are used in removing the signs.

Some vandals hook chains from their cars to the metal feet of the signs and haul them out. Others shear the heads off stop signs leaving only the posts behind.

North Marysburg reeve Harold Harrison supported reeve Piroth's stand and said a sign at Prinyer's Cove Estates was damaged on Hallowe'en to the extent of approximately $1,000. A summer home received $700 to $800 damage.

Roy Brook, deputy-reeve of Sophiasburg, did not feel a reward system necessarily would benefit the situation. He recalled that he caught the youngsters who damaged a sign at his home only to be confronted by seven pranksters who pleaded innocence. "You have 11 months to think about it," joked reeve Piroth, referring to the reward scheme.

County solicitor Thomas Forbes told council there are two legal remedies for the costly vandalism.

The first is prosecution under the criminal code or the highway traffic act. The latter is a civil remedy involving recovery of money for damages.

Lack of Music Concerns Council

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward County councillors closed their monthly session on a high note last night with a resolution asking the Prince Edward County Board of education to consider organization of a high school band with instruments supplied.

The suggestion was made by warden Allen Anderson who commented that the recent Remembrance Day parade was "a pretty dead affair" owing to the lack of a full band. He said it presented a "terrible shame" that the collegiate curriculum does not include courses in music.

Warden Anderson referred to the excellent bands organized at Belleville and Brighton secondary schools and stressed it is time for musical education in Prince Edward.

Ameliasburg deputy - reeve Norman Post remarked he was "astounded" to learn that Prince Edward Collegiate Institute has no school band although he felt it was time one was organized.

Councillors agreed the county board of education is a corporate body and the proposal for a band should be pressed only as a topic for consideration not as a directive.

Family YMCA Seeks Subsidy

The Belleville Family YMCA has made a submission to the federal government, asking for subsidy on a day care centre for east hill residents.

"At the moment, the only existing centre is located on the west hill on Fahey Street," said Di Dalmanthi, general secretary of the Y.

Through the Labor Incentive Program, instituted by the federal government, the Y has asked for just over $10,000 to cover most of the centre's costs.

"Our program will be run in much the same manner as the west hill program, developed by the Department of Social and Family Services under Reginald Tucker, and part of the cost of the program will be placed on the shoulders of those using the service," said Di Dalmanthi.

Those using the service on a full-time basis will be charged $15 a week, while those people working only on part time basis will be charged for the service accordingly.

The program, which will run from December to May, is designed to allow mothers to get into the working community.

The service will be available five days a week, from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m. and will be in the Y building.

Eight people will be employed by the program and these will be selected from the rolls of Canada Manpower.

At present there are numerous functions of the Y which cater to the very young, including Kinder Kamp (three past summer and Kinder Gym.

DAILY CRYPTOQUOTE—Here's how to work it:
A X Y D L B A A X R
is L O N G F E L L O W
One letter simply stands for another. In this sample A is used for the three X's, for the two O's, etc. Single letters, apostrophes, the length and formation of the words are all hints. Each day the code letters are different.

Pilot Is Acquitted

MONTREAL (CP) — An Air free passage by hiding in a Canada pilot was acquitted Tuesday on a charge of aiding a stowaway on board an Air Canada DC-8 international flight to Montreal from London.

The stowaway—the captain's son—did not pay his fare but had not tried to hide on the aircraft. He took a seat along

Arab Military Chiefs Told

CAIRO (AP) — "With the failure of the political solution nothing is left before us but military might," representatives of the military high commands of a dozen Arab countries were told today.

The Egyptian chief of staff, Gen. Assad el Shazly, addressing a brief public opening session of a meeting of Arab military chiefs of staff, added:

"We should show the world that our last battle with Israel is one of existence . . . To be or not to be."

It was the first meeting of Arab leaders since President Anwar Sadat declared during the weekend that Egypt's decision was to fight Israel to regain land Israel occupied in June 1967, unless Israel came through with a plan to settle it drawn in compliance with a UN resolution.

Israel has declined to do so since it was successfully asked last February by UN mediator Gunnar Jarring.

Cyclists' Blue Masks Dangerous

TORONTO (CP) — Blue-tinted face masks worn by motorcyclists are dangerous because they make it impossible to distinguish the color red, the Ontario department of transport and communications has warned.

The department quotes a Manitoba government investigation of accidents involving riders wearing the visors clipped to crash helmets as a result grew faster and ran wiser.

In such cases it was quite apparent that the motorcyclist had no way of recognizing a red light for his traffic lane. A cyclist would be similarly unable to make the normal responses to amber lights in traffic, because lights are flashing red lights of emergency vehicles."

The department also announced Tuesday it has changed its mind about requiring all motorcyclists to wear helmets approved by the Canadian Standards Association by Jan. 1. Helmets approved by the Snell Memorial Foundation or the British Standards Institute were "just as good."

U.S. Plan Unchanged

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States pursuit of an interim settlement between Israel and Egypt may be paralyzed for the time being but Nixon administration and diplomatic sources indicate the concept is still the key to U.S. policy in the Middle East.

For the moment, the entire initiative to negotiate a first disengagement step is in Cairo's court. The ball is on the shelf, for state department admission, because of opposition from both sides in the dispute. And the focus of the conflict is shifting to the United Nations.

Neither the United States nor Israel expects the UN General Assembly debate, which opens early next month, to provide any solution.

When the UN debate ends, U.S. sources say, they expect both sides to step back and reexamine their will be only one choice to war—the American initiative.

Many Ulster Families Are Considering Immigrating to Canada

BELFAST (CP) — An Ulster-man sat in the Canadian immigration office here and was asked by an Ottawa official the ritual question, "Why do you want to move to Canada?"

"There's your answer," replied the immigration applicant.

The murderous violence in Northern Ireland has been enough to convince numerous Ulster families that they'd be better off—and safer—by pulling up stakes or at least hastening their planned departures for points overseas.

Although the great majority of the deeply-rooted Northern Irish prefer to defy the bombings and stay on, there has been a spectacular increase in applications reaching both the Canadian and Australian immigration services over the last three months.

Most Ulstermen realize that Australia is far less demanding in its list of required skills than are the Canadian immigration authorities, working as the latter are under the shadow of uncertain economic conditions at home.

Thus the lineups at the Australian office are longer than at Canada House, a downtown office block surrounded by windowless or fire-damaged buildings but itself virtually spared so far from the attentions of terrorists.

Yet the upturn in business for the Canadian officials has been a radical one—518 applications in September this year compared with 244 in the same month of 1970.

October, 1971, saw 489 Ulstermen asking about a possible move to Canada as against 282 in the same four-week period of last year.

The big surge began in the last two weeks of August, after Roman Catholic anger about the introduction of internment for terrorist suspects boiled over into rioting and gunbattles.

In a few cases, anxious Canadian relatives of Northern Ireland residents prevailed on their kinsmen to seek a haven abroad from the dangers of life here and served as sponsors for the decisive move.

Over-all figures for the number of applicants actually qualifying for entry into Canada during the latest crisis period aren't yet available. The total in 1970 was 1,820.

But in any case they would reflect Ottawa's current immigration policy and not Canadian economic climate rather than the state of affairs in Ulster.

Even inside Northern Ireland there have been plenty of migrations from troubled communities or neighborhoods to areas less plagued by the sectarian strife.

In many cases of this sort, Catholic residents of districts like the devastated Falls section of Belfast move in with relatives or friends in other areas where their co-religionists predominate.

Similarly, Protestant refugees from burned-out houses in the Ardoyne fled to alternative Belfast neighborhoods where they felt safe "among their own."

The result is a further segregation—"polarization" is the word commonly used—of the two rival communities into separate camps, which in turn means a deepening of the already lethal split in Ulster's conflict-ridden society.

On the other hand, outsiders are frequently surprised at the determination shown by thousands of ghetto dwellers to stay where they are, again with their own—despite all the dangers and devastation caused by the situation of near-civil war.

The clan spirit has a tenacious hold on Protestants and Catholics of all classes in Ulster, a fact of life which leaves many of them reluctant even to move to a few miles away from their relatives.

Added to this is the determination to "stick it out", provoked by the belief that a move elsewhere is whole object of "the enemy's" machinations.

Yet the strain on traditional resources has been great and the Northern Ireland government says it has tried by various means to help those residents forced to leave battle-scarred neighborhoods.

One such means is an emergency aid plan which forms part of a broader campaign urging longtime city dwellers to move out of Belfast and start life anew."

Cradle Cap Due Oily Glands

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me about cradle cap and how to get rid of it. I had it as a baby and it went away, but now I have it again as the age of 13. People are starting to tell me that I have a bad case of dandruff.—J.W.

Cradle cap is a form of seborrheic dermatitis, or, in simpler terms, a skin condition related to the tiny skin glands which produce sebum, the oily material that lubricates the skin and keeps it soft and pliable.

Too much of this oily sebum, however, forms crusts, which we call cradle cap.

With babies, frequent shampoon with a good lather, and if necessary the use of some material to soften the crusts gets rid of the trouble in a few weeks or a few months.

There is no reason, of course, that such a crusty condition cannot occur later in life if you've found out. At your age, you are beginning to mature, your glands are in state of vigorous activity, and that could well explain your crusty scalp.

I rather take it for granted that you've been through the shampoo routine—and I dare say that you're going to have to keep it up for a time, too. But when thorough shampooing doesn't solve the trouble, you need some type of medication to soften the crust.

Rather than using a home remedy, the fact is that you'll be better served, save time, trouble and probably money, too —by seeing your doctor, or preferably a dermatologist (skin specialist) for a prescription medication. Frequent shampooing will continue to be essential besides.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Exactly what is pemphigus? My daughter had it for about six months before the doctor knew what it was. Her mouth was so sore she couldn't eat and it spread on her body.

They gave her prednisone and it helped her, but now it has come back and spread inside her nose, and on her toe and on her fingers.

What can be done? No one in our family ever had anything like this.—Mrs. R.J.

Pemphigus, still something of a mystery, is a severe affliction causing formation of blebs and ulcers on the skin and on other membranes. It is thought to be a form of infection, but this is subject to further research.

In any event, the patient is severely ill. Steroids (such as prednisone) help. Why the condition recurred in your daughter's case, I cannot say. Did she relax the prednisone treatment?

The use of so-called immunosuppressive drugs in addition to the steroids also has been found helpful.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you describe the syphilis sore? Would it fill with pus, resembling a small boil? If the sore is in the mouth, could this drain into glands in the neck causing them to swell?—C.C.

Dear Doctor: What size is the syphilis sore?—Mrs. L.M.F.

The "sore" of syphilis is painless, and is called a chancre (pronounced shanker). It appears first as a small red pimple, then ulcerates, producing a punched-out type of ulcer with thick sides. There may be a thin discharge present. After a short time, it disappears, but the disease, of course, remains active.

If the chancre is in the mouth, it resembles a canker sore, but with little if any pain; on the lip, it resembles a cold sore in size.

The glands adjacent to a chancre swell—in the groin, neck, or near wherever the chancre occurs.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Thursday, November 25

Aires (3/arch 21-April 19): A sacrifice scheme can be starting to shew signs of turning into a disaster. Don't wait until adverse events start to pile up before pulling out.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): This year's holiday may be a bit less lavish than past years, but for those who have retained some savings, there'll be much to be thankful for.

Gemini (May 21-June 21): You can dampen everyone's spirits if you insist on reviewing the past year's losses, rather than gains. Follow the positive lead of partners.

Cancer (June 22-July 22): Too many Cancerians sit down to a holiday dinner like a condemned criminal eating his last meal. Go easy on the second helpings.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Plans are apt to run amuck, despite your best efforts to create a festive atmosphere. Those invited from outside the family circle can disappoint.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Hopes early in the day that family gathering will run smoothly are liable to be shortlived. An older person at home becomes a source of worry or annoyance.

Libra (Sept. 22-Oct. 22): Entertain at home this year, rather than leaving your locale to visit kin or friends. Travel delays and mishaps can take the edge off the heartiest appetites.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): It may be very hard to enjoy your own blessings and bounty, knowing that a close tie is probably going through an economic crisis that leaves little to be thankful for.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Today may stand out as memorable for many years to come, but such remembrances may be ones of upsets rather than joys. Do absolutely nothing to provoke a split with partners.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Don't leave any plans or arrangements to chance. Mass confusion can easily occur, especially if you've relied too much on last-minute help from relatives.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): This holiday can find you surrounded by all but the very few who may be closest to your heart. Loved ones, youngsters may prefer to be elsewhere.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): Just as things seem to be working out perfectly for family reunions, events take a troublesome and unexpected turn. Some relatives just can't bury the hatchet.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY (Glamorous, heady influences can build up high hopes in the next four months, but this cycle of gain can come to a screeching halt by April. Heed partner's advice to go slow.

Half Priests Oppose Celibacy

TORONTO (CP) — Fifty-three per cent of English-speaking priests in Canada think the Roman Catholic Church should change its celibacy law to allow priests to marry and still remain active in the ministry, says a study released Tuesday.

However, only four per cent of the priests interviewed said they would "definitely marry," while 46 per cent said they would "definitely remain celibate."

The report, prepared at the Laval University centre for research in religious sociology, was presented at the annual meeting of the National Federation of Senates of Priests.

The 77-page report showed that 36 per cent of the priests were opposed to changing the celibacy law, nine per cent were undecided and two per cent didn't answer.

Analysis showed that priests in Western Canada favored the change—67 per cent—more than those in Eastern Canada—38 per cent—or Ontario with 54 per cent.

By age, the study showed that more than two-thirds of priests under age 30 favored the change. The majority of priests over 50 opposed it.

The study is based on a sampling of attitudes of Canada's English-speaking priests, using questionnaire answers from 558 diocesan priests and 389 religious priests.

The idea of ordaining married men to the priesthood received overwhelming support from Canadian priests of all ages, the study showed, with 81 per cent of all priests favoring the idea, nine per cent opposed and eight per cent either uncertain or not answering.

Quebec Law Could Lead To Abuses

QUEBEC (CP) — Proposed legislation which Communications Minister Jean-Paul L'Allier admitted would give him powers of co-ordination that could lead to abusive control was given second reading in the Quebec national assembly Tuesday.

Mr. L'Allier told the assembly this possibility is largely alleviated by amendments to Bill 37, especially the creation of a permanent national assembly committee that would meet at specific intervals to study the minister's use of the powers.

The committee would also decide upon the usefulness of creating a provincial press agency.

The bill which would give the minister wider responsibilities over government information and co-ordination of the production, acquisition and broadcasting of audio-visual material by public bodies, was unanimously opposed by the three opposition parties.

Earlier the minister was asked by Camille Laurin, legislative leader of the Parti Quebecois, to withdraw or amend the bill because of all the opposition it was running into.

SHOWS 'LACK'

He said the bill's opponents lacked confidence in the government, especially when this government clamored for control of information and the laundering of a department of propaganda.

Fabien Roy (Cred.—Beauce) asked whether the government was trying to establish a form of dictatorship to hide its administrative weaknesses.

Hearing on another of three proposed pieces of communications legislation began Tuesday before the national assembly's communications committee.

Jean-Marc Tremblay, spokesman for Quebec Telephone, said that Bill 35, designed to give the public service board jurisdiction over all communications in Quebec, would create jurisdictional confusion between Ottawa and Quebec.

The Quebec government has maintained that the province has complete jurisdiction over communications, including telephone and cable television.

Hospitals Test Facsimile Device

TORONTO (CP) — An experimental device that could link isolated nursing stations to large hospitals for the relay of material for diagnosis was demonstrated Tuesday.

The device is essentially a radio transmitter linked to a facsimile machine.

Nurses in outlying areas of Northern Ontario would be able to transmit copies of x-rays, blood smears or electrocardiograph readings to a base hospital for expert opinion.

Women Still Underemployed Says Spokesman

MONTREAL (CP) — Working women in Canada are still underpaid and underemployed although they constitute one-third of the total labor force, says Sylva Gelber, director of the federal labor department women's bureau.

"This is not only wasteful of human resources but also detrimental to the Canadian economy," she told a meeting of the Pioneer Women of Canada Tuesday.

"The present pattern of the female labor force in Canada might well be used as the benchmark against which may be measured Canada's forward march in attaining equal opportunity for women."

There were nearly three quarters of a million working mothers, with more than 1.3 million children under age 14, in Canada. There were also about one-third of a million women, mostly widows, who are the sole support of families and another 625,000 single working women.

Yet although women comprised more than 32 per cent of the total labor force, less than four per cent hold managerial jobs, a figure that had hardly changed in recent years in spite of increasing numbers of working women.

Most held jobs as clerical workers or in the lower ranks of service industries.

Breakthroughs in male-dominated professions such as law and medicine were being made in countries such as Britain and France but Canada lagged.

Whether in the industrial sector or the professional or academic world, women generally drew lower pay than men doing the same work in spite of legislation forbidding such practices.

Miss Gelber said pay for men working as machine operators in the women's clothing trade is 74 per cent above the rate for women.

Annual earnings of women engineers and scientists were lower than those of men in the same professions by as much as 41 per cent while men professors earned almost eight per cent more than women.

Teacher Returns Part Salary to Board

CRESTON, B.C. (CP) — The president of the local teachers' association mildly criticized Tuesday a woman teacher who has given up $1,000 of her $11,222 annual salary because she believes teachers are in danger of pricing themselves out of jobs.

Commenting on the decision by Grade 3 teacher Dorothy Shepherd to return $1,000 to the local school board, association president Jim Osbourne said:

"The association feels that Miss Shepherd has placed her own value on her services. If she wishes to return part of her salary that is her prerogative."

Noting that the local school board has agreed to negotiate Miss Shepherd's salary on an individual basis, Mrs. Osbourne added that this was contrary to the philosophy of the school board and the B.C. School Trustees' Association, both of which encourage zone bargaining.

Miss Shepherd sent the board a cheque for $1,000 and a letter which said that "unbridled salary demands will undercut our public image."

Her cheque was accepted as a donation to the school district and will be used for a worthy purpose at the board's discretion.

Burned Ballots Cuts PC Strength

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — The outcome of the Oct. 28 Newfoundland election may not be known until after Christmas because somebody burned the ballots in Sally Cove.

The Progressive Conservatives lost one of their 21 seats Tuesday when a recount of votes in St. Barbe South was dropped after Mr. Justice H. G. Puddester of Newfoundland Supreme Court received confirmation that 165 ballots had been burned.

Conservatives said they would take immediate legal steps to force a by-election which could be held within five or six weeks.

Premier Joseph Smallwood and other Liberal government spokesmen declined to comment on the likelihood of a by-election.

Conservative Leader Frank Moores was out of the province and could not be reached for comment.

An official count from the northwest coast district earlier this month showed Conservative Ed Maynard with 1,798 votes and Liberal Trevor Bennett with 1,748. Mr. Bennett requested the recount.

Howard Strong, chief electoral officer, said he did not plan to take any legal action against the person who burned the ballots.

Mr. Strong said if either party asked that charges be laid, the request would be passed on to the justice department.

Lawyers for both parties said it was unlikely they would lay charges.

They said it was understood ballots at the Sally Cove poll were burned after the election night count by a person who did not know they should have been saved for a possible recount.

The 13th of 24 polls was located in the community of 250 about 70 miles north of Corner Brook.

William Marshall, Conservative member of the legislature for St. John's East and Mr. Maynard's lawyer for the recount, said in an interview there was a legal procedure that could force the government to call a byelection.

Mr. Marshall said the Supreme Court would be petitioned by the party or "an interested voter" to have the election in the district declared void.

He said it was likely the petition would be approved by the court.

It would then be the duty of George Clarke, the Speaker in the last house, to call a byelection.

Although Mr. Clarke lost to a Conservative in Carbonear, he had "certain duties" that continued until the next house was called together.

Mr. Clarke's district, along with five others, is scheduled for a recount between now and Nov. 30.

Liberal William P. Saunders was confirmed by a recount Thursday as the winner in Bay de Verde where he received 21 votes more than Conservative Brendan Howard.

Golda Meir At Spy Wedding

TEL AVIV (AP) — A striking redhead who belonged to an ill-fated Israeli spy mission was given away in marriage Tuesday by Premier Golda Meir.

The bride, Marcelle Ninio, 41, spent 13 years in an Egyptian prison. The groom was Eli Ben-Zur, a retired lieutenant colonel nov on Israel's citrus marketing board.

The mission involved an attempt to blow up British and American institutions in Egypt in order to embarrass the Cairo government.

The plot was foiled by Egyptian police.

Two agents were executed by the Egyptians, one committed suicide and four, including Miss Ninio, were jailed. In 1967, they were freed in exchange for Egyptian prisoners of war.

China May Spell Out Today Future Role in UN Arms Talks

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — China may spell out today what role it will play in future United Nations disarmament talks.

Ambassador Huang Hua, China's permanent UN delegate, was scheduled to address the 131-nation General Assembly as it approached the end of its debate on a Soviet proposal for a world conference on disarmament to supplement the work of the 26-nation disarmament committee meeting in Geneva.

UN diplomats anticipated that Huang would give Peking's views on the whole approach to disarmament rather than limiting his statement to the Soviet proposal.

Answers to these questions were awaited:

—Would Peking attend a world disarmament conference if one were called?

—Would it announce it is joining the Geneva disarmament committee, the principal vehicle for arms negotiations for the last decade?

Or would it, like France, boycott the committee?

The Chinese already have rejected a Soviet proposal for private summit talks among the nuclear powers and have spoken out already against deals made privately by the Russians and the Americans.

Some diplomats close to the Chinese believe their aversion to the superpowers would rule out their participation in the Geneva talks. The United States and the Soviet Union alternate as chairmen at Geneva.

Huang, former ambassador to Canada, delivered China's first speech in the 16-country Security Council Tuesday. It largely was a repeat of some of what Chiao Kuan-hua, deputy foreign minister, said in the assembly last week.

Huang said the "colonialists and neo-colonialists, and particularly the one or two superpowers, have not ceased their activities in practising power politics and in carrying out aggression, interference, subversion and control against other countries and people."

He said there is no peace on earth and the danger of a new world war still exists.

"We regard it as our bounden duty to give support to the just struggles of the people of all countries."

Huang's speech was in response to greetings from members of the council. He is expected to deal with the substance of the charge at a later time.

China is expected to add a radical element to the dealings of the council in the course of time, certainly going down the line with the Africans who complain about the Portuguese colonies and the white-minority governments.

In other matters at the UN Tuesday:

China was elected to the Economic and Social Council, a 27-country body that deals with various UN aid programs. It is a major battleground for developing countries in the struggle for more trade and aid from the developed.

A report Tuesday said the Chinese have been far from helpful in attempts to find a secretary-general to replace U Thant, who retires at the end of the year.

The report said France asked the Chinese about their preferences of known candidates for the job and got no answer.

The search for a new secretary-general has been held up while the assembly decided whether to replace the Nationalists of Taiwan with the Communists of Peking.

But there are no indications of any progress being made to find a replacement and no indications of major discussions among the Big Five, who in the end have the final say on the matter.

Canada Circulates Petition in UN Against Nuclear Tests

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada has circulated a resolution that calls on nuclear countries to undertake immediately "unilateral or negotiated measures of restraint" that would suspend nuclear tests or limit their size.

The resolution, for which Canada found 14 co-sponsors, also stresses the urgency of halting all nuclear tests in all environments.

It is one of three resolutions calling for an end to nuclear testing now before the General Assembly's main political committee. Because it embraces a fairly wide disarmament area and yet contains moderate language, it stands the best chance of success.

The Canadian resolution asks for the restraint of the nuclear powers pending "the early entry into force of a comprehensive ban on all nuclear weapons tests."

Without mentioning names, the resolution is directed at the United States, the Soviet Union, France and China. The U.S. and the Soviet Union have recently exploded nuclear devices underground and China and France have tested such devices in the atmosphere.

The resolution urges all states which have not done so to adhere without further delay to the partial test ban which prohibits testing on or above the surface. This applies to France and China.

Nixon May Order Dockers to Work

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A federal mediator says President Nixon may invoke the Taft-Hartley Act in an effort to get U.S. East and Gulf Coast longshoremen back to work following a breakdown in negotiations aimed at ending the 55-day dock strike.

Chief federal mediator J. Curtis Counts said Tuesday after unsuccessful meetings with labor and management representatives at Miami Beach, Fla., that he considered Taft-Hartley action by the president "a real possibility."

Thomas Gleason, president of the International Longshoremen's Association, said dock workers would obey a back-to-work order if it were imposed under a cooling-off period.

Union officials have estimated some 45,000 ILA members and an additional 30,000 members of related unions are affected by the walkout, which results from lack of a new contract.

James Dickman, president of the Council of North Atlantic Shipping Association, said industry representatives will remain in Miami Beach today to decide whether to ask Nixon to impose a cooling off period of up to 90 days.

The North Atlantic strike began Oct. 1 when a contract covering stevedores from Maine and Virginia expired. It quickly spread from Wilmington, N.C., to Galveston, Tex., as longshoremen walked out in sympathy.

Increase in Seaway Tolls Is Opposed

THUNDER BAY, Ont. (CP) — Toll increases on the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence waterway system could drive away traffic from the system, George E. Franklin, chairman of the Great Lakes Waterway Development Association, said yesterday.

Mr. Franklin, also vice-chairman of Manitoba Pool Elevators, said an increase proposed in the Carr report "will be a potent factor in determining by what means much of the downbound United States grain traffic gets to export markets."

It also will increase the probability of "large-scale diversions of iron ore shipments to U.S. mills by means other than the seaway."

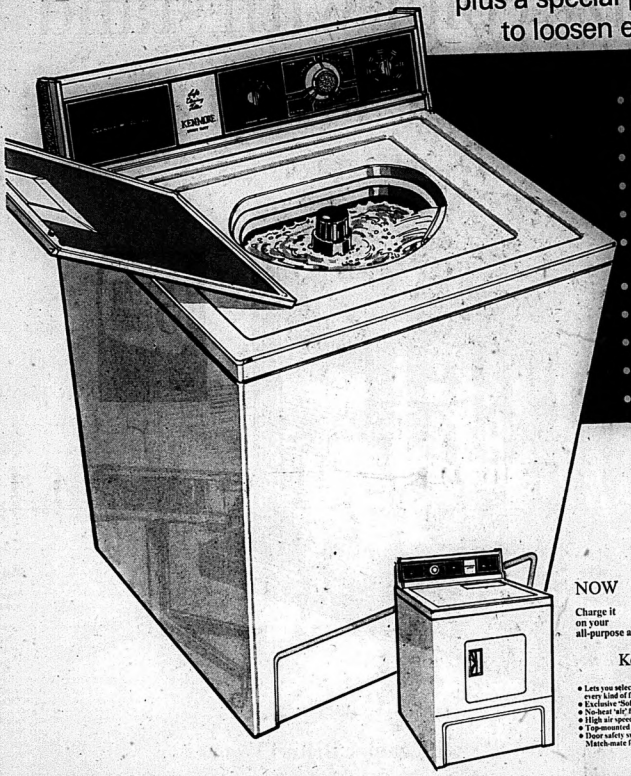
He told the Thunder Bay Rotary Club that toll increases would be detrimental to the economy of Western Canada.

The Carr report, by Dr. D. Wm. Carr and Associates, was tabled in the Commons last January by Transport Minister Donald Jamieson. It proposes that tolls on the Canadian section of the St. Lawrence seaway be increased by 27.5 per cent between 1972 and 1976.

Mr. Franklin disagreed with a statement in the report that two-way grain-iron ore traffic makes bulk cargo hauling by Canadian carriers so profitable that the proposed toll increase would be inconsequential.

The proposed increase, he said, is the most "dire tolls threat" ever posed against the waterway in its 13-year history.

"If the upbound Canadian iron ore traffic destined for United States' ports is diverted out of the seaway because of toll increases or for any other reason, then the costs of transporting cargoes of Canadian grain downbound will sooner or later go up too.



"The cost of transporting Canadian grain to Canadian markets comes right out of the pockets of Canadian farmers who are faced with rising production and marketing costs and fixed or declining income from export sales.

"Any increase in production and marketing costs inevitably means less buying power in the hands of Western Canada. That is a stark fact which makes the subject of seaway tolls of vital interest not only to prairie retailers in every line of business, but to professional men, to Canadian manufacturers, and to federal, municipal and provincial government tax gatherers as well."

Daring Hijacker Leaps Into Night

Prison Guards Seized

RAHWAY, N.J. (AP) — A ranking New Jersey state police officer said today troopers and corrections officers would storm Rahway state prison, where convicts who rioted were holding the warden and five guards as hostages.

An Associated Press reporter asked state police Lieut. Gordon Hector, who is principal spokesman for Col. David B. Kelly, superintendent of the state police, "Are you going to storm the prison?"

"Yes, we are," Hector replied.

About 50 helmeted troopers, all armed with shotguns, began massing at the entrance to a tunnel-like corridor that leads through the outer wall of the prison into the yard.

A state police spokesman said earlier that 150 troopers and 100 correction officers were standing by at the prison. Police from neighboring towns also were on hand.

The prisoners were holding Warden Rush Yukcevich and the guards after submitting a list of demands they wanted relayed to the governor.

There was no immediate comment from the governor.

A sixth guard who was released as a go-between pleaded: "Don't let it be another Attica."

Eleven guards were reported injured, three with stab wounds.

It was not known how many of the prison's 1,500 convicts were rioting, or how many hostages were being held.

Eddie Mullins, a corrections officer, said he had been held by the convicts but was released to serve as a go-between to relay their demands. He said the warden was still being held shortly before dawn today.

"The inmates feel it is going to be another Attica," Mullins said. He was referring to the Sept. 10 riot at Attica state prison in upstate New York which claimed 43 lives.

"They have many demands they would like to see met and they are justified in their demands," Mullins said. "They permitted me to leave because I promised them I was truly concerned with their conditions, and I am."

Their key demand was for an immediate talk with Gov. William T. Cahill to discuss the situation.

Mullins issued a plea to state officials not to storm the jail. "The fellows don't want to be killed," he said of the convicts. "Don't let it be another Attica. We can do it different. There is an alternative."

Captive Crew Makes Seattle-Reno Flight

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A hijacker apparently parachuted to freedom from a commandeered passenger jet after extorting $200,000 from Northwest Airlines with a bomb threat, authorities say.

Two of four parachutes obtained by the middle - aged hijacker from airline officials in Seattle were missing when the plane landed here with four crew members aboard, the FBI reported today.

Officials at McChord Air Force Base near Tacoma refused to say whether the pilots of three planes that trailed the hijacked Boeing 727 airliner saw any parachutes during the flight.

Authorities said the hijacker probably parachuted from the plane sometime after it left Seattle Wednesday night, but apparently there were no witnesses to his escape.

Thirty-six passengers and two stewardesses had been let off the plane in Seattle. But airline officials said the hijacker locked the remaining four crew members in the cockpit after the plane took off again.

"He's in the back of the airplane and everyone else is in front," a Federal Aviation Administration supervisor said during the Seattle-to-Reno flight.

The plane made the run at 10,000 feet with its rear stairwell open so the hijacker could bail out if he chose. At that altitude no oxygen was required.

"It would be a very safe drop," said John Wheeler, a Boeing Co. spokesman. "He'd be away from flaps and engines and go straight down."

The FBI's Campbell said to his knowledge no hijacker had ever escaped by parachuting from a plane.

Law-enforcement officers with dogs combed Reno International Airport and the surrounding area after the plane landed. There was no sign of the hijacker, the money or any bomb.

"There's no way he could have got off in Reno," said Harold E. Campbell, special agent in charge of FBI operations in Nevada. "We had the airport covered."

The FBI's Campbell said to his knowledge no hijacker had ever escaped by parachuting from a plane.

Law-enforcement officers with dogs combed Reno International Airport and the surrounding area after the plane landed. There was no sign of the hijacker, the money or any bomb.

A stewardess said the hijacker had eyeliners which looked like dynamite and wires led to a briefcase he carried.

The hijacker, who officials say probably boarded the plane in Portland, Ore., took over the jetliner shortly before it was to land in Seattle on a flight from Washington, D.C.

A stewardess said he handed her a note, which said he was hijacking the aircraft, and ordered her to relay instructions to officials on the ground that he wanted $200,000 and four parachutes delivered to him when the plane landed. He displayed the briefcase and cylinders to the stewardess, officials said.

"The passengers apparently were unaware a hijacking was under way.

"The crew just said something might be wrong with the plane," Pat Minsch of Anchorage, Alaska, said in Seattle.

After the plane was refueled and the money and parachutes delivered by an airline employee, Flight 305 took off with three men crew members, one stewardess and the hijacker.

The pilot, William Scott, said the plane would have to stop in Reno, 500 miles from Seattle, for refueling on a flight that airline officials said was headed for Mexico City. But FBI spokesman Campbell later said the hijacker "gave no destination" for the crew to follow.

"We have no information on the man," Campbell told reporters early today. He said the crew offered a description of the hijacker but he did not elaborate.

Scott said the hijacker treated us very courteously."

Because the rear door was open, the cabin area lost pressure and the temperature in the plane dropped to seven degrees below zero, FAA officials said. The cabin lights were dimmed at no orders from the hijacker, Scott said.

Other members of the hijacked crew were identified as Harold E. Anderson, first officer; Robert Tatarzak, second officer, and Tina Mackey, stewardess. All were based in Minneapolis.

Campbell said a search for the hijacker would begin in the Portland area of Oregon.

Girl, 11, Shot Guarding Pup

HAMILTON (CP) — An 11-year-old girl was shot through the left cheek today as she knelt inside the rear door of her house protecting her puppy from gunfire coming from a neighboring house.

Annette Thompson and her mother were just going to bed when they heard several shots come over the back yard of their home, police said.

Both ran to the kitchen where Annette found her puppy cowering from the shots near the rear door.

Annette was taken to hospital where she was treated for the bullet wound and released in good condition.

Peter Ciesielski, 34, was charged with criminal negligence and with dangerous use of a firearm.

First Winter Storm To Ease by Evening

TORONTO (CP) — The first winter storm sweeping along the eastern seaboard of the United States combined with a slow - moving disturbance over northern Ontario to bring snowfall amounts ranging from one to four inches across the province today.

The snow is expected to continue in eastern Ontario during the day and ease up towards evening.

Provincial police at Brockville said four inches had fallen by 8 a.m.

At least one traffic death and scores of minor accidents were reported Wednesday night and early today here and in Niagara Peninsula areas as an inch or more of wet snow caused slippery conditions.

Maria Addente, 2, of Toronto, was killed Wednesday night when her father's car spun out of control on a snow-covered Toronto street and was in collision with another vehicle.

Tire snow tapered off about midnight and a mixture of sleet and rain is expected in those sections, as well as southwestern Ontario where an inch to two inches fell overnight.

Provincial police in Toronto closed off the eastbound section of Highway 401 for more than an hour because of several accidents. One six - car pile-up occurred.

Lake Traffic Jam

These foreign freighters were among 22 waiting in lower Lake Huron Wednesday as the push continued to beat the winter freeze-up in the St. Lawrence Seaway. These ships were waiting either for pilots or for dock space. Traffic was heavier than usual because of the dock strike in eastern U.S. ports. (AP Photo).

Pakistan Claims India Attacks in Five Areas

NEW DELHI (CP) — Pakistan charged today that Indian forces, supported by tanks and artillery, were continuing their attacks in five border areas of East Pakistan.

Pakistani President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan said in a speech while dedicating a heavy machine-gun project that relations with India were heading for the "point of no return."

Pakistan will defend "its honor and territorial integrity with all the forces at its command" in the event of an open conflict with India, the broadcast quoted him as saying.

A dispatch from Dacca, East Pakistan, said officials there reported that the Indians had opened a new front Wednesday with air support in the north Bengal area and gained some ground.

But Radio Pakistan said Pakistani troops beat back two attacks, killing 480 Indian soldiers and damaging two tanks.

The broadcast said seven Pakistanis were killed and 11 wounded in the fresh fighting near the Hilli and Dinajpur district of north Bengal. The area is more than 150 miles north of the Jessore district where Pakistan claimed Monday that Indian troops had launched an "all-out attack."

Indian officials here denied that any New Delhi forces were fighting across the border but admitted that the army has permission to cross into East Pakistan for self-defence.

In Washington, U.S. State Secretary William Rogers called in representatives of both nations and urged a mutual troop withdrawal from the border areas.

Forty UN technicians were flown out of Dacca Wednesday and many other foreign nationals began leaving the embattled province, some by orders of their governments. Dacca was placed under curfew for the second time in a week.

Canadians living in border areas were warned of the danger of full-scale fighting breaking out.

In all, there are 48 registered Canadians in East Pakistan, 40 in West Pakistan and about 107 in India close enough to the borders of the two states to be in potential danger.

An external affairs department spokesman in Ottawa said those in the Pakistani states have been warned either by the British high commissioner or by the British Broadcasting Corp. to either move to places of greater safety or to ensure large enough stocks of supplies to last through any possible shortages.

Those along the borders in India have been given the same warnings.

Pakistani troops in civilian and army trucks were seen moving in large numbers to the border between West Pakistan and India.

The Pakistanis say at least 36 battalions of Indian border security forces—30,000 men—are deployed against the East Pakistan frontier. They claimed earlier that 100,000 Indian troops were deployed but did not specify where.

TEMPERATURES

Synopsis: Snowfall amounted to from one to two inches across the province this morning. While snow is expected to continue in the northern localities, accumulations will be diminishing as the controlling weather system pursues its eastward drift today. In southeastern Ontario the snow should also ease up towards evening. Temperatures will hold in the 30s and will trend towards seasonal values before the weekend is over.

Indian Is Facing Weapons Charge

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — A hearing into the case of former chief Kenneth Marsden of the Alderville reserve, near here, was postponed today due to the illness of Judge R. B. Baxter.

Mr. Marsden has been charged with possessing an unregistered, restricted weapon.

Britain Will Try to 'Sell' Rhodesian Settlement to UN

LONDON (CP) — Britain is sending a foreign office minister to Canada and the United States to seek international backing for its Rhodesian settlement in the looming United Nations struggle on the controversial issue.

Minister of State Joseph Godber headed for Washington for talks Friday with the state department on the first stage of a journey that will also take him to Ottawa Saturday and to UN headquarters in New York.

The proposed settlement in the six-year Rhodesian dispute was brought back today from Salisbury by Foreign Secretary Sir Alec Douglas-Home, who conferred with Prime Minister Edward Heath and other cabinet members of the cabinet soon after his return.

Douglas-Home said the agreement worked out with Smith provides for amendments to the Rhodesian constitution that will remove clauses restricting black voting rights.

"This will be replaced by arrangements providing for unimpeded progress toward majority rule," he said.

But a British government white paper on the proposed settlement, released here at the same time as Douglas-Home spoke, made no mention of a possible date for majority rule in Rhodesia.

This could well be a sticking point among left-wing members of the opposition Labor party and African and Asian nations in the United Nations. They are suspicious that the British have arranged a sellout to the white minority in Rhodesia.

The Salisbury agreement has to be approved both here and in Rhodesia before it can be implemented and the sanctions lifted.

Britain is expected to face tough demands in the UN for ironclad guarantees that black interests will be assured before sanctions can be lifted.

At UN headquarters Godber will meet with other leading delegates on the Security Council. Britain already has asked for a special meeting of the council to report details of the agreement.

Recreation Use of Bay to Be Studied

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

A waterways recreational scheme covering the area between Trenton and Kingston will be implemented within the next three years.

The impact of the project could result in a comprehensive development plan for the entire Quinte region and lead to a massive cleanup of polluted local outdoor facilities.

Labelled the Canada Ontario Rideau Trent Severn report, the plan is designed to prepare waterways along the three eastern Ontario rivers for future recreational use. So far, most of the emphasis has been placed on the artificial canal areas along these rivers but the committee now has decided to commence intensive studies of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Simcoe, both important links in the overall waterways setup.

A meeting last night between the report committee and residents of the Quinte area was organized by the Lake Ontario Regional Development Council to provide local citizens with an opportunity to give CORTS their recommendations for development of the bay area.

Since the Rideau enters Lake Ontario at Kingston and the Trent's mouth is at Trenton, the 12-man committee feels the Quinte area could become a focal point for future recreational activity. With 5 million people living within a one-hour drive of the region, provision must be made for the expected influx of visitors who will make use of the proposed facilities.

The assembly held at Loyalist College, was the first of its kind in the immediate area. Another meeting two months ago in Campbellford dealt with criticisms of CORTS' recommendations. In preparation for more than a year, of the lower Trent region.

Don Farmer, chief of the canals department in the Ministry of Transport, told the 75-person gathering that although the program was basically directed toward recreation, "it hasn't overlooked other areas of development. But recreation appears to be the growth industry for the area under considera tion."

His committee, which began its study three years ago, submitted a report to senior officials in both governments last July listing 51 recommendations for development of the river systems. Divided into six categories, it touched on pollution control, open space areas, preservation of historic and natural sites, public parkland, commercial facilities and public recreational facilities.

Many persons attending the meeting were concerned about the difficulties in obtaining land for the project.

Belleville alderman Robin Jeffrey suggested that a freeze be placed on waterfront commercial useage so that private owners and developers do not take all the available land. The question of zoning or strip planning was also raised by concerned guests.

Mr. Farmer agreed there might be some problems in attaining the committee's goal of 25 per cent open space for the Quinte area. He informed the audience that CORTS intended, where possible, to preserve crown land and secure swamp and wildlife areas in order to meet its recommendation.

"How to implement open space will be one of the sticking problems the two governments will have to deal with," said a spokesman for the project. Mr. Farmer emphasized that the public won't be priced out of the market.

Mrs. Jeffrey also wanted to know about the role of local historical societies and other public organizations which might want to have a say in what is preserved or improved upon. A major problem for the committee has been to hear these voices and it will invite any interested bodies to make recommendations.

The question of the pollution of the Bay of Quinte was raised by Jack Evans of Picton. He suggested that if it was cleaned up, as CORTS proposes, the trans-Prince Edward County water pipeline now under discussion might be scrapped and a great saving made to taxpayers.

A representative from the Commission pointed out that causeways such as those from Trenton to Baker's Island and Belleville to the county "cross a bowl effect" in the bay, and recommended that CORTS undertake the construction of bridges to help alleviate the problem.

More meetings will be held in the future, but for now committee members will be kept busy consulting the municipal bodies and local organizations to formulate a conceptual plan of the area for incorporation in entire CORTS scheme.

Personal Touch to Hotel

Mike Broadhurst, newly appointed manager of the Four Seasons Hotel stays, "I would like to greet every patron of the hotel and talk to them individually." Mr. Broadhurst (left, greeting visitors) has been making changes since his arrival several days ago, and is attempting to get some "sparkle" into the hotel.

Four Seasons Manager Plans to Add Sparkle

The new Four Seasons Hotel manager says, "I enjoy being bothered by customers, that is what I am here for."

Mike Broadhurst, a native of England, replaces Chris Cornwall earlier this month as manager of the hotel and since that time has been making changes.

"When I say that I am here to be bothered, I mean I want to hear any complaint or comment a customer might have on the service of the hotel," said Mr. Broadhurst. "I took a room in the building so that I might be close at hand, to be available to the clients at any time."

Mr. Broadhurst, who much prefers to be called Mike, has been with the Four Seasons chain only five months. Before coming to manage the Belleville operation, he had been the assistant to the food and beverage manager for the whole chain.

"This is where my first concern is," he said. "While in England as a student, I studied catering and was later employed by a large catering firm. For me and my customers, the food must be flawless.

"The food in the Four Seasons chain has a reputation of being tremendous, and it is means selling a smaller menu but getting the quality, then this is what we'll do," said Mr. Broadhurst.

When asked if any major changes were expected in the hotel, Mr. Broadhurst said, "we are going to get the sparkle back into the dining room and make the hotel a very personal thing."

Mr. Broadhurst, who expects nothing from his staff that he hasn't done himself says, "when the service is flawless and the food is perfect, we will enlarge the variety."

A major change to be made by Mr. Broadhurst will be the revamping of the lounge staff.

"There will be more girls serving than in the past, at least in peak periods, and these girls will be outfitted in a uniform," said Mr. Broadhurst.

The outfit for the girls will be a bright red hot pants suit with knee-length white boots.

The girls will also be retrained for their duties.

Ideas are also going through Mr. Broadhurst's head on a winter recreation program for clients of the hotel. Part of his plans include flooding the tennis court to make an ice-skating surface and reopening the pool.

Recreation Plan Proposed

Don Farmer, right, chief of canals division in the Ministry of Transport, stands beside a map of eastern Ontario showing waterway routes proposed for recreational development. According to the fed eral and provincial governments' plan, the Bay of Quinte will become a major link between the Rideau and Trent-Severn arms of the scheme. Details to LORDC president Don Rodgers.

Names of UE Loyalists To Appear in Pamphlet

United Empire Loyalists from six communities have agreed to publish a limited list of names of pioneers in Lennox and Addington and Prince Edward Counties.

As an uncompleted centennial project of the Bay of Quinte Branch members have been compiling names gathered from old records and burial grounds throughout the two counties. This information has been placed in the hands of Dr. H. C. Burleigh of Bath. It was the branch genealogist who suggested the material be typed under his supervision and published in pamphlet form to be placed on sale.

Robert Kirk, an historian and genealogist from Streetsville, as guest speaker at the November UEL meeting, drew attention to the Order in Council of 1789, passed at the city of Quebec.

"Then, Loyalists who have adhered to the Unity of the Empire and joined the Royal Standard before the Treaty of Separation in the year 1783, and all their children and their descendants by either sex are to be distinguished by the following capitals affixed to their names "UE," alluding to their great principle "The Unity of the Empire."

The United Empire Loyalists' Association of Ontario is celebrating its 75th anniversary this year. On May 27, 1914, the UEL Association of Canada was incorporated by special Act of Parliament of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Kirk referred to the association as a lineage and patriotic society whose purpose is to unite the descendants of the UE Loyalists, to preserve their history and collect and preserve data and material pertaining to their times.

It has been estimated that there are approximately three and a half million descendants of those early pioneers "who chose exile and the hardship of carving out a new home in the wilderness rather than the easier choice under the circumstance of rebellion".

As an historical association the UEL offers to preserve their heritage in co-operation with service clubs, museums, libraries and schools. A great increase is apparent of late years in genealogy and history and the growing admissions into museums shows the trend in this respect.

Potter Says Province Still Seeking Sand

The Ontario government is still seeking other sources of sand for Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. in Picton.

"Assure everyone that attempts are being made to find an alternative source," said Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP for Quinte, from his Queen's Park office yesterday.

"But it isn't be done overnight," he added.

Dr. Potter said that in the controversy over trucking out dunes from the Sandbanks for use at the cement plant, the truth is not always told.

"That is private property that the sand is coming from. The plant owns it and has a perfect right to remove the sand. A private individual wouldn't like it if the government stepped in and told him he couldn't use the sand on his property, and the government wouldn't like it either if we stopped it from quarrying sand without finding it another supply."

The company has an annual requirement of about 60,000 tons to meet its operation needs, Bruce Price, vice-president of operations told The Intelligencer earlier this week.

Although the government assured county residents before the Oct. 31 election that another source of sand would be found for the company and quarrying stopped, resort owners have complained that the quarrying is continuing at the same rate as before.

The company is now stockpiling sand for next summer's operation. This move came in response to complaints of resort owner Mrs. R. P. Barratt.

Mrs. Barratt said that last summer trucks roared past her resort as early as three a.m. and that bulldozer spotlight disturbed campers vacationing at Sandbanks Beach resorts.

She said that quarrying has increased in the past year and the number of loads seems to have tripled in recent months.

Mr. Price has denied the charges and said the amount of sand used is down slightly.

He said that an alternate sand source remains "a very vague thing still", although the government has indicated that other sites have been considered.

Certificate Marks Service

Lieutenant Colonel Jack Vance, Commanding Officer, Medical Services Command, Baden Soellingen, Germany, presents Private Graeme Potts with a certificate of his service with the unit. Pvt. Potts has been serving with the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment for more than two years. The Moira Secondary School student spent three months in Europe this summer during which he got only took part in large scale, multi-national manoeuvres but also found time to tour Germany, Holland and eastern France. Private Potts is the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Potts, 71 Hastings Street, Belleville. Lt.-Col. Vance is from Tweed.

Make-work Project's Pay Cut

About 66 men working in the Belleville area through the Ontario Seasonal Employment Program took a 10 per cent cut in wages recently, when the government discovered they were being paid too much.

The workers, most chosen from welfare and unemployment rolls, were hired by the department of transportation and communications for tree-cutting projects along highways. They are cutting diseased elms near Marysville, Madoc and along sections of Highway 37.

They were contracted to work for a guaranteed period of five months at a wage of $2.77 an hour.

However, after they had signed a contract, the workers on welfare rolls found they were to receive a 27-cent-an-hour cut, to $2.50 an hour. They had received the higher rate for their first week of work.

They didn't like it.

In Preston, Ont., the men quit their make-work jobs.

The wage paid workers on the Ontario Seasonal Employment Program will remain at $2.50 an hour, despite pleas and petitions to up the stipend to $2.77.

Dr. Potter said from Queen's Park that the wage "is not going to be changed".

"They're damned lucky to get it," he said.

The government will not raise the hourly way for seasonal employees, said the Quinte MPP, because "we're trying to make as much work available for as many as possible".

Dr. Potter said the $2.50 an hour was the amount originally set by the government. But before the scheme was fully launched the department of transportation and communications mistakenly hired Reg. Turton, director of Social and Family services for Hastings County, believes the province will emerge from this situation with egg on its face.

He said organizers of the 1971 project had been "too hasty in their actions".

Mr. Turker explained the provincial government looks to Ottawa for financial aid on these projects, Provision of funds comes under federal government conditions.

He claims this is the reason for the cutbacks.

"The provincial government had already committed itself when the federal government said 'you can't make that offer'.

"The province may have to review the situation. It may have to pay 27 cents out of its own coffers," he prophesied.

The $2.50 now being paid to the workers for a 40-hour work week, guarantees them $100 a week.

Mr. Tucker says those workers who quit in Preston and other centres, will face being cut from welfare rules, under the federal government's "get tight" scheme.

"Besides," he added, "they're lgtter off making an average of $433 per month as against $250 on welfare. Are they going to cut off their noses to spite their faces?"

"The men are in a bit of a bind. If they quit their jobs, they're listed as not on the job market."

Unlike 1970, when 60 per cent of the workers came from welfare rolls and the remainder taken from Canada Manpower, the 66 men employed in the three work lots near Belleville, have been selected by welfare.

Camp Costs Questioned

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward county councillors have endorsed a resolution forwarded by Victoria County seeking a review of campsite rates at provincial parks.

The resolution stated that members of the Department of Lands and Forests, Rene Brunelle, might review the rates keeping in mind the revenue and cost factors.

A letter from Victoria County pointed out that private operators of tourist trailer camps in some cases have been unable to operate and supply the necessary services to travellers at a cost comparable to the rates charged by provincial campsites.

It was suggested that pub lic money is being used to subsidize provincial parks to the detriment of private enterprise.

Agriculture Federation Holds Annual Banquet

Guest speaker for the occasion was Grant Ketcheson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen Ketcheson of Madoc, who earlier this year spent five months in Britain under a Nuffield Scholarship.

Mr. Ketcheson gave his audience a description of such matters as snowmobile operation, interest rates on government loans and loss of milk subsidy quota.

Dianne Gunning of Tweed, who was named Canadian Dairy Princess after a year as the Ontario princess.

Federation president Donald Sills reviewed the year's activities which included meetings with speakers covering a series of topics ranging all the way from the early years of radio to assessment and taxation and farm costs.

Resolutions had been forwarded to the OFA for presentation to the government on such matters as snowmobile operation, interest rates on government loans and loss of milk subsidy quota.

Library Dilemma

City Council remains in a quandary over the issue of additional library facilities — whether to sanction a $250,000 two-storey addition to the existing library on Dundas Street or provide one or more branch libraries elsewhere. The matter has been left with City Manager J. R. Reynolds for a report and recommendation.

The problem of cost is a pressing one and will have to be weighed against other needs when the capital works budget comes up for review before long. As for location this might seem a less difficult decision, despite the divisive character of Monday's discussion.

Less difficult, that is, in the light of Belleville's contemporary growth. To be sure this city in a sense has just been "discovered." New plants and commercial establishments, hotel and restaurant facilities, not to mention the Quinte Mall, have combined to give it a new and more desirable image. With these have come increased population; and this in mind it might seem the logical thing to provide the extra branch facilities.

On the other hand, if this is pursued we envisage a degree of fragmentation that could militate against both the library system itself and citizen needs. We do not oppose change where it is desirable, but we do not think Belleville is yet of a size where more satellite libraries are justified.

The Corby Library could not be more centrally located to serve the entire city than it is now. Downtown moreover remains the focal point, the heart, of the community, and the library, as one is forced to note on the most desirable and most frequented institutions of this central core. Allow its influence to deteriorate and a parallel trend could set in downtown. The library ,despite its unwritten requirement of comparative silence, is also a community centre.

The central library also has the specialist facilities that a branch library does not. One who should be in a position to know is Chief Librarian Miss Olive Delaney. Her opinion is that construction of new branch libraries would weaken the library position by dividing the available book collection. For these reasons, practical as much as sentimental and financial, we believe the additional facilities would be best housed in an addition to the existing library. In the future additional branch libraries may be appropriate, but the need remains for comprehensive central facilities which only the Corby library can provide.

Indian Artist

It might be almost sacrilegious to suggest that the paintings of Canada's legendary Group of Seven artists have a garishness and artificiality about them that does not quite conform to the real quality of the country's interior. But then we cannot claim to have seen them all . . . prints of the last surviving member of the "seven," A. Y. Jackson, incidentally, are on view in a Front Street store.

More in the realm of realism — and it came through even on the television screen, was even enhanced by it — are the remarkable paintings of Allen Sapp, a 42-year-old Saskatchewan Indian seen on the CBC's Telescope program Tuesday night. Sapp emerged from poverty, illiteracy and illness to discover a talent for art only three years ago. His work came to the attention of a doctor who assisted and encouraged him financially and arranged for Sapp's next achievement, a summer professor of art at the University of Saskatchewan. Today his paintings are known from Toronto to Los Angeles.

Sapp's stark scenes of the interior, and of reserve life in particular, cover the kind of ground viewed by the Group of Seven, but they seem to convey more accurately the incredible mold of desolation and beauty that is the Canadian northland in winter. Indian family life, the animals, trapping, hauling logs, the animals — all are there.

There is in these works something of the quality of Roloff Beny's paintings of the prairie scene: the aging farm buildings and rusting equipment of a past day. They represent an exciting new dimension in Canadian art, as well as being a record for posterity of the Indian culture in Canada. It is also a story of personal courage and integrity.

Public Being 'Squeezed Dry'

'Quiet' Liberal Sounds Off on Ottawa's Tax Policies

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — There stood quiet courteous and altogether amiable Gordon Blair, Liberal MP for the Ottawa suburban constituency of Grenville-Carleton in an utterly uncharacteristic mood of bitterness.

Centre of a circle of newsmen in the Parliamentary Press Gallery he was raging:

"We are going to squeeze you dry."

It was astounding talk coming from one of the real "old young pros" in the Liberal party, in fact, a former four-year president of its powerful Ontario wing.

Rhodes scholar, veteran (gravely wounded in action in Italy) of the Irish Regiment of Canada, barrister and both long - time political Liberal "backroom boy" and now MP.

Cool, low-key. No wave-maker. But quiet, effective parliamentarian with talent for party prosiliecal and riding levels alike.

Why, then, was he talking like this of the threat and promise to "squeeze you dry," taking every last nickel in taxes?

Because that is the way Gordon Blair and an increasing number of Liberal parliamentarians have been sounding in the party's Commons Caucus, where Government MPs and Senators gather weekly to tell-or tell off -? Prime Minister Trudeau and his Cabinet about their policies.

It is getting so you cannot tell a Liberal from a Conservative in their mutual criticism of what is — and what is not — going on currently in the federal halls of power.

Ask Gordon Blair about it.

What you question him, is back of that outburst of bitterness about "getting the last nickel?"

Answering, he confirms those reports out of the Liberal Caucus that he and more and more Government MPs are "raising hell with the administration".

He puts it this way:

"We cannot seem to face up to the grave political issue of the day. And that is that taxpayers have gone as far as they are going to go — they are determined to die in on the tax line and pay not a nickel more to any government.

"And so far we cannot face the second great political fact of the day, and that is that if the taxpayers are refusing — and they are adamant about it — to pay more, then governments have to cut their spending or bankrupt the country."

A great many other Liberal MPs — a majority, if not all of the Ontario contingent in the Commons — are saying much the same thing.

The Government's rush to pressure so-called tax "reform" — hefty increases for the middle income groups — has been described by Maritime Conservative Lloyd Crouse and Ontario Tory Marvin Howe as "an indecent race by a greedy administration to grab more and more of the national income."

Not only are an increasing number of Liberal MPs saying it this way — and saying so— but there is almost a head-on raging over it in the Trudeau Cabinet.

Welfare Minister John Munro, Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey, Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Ronald Basford, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier and Finance Minister Edgar Benson are leaders of the Cabinet's "tax and spend" bloc.

Benson is socking it to the worker — and while other lar alike — with stiffer tax rates starting at $8,000 of income.

Mackasey is set to collect a new tax, in the form of universal unemployment insurance that a great many working Canadians do not need, want and will not be over using this side of an idle economic doctrine.

Munro wants, and insists he needs more for welfare and fights any suggestion that people should lift a finger to get it.

Basford and Pelletier dream up new schemes for making life harder for the producer and softer for the individual "not employed" as the Government calls the able-bodied, work-capable segment of the welfare load.

Opposing the high-taxers and big spenders in the Cabinet are some of their ministerial colleagues, much of the Liberal Caucus and possibly Prime Minister Trudeau.

For was it not the Prime Minister who warned the militant sectors of the federal Civil Service that they could "squeeze the lemon (the taxpayers) only so hard?"

"Guess what, dear? This is the last payment on all of our last year's Christmas shopping!"

Presentation to two members of the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer on the eve of their severance of associations with the newspaper were made on Friday and Saturday last. Tangible tributes were paid to Both MacLeod, business staff, who has left for Toronto and to Richard Cowan, circulation manager, who is now en route to Sydney, N.S., where he is associated with the Sydney Post in a similar capacity. The presentations of handsome gifts were made to Mr. Cowan by Claude D. Tice, news editor, and to Miss MacLeod by George H. Carver, sports editor, before assembled members of the various departmental staffs.

An estimated cut of 20 million feet plus 3,000 cords of pulpwood will be taken from the timbered areas of the Bay of Quinte district, according to the Department of Lands and Forests. The register containing the names of transients who have been given shelter at the Belleville police station has been brought up to date. It shows that since the first week of the present year, and up to and including Thursday of this week, 4-520 homeless men have been given lodgings for the night. During the last winter wanderers were fed with hot ,nourishing soup and bread, and the same practice will be adopted this winter. In fact, for all time the transients have been receiving food upon arrival and departure. Through the kindness of numerous church and other organizations, the transients often enjoy many varieties of food remaining from social gatherings.

Toronto Householders Fight High-rise Project

Thomas Coleman in the Globe and Mail

Some North Toronto residents have vowed to flex their political muscles at City Hall to try to prevent construction of a 37-storey apartment tower near Eglinton Avenue and Yonge Street.

They belong to the 700 member Lytton Park residents Association, which calls the tower "an obscenity". The association has urged the Attorney General's Department to prove alleged irregularities — in a city bylaw that authorized construction of the tower in a residential area.

The proposed 350-foot tower, at 500 Duplex Ave., was authorized by City Council in a 1969 rezoning bylaw. The developer, Kasha Construction, has already started the building's foundations.

Residents claim they were not properly informed about density and height changes granted by the city under the zoning bylaw. They also feel the committee of adjustment exceeded its powers in granting concessions to the developer, making the bylaw invalid.

"It would be nothing but an obscenity to build a huge monolith like that in a residential neighborhood," claims Bradley Crawford, a University of Toronto law professor and a negotiator for the residents.

"We've tried to convince the developer to reduce the height of the building or even to build two structures — of 16 or 20 storeys — but he must be unwilling to budge is one or two floors less.

Mr. Crawford, a resident of nearby Briar Hill Avenue, claims the tower would be the tallest building in Metro in terms of elevation above Lake Ontario, and would cast shadows over surrounding residential streets where some homes are valued as high as $100,000.

"The residents haven't adopted the unreasonable position that we don't want any apartments there at all. We have even agreed that the developer can have more than the legal density for the property if he will build shorter structures."

Neighborhood opposition to the apartment tower has crystalized recently, to the point where seven of association members, at $5 a copy, have tripled during the past month.

Hugh Kasha, 60, who along with his brother Gino, 36, is a project director for Kasha Construction says the firm has made considerable alterations to meet objections of residents.

Mr. Crawford said he has solicited help from more than 30 housewives and professionals in the community to search for "flaws" or legal loopholes in the developer's application.

He says Kasha Construction has been a model developer. "They've stuck to the letter of the law at every turn. But the city, in our opinion, has been derelict in many irregularities which could allow us to tie up the whole project in litigation.

Tom Eberlee

Deputy Labor Minister Appointed

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's Queen's Park Bureau

Premier Davis has announced that as of the first of the year, Tom Eberlee, now deputy minister of labor, will be given a new position in charge of implementing the recommendations of the Committee on Productivity that have been accepted by the government.

This will make Mr. Eberlee a mandarin, flag-rank. It will also make him, at 41, one of the most powerful people in the province.

And it also makes him an example to perspiring young reporters that hard work and a close mouth may lead to all manner of high places.

Tom Eberlee's first contact with the legislature buildings was as a quiet but competent young reporter for the Toronto Star.

This was in the days of Leslie Frost, and Eberlee had the distinction that the same Tom Lindsay, where his father was principal of the high school.

With Leslie Frost' anyone from Lindsay automatically had baby water in his veins, and he kept a close and kindly eye on the natives within his ken.

Eventually this led to Eberlee being taken into the prime minister's department as an executive officer, a step into an elevator which the most people never goes only up.

It went on for a very long time. And it was particularly embarrassing as many cabinet ministers and private Progressive Conservative members lived at the hotel and had to cross picket lines.

Robarts quietly moved the quiet young Eberlee into the strike.

And one of the high points of Robarts' career was a Friday morning in the House when, with the public pretty well having given up hope of any early settlement, he was able to announce that thanks to Eberlee's work the union had agreed to accept Carl Goldenberg as a mediator and go back to work.

Not long after he was named deputy Minister of Labor, one of the youngest deputies in our history.

Since he has been in the department, though it has had little public distinction it also has been relatively trouble free. So apparently he has been quietly efficient.

This probably is the great recommendation responsible for his new position.

He now moves back to the prime minister's wing. He will be dealing with the restructuring of cabinet and its committees and other very high level matters. And he will be very much one of the small group of civil servants which has strong power, in some ways perhaps frightening power, in running the province.

Scottish forces were defeated in the Battle of Solway Moss 429 years ago today—in 1542. The defeat at the hands of the English army of Henry VIII broke the spirit of King James V of Scotland, then 30, and he died three weeks later, after the birth of his only legitimate child, Mary, Queen of Scots. James was a sagacious and popular king but when the English invaded, he could not count on the nobles' support.

Solution to World Poverty Vital—Cardinal Leger

Dennis Finlay in the Montreal Gazette

Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger feels he could continue his missionary work in Africa another five or 10 years, "God Willing."

Making his first public appearance in Montreal since arriving Nov. 10, the former archbishop of Montreal said at a press conference he has lost no energy since he resigned his post in 1967 to become a missionary.

He is in Montreal to consult with administrators of Cardinal Leger and His Endeavors, the third world aid program for underprivileged nation he founded Jan. 1, 1968.

He is also completing work on a brochure, to be published in four languages before the end of December, in which he explains his philosophy on help needed by Third World countries.

He chided reporters for their persistent speculation that he is in poor health. Although he underwent treat in Sacre Coeur Hospital in Cartierville when he arrived, the cardinal looked healthy.

He seemed tired and his hair was a shade whiter than when he moved to Africa, but there were no other noticeable changes in his physique. He returns to Africa tomorrow.

Cardinal Leger criticized developed countries for inadequate aid to Third World nations unable to afford social welfare.

"I'm living in a parish of 8,000 people where the annual (per capita) revenue is $80 a year," he said. "I heard the prime minister of India say the per capita income of her country is $90 a year.

"What is it in Canada? Where is the justice? Where is the equilibrium? How do you reach both sides of the gap?"

He said unless developed countries find a solution to the poverty in the world, and pollution within 10 years "you yourselves will be in trouble."

He said he left his post as archbishop here and became a missionary "because today, everybody is talking about the situation of under - developed countries."

He said he wanted to prove his sincerity by becoming involved.

"You have to find something. Because I have nothing to give — I am not a millionaire— I give my life."

He said he is working with his organization, on "about 100 projects" in Africa now.

The organization has already completed 60 projects, at a total worth of $6,235,000 and has $7.8 million invested in current projects.

These include hospitals, rehabilitation centres, purchases of syringes, hypodermic needles, and other medical supplies for epidemics such as the outbreak of cholera in India and Pakistan, building of several schools and buying clothing and equipment for various missions in under-developed countries.

The organization has been leasing a three-storey warehouse at 2090 Moreau st. in Montreal, which has about $3 million worth of stock ready to be delivered to African nations.

Ninety-one persons are working full-time for the organization here and in Africa.

News Coverage Has Grown with Power

Fast action news. If it happens, when it happens and how it happens.

The CJBQ news team's working motto has afforded their department much deserved recognition for its up-to-the-minute reporting of events from the entire Quinte area.

Under news director Dave Sovereign, the news department combines locally gathered news with regular network information received over the Broadcast News Wire Machine.

Reporters Milt Johnston and Mike Beeston join their chief in reporting wherever news is breating. Armed with portable tap recorders, the newsmen are able to return to the station with quotable and not-so quotable quotes.

Careful editing of material is combined with background information. Added to the on-air announcements, "clips" provide and added punch to newscasts.

While counterparts in Belleville care for the city scene, Bob Rowbotham, bureau news chief in Trenton heads district reporting as well as news from the Trent River town with a population of 14,500, including Canadian Air Force personnel at CFB Trenton.

Once a week, CJBQ presents Sunday Newsmagazine, with special reports from correspondents Bob Hannah and Clyde Bell located in Tweed, Bill Reid in Campbellford and Lloyd Thompson in Picton and Northport.

A news service from Queen's Park, Toronto, brings latest reports from the provincial legislature. Freelance newsman Bob Carr transmits regular items of interest to Quinte listeners.

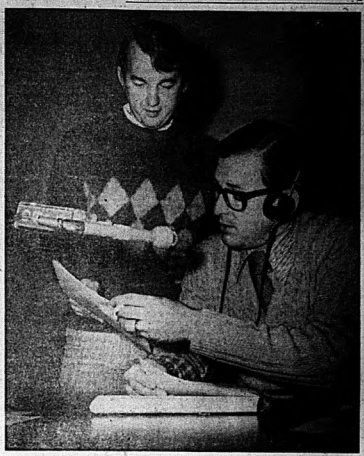
CJBQ also has a special cooperative news service with several designated stations across the country.

News director Dave Sovereign compares his early years with CJBQ to the present format, which is rapidly being geared to the increased coverage area being served by the station as of tomorrow.

"In those days, we dashed off to every little fire and accident within range of the station . . . sometimes at 3.30 in the morning.

"That was when it was a single newsman operation. Today there's more emphasis on the total news operation throughout the day but still we have to get those stories."

In previous years, only three newscasts involved local coverage. The remainder were based on "rip and read" . . . an old radio term meaning an announcer would dash into a newsroom, with about three minutes to go, tear anything off the wire "pertinent or observise" and read it on the air with a straight face.



"A few years ago, we decided the listener was entitled to interesting and topical news carefully accoted, on every newscast.

"It's not everybody that can listen to three major newscasts in the day," he added.

For the past several weeks, the news department has been determining ways and means of getting more news coverage from those outlying regions that CJBQ intends to serve with the power increase.

This means the station will have an interest in anything that happens in more than 100 communities, stretching from Picton to the south, to Barry's Bay in the north and from Kingston in the east to Port Hope in the west.

"Naturally, not all those communities will be mentioned in every newscast, but we are trying," was Mr. Sovereign's closing comment.

Mike Beeston and News Chief Dave Sovereign

Prince Edward Chamber Prepares for Santa

This sum will be matched by $500 voted toward the parade from chamber funds.

Plans for this year's "better than ever" parade were discussed at a special directors' meeting earlier this week when it was decided the parade should form at Picton fairgrounds at 9:30 a.m.

Floats and marchers will move out at 10 a.m. to follow the familiar parade route through Main Street to the Liquor Control Board store.

Two bands definitely will participate and it is expected two others could be available for this holiday season highlight.

Immediately following the parade, youngsters will be invited to chat with Santa at the Regent Theatre where a free movie will be shown.

Candy has been supplied for distribution by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd.

Parade chairman Ronald Scott said that approximately 60 floats are expected to combine to form Santa's welcoming committee.

Mail Order Parcels Stolen

TWEED (Staff) — Mail order shoppers in Tweed may be out of luck on some of their Christmas presents.

A break-and-enter artist made off some time early Wednesday morning with parcels waiting to be picked up by customers at Simpsons-Sears mail order office in this village.

No estimate of the value of the stolen parcels was available.

Doris Says Mankind Is Moving Forward

By DORIS CLARK

"Our age will be remembered not for its horrifying crimes or its astonishing inventions, but because it is the first generation in history in which mankind dared to believe it practical to make the benefits of civilization available to the whole human race."— A. J. Toynbee

And doesn't this fit in Turn mean that if anything, ever or other mankind wanted to share, by benefits with everybody on this planet? Doesn't it suggest the existence of a conscience? The historians of our time ascribe this conscience, I think rightly, to the Christian ethic which teaches us to love one another.

Out of all this I cherish the thought that mankind is moving forward in behalf of man.

Dear Doris: My husband moved back to a job near home saying that he wanted to be working near us and now his relations hold this against me. I couldn't get on my knees and beg him to stay some place that was damaging his health, could I?

They also say I don't help him or try to guide him towards what he wants or what they think is better for us.

What can I say to a 35-year-old man who has been on his own for the last 18 years?

We are very happy together but they are forever trying to ruin his life.

The rest of the family are Mama, boys, Even though the youngest is 20 they are hanging on for dear life to their apron strings. How can I get across to them that I am trying my hardest? — Confused

Dear Confused: In a close-knit family with a mother who is the acknowledged matriarch, a young man accomplishes the nearly impossible when he breaks away. Floyd man has.

If you can keep on the way you are doing, working with your husband, giving him the love which means life to him, encouraging and failing in with his ideas, you will have it licked. Remind yourself every day that these family members are secretly impressed by the way you stand on your own two feet.

As for Mama, she too can be handled and even come to have a place in your heart if you can accentuate the positive!

Dear Doris: You helped me to talk to the poor widow whose son and daughter made fun of their mother in a skit in which they acted out a slow and painful death for her. They had resented the fact that they got so little of their father's estate.

Thank God, Doris, two weeks before, her husband had made a will leaving her everything. I can't thank the doctor and lawyer enough for saving her from a cruel fate (in a mental hospital for life).

Now a miracle has happened and our prayers have been answered. I have managed to get my sister into the U.S.A. with my other widowed sister there who was so happy to have her, so now she is away from it all and is a new woman.

Your letter at that time helped me to look at the situation objectively and to encourage the mother in breaking away to find new friends. — Appalled

Dear Appalled: A follow-up letter like yours does me all kinds of good — and I know our readers will be glad, too.

The Experts Say

Mankind Stranger Than Fiction

By JEAN SHARP
CP Women's Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Besides being part of the traditional Christmas dinner, cranberries are a part of traditional decorations, strung on trees and mantels.

There are other ways to make them a cheery part of your festivities, says Jean Phillips of Ocean Spray.

You can make holiday candle holders by filling glasses with cranberries. Cut rounds of cardboard to fit the tops of the glasses. Tape in place. Turn glasses upside down. Melt the bottoms of candles and press them into the bottoms of the glasses.

You can make a Christmas tree picture with cranberries, hang in a doorway with mistletoe. Back an empty picture frame with green felt. Make the outline of a tree on the felt with strings of cranberries held in place with straight pins.

Cranberries can make an old-fashioned kissing ball to hang in a doorway with mistletoe attached to it. Cover a round styrofoam ball with bright cranberries attached with toothpicks. Tie a bow at the top and a sprig of mistletoe to the bottom.

A colorful punch combines cranberry juice and apricots. You need: 4 cups (1 quart) cranberry juice, 4 cups grapefruit juice, 1 can (1 pound) apricot halves sieved with juice or pureed in a blender, 2 cinnamon sticks, 12 whole cloves.

Combine all ingredients and bring to a boil. Simmer 5 minutes. Remove spices, pour into mugs. Serves 10.

STIRLING

HORTICULTRAL SOCIETY

On Monday afternoon Stirling Horticultural Society convened at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church hall for their Christmas meeting. Fifty people were in attendance.

The president, Mrs. Floyd Armstrong opened the meeting after which Mrs. Grant Hubble welcomed Mrs. Milne, old Mlne of Seymour township as a new member and honoree. She had brought a large array of evergreens, pine cones, and holly and an assortment of odds and ends for Christmas decorations.

Mrs. Milne displayed candles which she had already made. She then gave a step-by-step explanation of making candles, corsages, tree green wreaths tied with bows of red ribbon and door decorations for outside or inside homes made from branches of evergreens. A green net Christmas tree completed her interesting and informative demonstration.

Mrs. Raymond McConnell voiced appreciation for this and made the presentation of a gift.

Later in the afternoon the articles made by Mrs. Milen Milne were distributed by lucky numbers.

In the business period, the secretary treasurer and card secretary presented their reports and those in attendance signed in in special book. A message was read from the news letter.

Two chartered buses were employed to carry 82 people to the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto. Ivan Fowler of Bancroft and Franklin Smith, Marmora were in charge of the transportation on Saturday and Tuesday.

The president and several members attended the annual meeting of district no. 3 at Napanee on Saturday, November 20.

The next meeting will be held in January, 1972.

Belleville Horticulaural Society

Members and guests at the monthly meeting of the Belleville Horticultural Society on Tuesday evening Nov. 16 at the Harry J. Clarke Public School were treated to an outstanding demonstration of flower arranging. The demonstrator was Jay Houston, Parks Supervisor for the city of Belleville who entitled his presentation Festive Flowers, Artificial and Real.

Mr. Houston delighted his audience with an unusual creation using a black coil spring as a base filled with branches on which were perched several song birds. One of his most beautiful arrangements consisted of red carnations with a background of peacock feathers. Many of his floral designs suggested a Christmas theme with red roses and carnations and white mums being the flowers and colors he used most often. He also used evergreen foliage. Mr. Houston showed the audience how to make Christmas wreaths with styrofoam as the base and adding artificial holly berries for effect.

Mr. Houston was thanked by Mrs. Rita Becker. There was a spirited auction afterwards with many floral creations.

A bulb sale of canna, dahlias and many other plants was held after the meeting. The evening concluded with refreshments.

The Belleville Horticultural Society will be holding a pot luck supper on Friday evening, Dec. 3 at 7 p.m. at St. Thomas Parish Hall, Bridge Street East. All members and guests are invited to this event which will have the added bonus of an entertainment program including the singing of Christmas carols.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can golf cure a persecution complex?

NO, not even a minor case. Someone with even a slight problem brought on by the delusion that he is being persecuted should see a professional therapist. Playing golf is, of course, an individual performance. But just as sure as he is hooking and slicing, the "persecuted" golfer will shift targets. Instead of people, the duffer will soon be blaming the course as well as his equipment and the playing conditions for his poor showing.

Are you just lucky if your teeners are good?

NO, although many parents of teenagers are never get into trouble think it is just luck and actually knock on wood and say how fortunate they are that their children are "good, so far, thank God." They had better hope their teenagers never see them do that. The teenagers might resent it; not because they are considered good, but because their parents seem to have so little confidence in their own children.

Is a husband entitled to sprawl in a chair?

CERTAINLY. He had better make sure, however, that he doesn't sit with his leg over the arm of a chair. His wife won't like it, of course; she says it wrecks the furniture. More than that, though, Gerard I. Nierenberg and Henry Calero, in "How to Read a Person Like a Book" (Hawthorn), say an individual who sits this way is "generally unconcerned about or hostile to the other person's feelings or needs."

Ann Landers

After Ten Years Reader Writes Thanks

Dear Ann Landers: It's taken me a long time to express my gratitude to you and I'd like to do so now.

Here's my story. Ten years ago I found myself pregnant. The baby's father didn't want to marry me. My parents kicked me out and I found out who my friends were. I had only one I could count on. Mary, a girl I worked with, asked me to share her apartment. Her husband was overseas and she said she wanted company.

When I began to show, the office manager told me to leave. I was, she explained, "a representative of the company" and they couldn't have a pregnant Miss "meeting the public."

I lost my job but Mary insisted that I stay with her. All the while I was here with Mary—she —should I keep the baby? On Aug. 14, 1961 I read your column. It was made up of letters from mothers who had faced my problem. I knew then what I had to do. I wanted to give that child a break and put it up for adoption. Two weeks later I signed the final papers.

Two years later I married a wonderful man and we now have three lovely children. I have never regretted giving up my first born because I know that somewhere there's a happy little boy who has two loving parents. Now there is a long time to put off writing a letter, but I finally got around to it.— Been There And Back.

Dear B.T.: So you're a little slow. Nobody's perfect. In case the readers would like to know how you made out, I'll take the decision on Aug. 14, 1961, here it is:

From Mount Vernon, New York: I am glad I got my first good night's sleep in years. When I read the letter from "The Child You Gave Up" it was as if someone had lifted a 10-ton weight off my heart. Many tears ago I gave up my child for adoption. Since that day I have been tortured by the question, "Can a child ever understand and forgive a mother for doing this?" Now I know the answer.

Steubenville, Ohio: I'm so grateful that you didn't print the name of the city along with the letter signed "The Child You Gave Up." I would more than anything to believe that the letter was written by the child I gave up nine years ago.

El Paso, Texas: Only a woman who has given up her baby for adoption knows the agony and pain of separation. I felt in my heart I was doing what was best for my child, but all these years I've been haunted by the fear that my child would always hate me. Bless you, Ann, for the Lawrence, Kansas: I was a foolish (and I see now a selfish) girl who refused to give up her out-of-wedlock baby.

I told myself that nothing mattered except keeping my baby. I also told myself that my child would thank me for the sacrifices and love me for my decision. I was wrong. When she ran away from home at the age of 15 she left a note saying, "I hate you, Mother. You never gave me a break."

Paducah, Kentucky: I'm 13 and adopted. I never knew quite how to feel about my real mother. I always thought she must have been a bad woman or she would never have given me away. After reading the letter signed "The Child You Gave Up" I know better. I will never laugh at your column again. You have solved the biggest problem of my whole life.

peace of mind you have brought me.

Finishing Touch

Mrs. Keith Davidson, convener of decorations adds a finishing touch to the centre piece at the main table at the St. Andrew's Church tea held on Wednesday. The decor which was in a Christmas theme was put together with the help of the Sunshine group.

Successful Yule Tea Held at St. Andrew's

A large array of gifts and novelties vanished incredibly fast from the various booths at the bazaar convened by Mrs. R. Jones with the help of Mrs. T. Burnett and Mrs. H. G. McKay at St. Andrew's Church on Wednesday afternoon.

The cotton and crafts booth convened by Mrs. H. Yorke and the Loyal group included an assortment of attractive and useful items such as pillow cases, tea towels, knitted slippers, handkerchiefs, a quaint cushion shaped like a cat's face and a candle in the shape of a snowman.

Books, jewellery and ornaments were sold at the white elephant booth with Mrs. T. Helm and Mrs. V. Weir in charge.

A booth specializing in pot holders, tea towels and other handmade kitchen aids was convened by Mrs. K. Robertson and included several eyecatching pot holders in delicate shades of yellow, pink and mauve, shaped like apples and adorned with appliqued leaves and stems.

The children's wear booth which represented the efforts of the Friendship group under the direction of Mrs. G. Dance featured vests, knitted slippers, berets and a number of Bar-Bel kill-and-sweater sets. The homebaking booth and delicatessen co-ordinated by Mrs. K. Robertson and the Harmony Group sold everything from relishes and jams to cakes and pies.

Aprons of all shapes and designs were contributed by the Welcome group with Mrs. R. Kempster in charge, while the candy booth was convened by Mrs. Mantle. The Sunshine group under the direction of Mrs. Norvin operated a 'post office' where customers could pick up surprise packages for a small price.

The tea room, decorated by Mrs. Keith Davidson and members of the Sunshine group featured a small silver Christmas tree at each end, one strung with tiny colored lights and the other adorned with red and blue globes. The railings at the entrance were entwined with poinsettia as was the white picket fence which ran down the entire length of the hall on one side.

Guests were conducted to their tables through an archway decorated with holy leaves and other foliage which broke up the picket fence. The tea tables were appointed with brightly colored cloths of red, green and gold. Each was centred with a red or gay candle resting on a saucer-shaped holder set off by greens and leaves. A butterfly in a matching color will shimmering gilt wings hovered over each candle. The main table was covered with a white lace cloth with a red underlay. A bowl of red carnations and white 'mums interspersed with leaves flanked by red candles formed the centrepiece.

The bazaar was opened by Rev. A. L. Sutherland. Mrs. L. Fraser, president of the Women's Guild received guests along with Mrs. Sutherland and Mrs. W. Clendenan president of the WMS.

Pouring honours were done by guests representing various churches, Mrs. H. Freeborn; Mrs. P. Teti, Mrs. A. Shiels, Mrs. J. L. Dean, Mrs. R. B. Wright, Mrs J. Farell and Mrs. J. Burke.

The kitchen convenors were Mrs. G. F. Brooks and Mrs. D. Kane, who were assisted by representatives of all the women's groups. Those unable to attend the tea due to illness were not forgotten as boxes of goodies packed by Mrs. E. Tigden and Mrs. C. Barliger were sent to them.

Field Naturalists Plan Projects

Although much of nature lies dormant during the long cold winter months the Quinte Field Naturalists are active with existing projects and busily planning new ones. During the November month meeting held on Monday November 22 with Terry Sprague presiding, it was decided that the annual Christmas bird census would be held this year on December 19, in that day Belleville and the immediate area will be covered by small groups outdoor observers quartering six areas by car. A check list of all different species and their approximate numbers is then compiled and sent to the Audubon Society where completed records cover the bird population of the United States and Canada.

Recent interesting bird sightings by members include a flock of about 50 pine siskins in west Belleville, a mocking bird near Redneersville, a sandhill crane spotted by Terry Sprague by the Ferrides Road in Prince Edward County and a snowy owl seen around Canadian Forces Base, Trenton. Irwin Knight also reported seeing a snowy owl flying over Front Street Belleville one evening in November. A group of nine blue herons, probably a family raised in the area, was reported by the Misses Moorcroft at their farm just north of Madoc.

It was agreed that the Quinte Field Naturalists would co-operate fully with the Kingston Field Naturalists during the latter's field outing to be held at Prince Edward Point early next Spring.

A new slate of officers was selected for 1972: Miss Marion Fisher will continue as secretary, Miss Gertrude Lazier, treasurer, Rita Henning in charge of membership, Mrs. F. J. Leach in charge and publicity member, Miss Joy Nichol and Mrs. I. Knight in charge of the Bulletin, Miss Daisy Young and Mrs. Fell, mailing, Terry Sprague and Irwin Knight, progams, Marg Hegle and Mrs. A. C. Hull, social, Hedley James, lab liaison, Mrs. Burr in charge of transportation, and Irwin Knight and Terry Sprague in charge of records. The offices of president and vice-president remain to be filled.

The second half of the evening consisted of articles and slides contributed by members, depicting the numerous and varied aspects of nature.

Of particular interest were slides showing the seven glossy ibis feeding in a flooded field in Prince Edward County in May, a rare sighting in Canada, and some beautifully clear close-ups of wild flowers found in different parts of southern Ontario, these latter being relevant to the wildflower census at present being compiled by Terry Sprague and Irwin Knight.

Hedley James, who is in charge of the insect division of the Quinte natural history record, gave a brief explanation of his method of collecting information for the identification of insects.

Coffee and light refreshments concluded the evening.

MISS DONNA L. BOCKING, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Bocking, Belleville, recently graduated from the Osler School of Nursing at Weston. Miss Bocking who attended Moira Secondary School, Belleville, has accepted a position on the staff at Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto.

Secret of Successful Entertaining

TORONTO (CP) — The real secret of successful entertaining is to treat your guests like children and take care of them.

Pearl Gereen says: "You must ask them: 'Have you had enough to eat? Won't you have another? You must tell them the washroom is there, and say: 'Let me hang your coat up.'"

Mrs. Gereen is owner of The Campbell Kitchen, a specialty shop. She is a former owner of a cooking school, and a hostess who once spent three days cooking all the food for a buffet for 30 people.

When you combine people and food at a party, she says you should keep your eye on comfort, your own and that of your guests. Don't invite 10 people to a sit-down dinner if you can only accommodate eight. If you plan a buffet for 20, choose food you can have ready ahead of time, and food that is easy to handle. If you cannot comfortably manage a full dinner for the number of people you want to invite, serve foods that can be eaten with the fingers and have them set out ahead of time for your guests to eat when they are ready.

"If we have eight people for dinner, anything I goose to have as hors d'oeuvre is set out on the coffee table. I am not hobbling up and down, and I feel part of the party.

"Never look as if you are running out of anything. Don't pile food on the plates, leave some on the serving plate.

"My husband usually pours the wine as we sit down. If your guests are close friends and you haven't a lot of room, pass the wine bottle around after that. If you do have to pass it, rather than serve it, it's easier to pour if you decant it. Otherwise, serve it from the bottle."

She says there should be two bottles of wine for eight people. They should be seen to give the guests confidence that the hostess is not running out of things.

TRAFFIC SIGN

SEATTLE (AP) — A local woman became tired of dust ruining her laundry so she hung a sign outside which read: "Wash Out." She was fined $10 by the local court on a charge of erecting illegal traffic controls. Her lawyer said that all day long cars sped past the woman's home on a rural road, despite the sign.

Tax Cut Planned

Special Legislature Session Called by Davis

TORONTO (CP) — A special session of the provincial legislature will be called Monday, Dec. 13 to deal with tax legislation aimed at easing an anticipated job slump this winter.

There would be no formal ceremony, only a brief throne speech outlining the government's intentions before the 117 MPPs got down to work.

He hoped the session would be wrapped up within a week.

The house will be asked to approve a three-per-cent reduction in the provincial personal income tax to match a similar cut recently announced by the federal government. Medical care premiums will be eliminated for the province's old-age pensioners and poor, and reduced for all other residents.

Mr. Davis said changes are also required to enable the province to proceed with a $18-million program for construction of the province's winter works program and for supplementary estimates.

He said the legislature would be adjourned, not prorogued, leading the way for a full-dress opening of the new house next year probably early in February.

Mr. Davis said he does not anticipate making any changes in the cabinet for the special session. He said the government is currently studying the whole structure of its operation and he anticipates that there will be "significant changes" in the cabinet and other departments prior to the new house opening next year.

For now, the only vacant cabinet post, financial and commercial affairs, being handled on a caretaker basis by the retired Arthur Wishart, will not be filled. Mr. Davis said one of his cabinet ministers, whom he declined to name, will answer for the vacant portfolio during the special session.

Mr. Davis said he would recommend to the session that Allan Ruter (PC—Waterloo South) be named Speaker to replace Fred Cass, who did not run in the recent election. Mr. Reuter was deputy Speaker in the last session. Government support guarantees that he will become the next speaker of the house.

It was the premier's first news conference with Queen's Park reporters since his Progressive Conservative government was returned to power with 78 seats in the Oct. 21 provincial election.

Davis Expects Economy Will Improve Next Year

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis said Wednesday there are signs the economy will improve in several sectors next year although unemployment is expected to stay at 5.6 per cent.

He said he realizes it is no consolation to those out of work that the situation would have been worse without the government winter works program.

He said the Ontario gross provincial product, sum of goods and services, is expected to grow more in 1972 than in 1971.

No dramatic increase was expected in prices.

"Investment can be expected to show a reasonably healthy growth and interest rates can be expected to stabilize at about their present level," he said.

The premier was speaking at a dinner marking the 18th anniversary of the German-Canadian Business and Professional Association of Ontario.

Mr. Davis said the Ontario government believes that any provincial response to United States measures to stabilize its economy had best be made through the federal government.

But he stressed that Ontario will not allow the federal government to affect the province by making concessions in its bargainings with such things as the auto pact.

"Is is very important to the people of this province that this pact should remain as it is."

Road Aid May Be Cut By Ontario

TORONTO (CP) — Municipalities were warned Wednesday that their plans for road-building projects may be adversely affected by Ontario's uncertain economic prospects.

"The present financial climate is not rosy," Charles MacNaughton, minister of transportation and communications, said in a speech to the County Engineers Association.

"Faced as we are with a worsening financial situation of uncertain duration, I cannot give you ironclad guarantees as to the near or longer-term financial arrangements for the counties and regions."

"If we must make cuts, we will, but only if we must," Mr. MacNaughton said.

He announced that the province had hired a Toronto consultant firm to help municipalities plan their projects so as to make the best use of government grants. The province pays 50 per cent of municipal projects.

Grants For Works Announced

OTTAWA (CP) — The first grants for job-creating winter projects under a $50-million government program of grants to community groups were announced Wednesday.

The announcement listed 10 awards—one in each province—totalling $369,855 as examples of the type of project that will receive government aid. The projects would create an estimated 152 winter jobs, making the average cost for each job $2,038.

Further approvals will be made daily and announced in the locality where the project will take place, said a statement from the central information unit for the government's winter employment programs.

The programs, totalling $408 million in grants and loans, were announced Oct. 14 as an attempt to curb rapidly increasing unemployment. Under the Local Initiatives Program, $100 million is divided equally between community groups and municipalities undertaking job-creating winter projects.

Officials have said that the $408 million will be fairly distributed across the country according to the employment situation. If one area was shortchanged under one program, it would be compensated through increased aid under another.

Wednesday's awards provide $142,795 for Atlantic projects, $134,555 for projects in Western Canada, and $19,185 and $13,300 for Quebec and Ontario projects respectively.

North Bay Voters Face Ballot Two Feet Long

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Voters in North Bay's Dec. 6 municipal elecion will be faced with an aldermanic ballot more than two feet long.

The king-sized ballot is indicative of the record number of candidates seeking office in many municipalities this year.

Voters in most Ontario cities and towns will elect municipal officials Dec. 6.

In London, a record 113 candidates, 13 of them women, are contesting the city's 40 elective offices—mayor, board of control, city council, board of education and public utilities commission.

Mayor Herb McClure, 53, is being challenged by Con. Fred Gosnell, 54, and Harry Gill, 35, a carpet-store owner.

Mr. McClure was appointed in 1968 to fill the vacancy created by the death of Mayor Gordon Stronach.

Mr. Gosnell has spent an equal time on the city's board of control while Mr. Gill is a newcomer to city politics.

Sixty-two candidates are running for 14 aldermanic seats in the city's seven wards while eight people are after four board of control seats.

Mayor Frank Wanasbrough of Windsor is being challenged by two men—student David Rutherford and retiree George Morgan—while 28 candidates are seeking eight aldermanic seats, which for the first time will be contested on a city-wide basis rather than by wards.

Mayor Joseph Fabbro of Sudbury, seeking his third consecutive term, is being challenged by Con. Jim Gordon and Ald. Maurice Lamoureux.

Twenty-seven people have declared for 12 aldermanic seats in the city's six wards, while six candidates have declared for four board of control seats.

Sudbury voters also will be asked on the ballot whether 18-year-olds should vote in municipal elections.

A two-way mayoralty race in Kitchener has Sidney McLennan seeking his third term and real estate broker John Ranizaw his first.

The city's 10 aldermanic seats are being sought by 20 people, including the 10 incumbents.

Major issue in the election is a proposed $15-million redevelopment of the city core, which would mean that Kitchener's famous outdoor market would be replaced by a new covered market.

In neighboring Waterloo, where nominations still are open, it appears that Mayor Donovan Menton will be acclaimed for a two-year term.

Seventeen candidates have declared for the city's eight aldermanic posts, including the eight incumbents.

Mayor Merle Dickerson of North Bay, seeking a third consecutive term, is being challenged by Ald. Bruce Goulet, 49, the city's deputy mayor.

A record 35 candidates are running for the city's 10 aldermanic posts, making the aldermanic ballot 26½ inches long.

A record 27 candidates are running for 12 aldermanic seats in the city's six wards.

Voters also will be asked whether they favor an approximate two-per-cent increase in residential hydro rates, and whether they want to scrap the ward system in favor of city-wide elections.

In Galt, city council has passed a motion allowing 18-year-olds to vote in the municipal election, while in neighboring Preston, voters will be asked on their ballot Dec. 6 whether they favor the reduced voting age.

Pembroke voters will be asked on their election ballot Dec. 13 whether they favor a bypass road north or south of the city.

Voters on the Six Nations Indian Reserve near Brantford will go to the polls Dec. 18 to elect 12 band councillors and a chief for two-year terms. Nomination day is Saturday Dec. 4.

And in the Sarnia-area, there are four elections Dec. 6, with the major contested race being in the village of Courtright where Reeve Cecil Armstrong, seeking his third term, is being opposed by Coun. Gordon Brown.

Acclaimed as mayor are Hugh Cranston of Arnprior, for his second two-year term, and Lester Cooke of Barrie. Twenty people are seeking the 12 seats in Barrie's four wards.

Total retail sales in Ontario during 1970 advanced to $10.8 million, a 2.4-per-cent increase over the previous year.

Red Space Program Said Bluff

LONDON (AP) — A Soviet space scientist said in a book published in Britain Wednesday that Moscow's space program is a gigantic bluff covering mal workmanship and technical inadequacy.

Leonid Vladimirov, a Soviet engineer and journalist who defected while on a visit to Britain in 1966, said the Soviet space program originally began as a series of publicity stunts.

In his book, The Russian Space Bluff, Vladimirov said these stunts were aimed at persuading the West that the Soviets had reached a high level of advanced technology comparable to that of the United States.

Vladimirov said the West has always overrated Soviet strength in space because of early Soviet successes.

Mafia Tie Hinted In Quebec

QUEBEC (CP) — "Improper contacts with improper people," including alleged Mafia contacts, are one aspect of a current investigation of the Quebec securities industry, William Tetley, financial institutions minister, said Wednesday night.

He said "several irregularities" led to the investigation, but would not describe them because persons or firms involved were "innocent until proven guilty."

The investigations, Mr. Tetley said, were being carried out concurrently by the Montreal and Canadian stock exchanges, the Quebec Securities Commission and his own department.

The minister would not go into detail about the nature of the investigations, but said "it isn't as major as some people make out."

Only one member of the securities commission was involved and no bankruptcies were involved.

There were "possibilities of improper contacts with improper people, which I think is very important, and we are investigating that carefully."

Technicians Are Required

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian University Service Overseas must adapt to changing times to continue to serve a useful purpose in the 1970s, the chairman of its board of directors says in his annual report released Wednesday.

Prof. Gerard Aubry of the University of Ottawa said teachers remain the largest group of volunteers requested by developing nations.

The most pronounced change, however, was a growing need for all types of technical persons, from motor mechanics to electronics technologists.

Close Watch on Imports Asked By Federation of Agriculture

HAMILTON (CP) — The Ontario Federation of Agriculture asked the federal government Wednesday to keep a sharp eye on imports that might disrupt the province's commodity markets.

Referring particularly to the United States, a resolution approved by delegates to the federation's annual meeting asked the government to "restrict the importation of farm products when these products enter below the cost of production in Ontario."

The resolution, dealing mainly with the influx of eggs, apples and corn, also recommended retroactive subsidies such as those given recently to Quebec producers of hogs and turkeys.

The federal government has agreed to pay Quebec farmers about $5 million for produce marketed last year at what the government and the farmers consider to be depressed prices.

Also Wednesday, final day of the three-day session, Provincial Treasurer Darcy McKeough, Agriculture Minister William Stewart and Municipal Affairs Minister Dalton Bales took part in a question-and-answer period.

Mr. McKeough said Ontario farmers will be better off under the government's proposed tax-credit plan than they now are with the system of property and shelter tax rebates.

He disagreed with the delegates that the credit plan would discriminate against the agricultural population, and said that rebates would not be abandoned under the new scheme.

Mr. McKeough said the government "is not looking for ways to reduce the tax-reduction benefits Ontario farmers at present enjoy."

"We are looking for a more rational, consistent and equitable way to tax all our citizens, including farmers. And the mechanism of tax credits, which take into account property taxes and sales taxes in determining over-all ability to pay, seems to be the best approach to realizing these reform objectives."

Mr. Stewart told the group that a proposed government-aid program to encourage Ontario beef farmers, to build up their cow-calf operations was vetoed before it got off to a real start.

He said his department had been working quietly on the program in expectation of acceptance from beef raisers, but when the plan was broached unofficially to the Ontario Beef Improvement Association and the Canadian Cattlemen's Association it was turned down by both.

Delegates asked Mr. Stewart why the government could not grant supply-management powers—the fixing of prices and quotas—to the Ontario Egg and Fowl Producers' Marketing Board without waiting for an inquiry into the egg industry.

Mr. Stewart replied that the marketing board has been granted permission to hold a provincial vote among egg producers on the supply-management issue, but irregularities such as ballot-stuffing were found and the vote was called off.

He suggested the only solution to the surplus egg situation is supply-management on a national basis, because the problem is not unique to Ontario.

Mr. Bales, questioned about regional government and the cost of introducing the new administrative system, said additional assistance will continue to farmers "according to individual needs" to offset increased costs.

He said the government's reassessment of farm property is being approached from the standpoint of soil characteristics and from a climatic and productive basis.

G-strings Rejected

TORONTO (CP) — Three of five Toronto strip-tease clubs have defied a police order that the women they employ must wear G-strings.

Aubrey Golden, lawyer for Les Girls, Le Strip and the Mynah Bird, said Wednesday the owners felt that after nearly two years of total nudity topless strippers they were "justified" in not returning to G-strings.

But all clubs complied with the order to stop revealing the show to street onlookers by closed-circuit television.

Series of Small Prisons Advocated

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada's aging maximum security prisons should be torn down and replaced with 6 series of small institutions located in or near major cities, says a report to be handed shortly to Solicitor-General Jean-Pierre Goyer.

Details of the confidential report were leaked to the press Wednesday. While it contained no surprises, it probably will be the basis for a major departure in prison construction.

Mr. Goyer, a week before last spring's riot at ancient Kingston Penitentiary, halted a controversial construction program under which two maximum security institutions have been built, one started and two more planned. He commissioned social scientist Hans Mohr of Toronto and seven other men to draw up a report on a new system.

Informants said Wednesday the confidential report recommends construction of an experimental prototype as soon as possible at Vancouver. It says a city location is important if a full range of rehabilitative facilities—medical, social and recreational—are to be available to prisoners.

The prototype, which would be the model for future maximum-security prisons on the Prairies and in the Maritimes, would hold no more than 150 men.

Rather than a walled fortress bristling with armed guards inside and out, it would emphasize a homey atmosphere without the usual pressures of the bigger penitentiaries.

Tiered cell blocks and military regimentation would give way to small buildings in which 12 to 15 men would live, each with his own room and supervision aimed at developing a sense of identity in the prisoner.

As personalities healed, prisoners would be given weekend leaves to visit their families. The report also recommends leaves to allow prisoners to attend university and attendance at community events such as football games or theatre performances.

The smaller prisons presumably would solve some of the problems that have bedeviled rehabilitation programs in the larger ones, where stronger prisoners dominate and dictate to weaker ones, the sick and sane mingle, and the atmosphere often overwhelms the best of intentions.

Ford Planning Detroit Development

DETROIT (AP) — Henry Ford II has unveiled plans for a $500-million riverfront development to be built on 2844 acres of land just east of the Detroit Civic Centre.

Ford said Wednesday that plans call for a late 1972 start on the project, which will include offices, apartments, shops, restaurants and a towering, cylindrical hotel.

"We want shops, entertainment, discotheques, whatever you call it," the board chairman of Ford Motor Co. said.

"We see a living, exciting place that will revitalize downtown Detroit. I have a deep and personal interest in this program and I intend to see it through to completion."

Ford said he has hired architect John C. Portman Jr., designer of Atlanta's famous Peachtree Centre, to develop the land, which fronts on the Detroit River.

Options on the property or agreements to grant options have been obtained from all the owners, Ford said.

Wayne Doran, president of the Ford Motor Land Development Corp., a subsidiary of Ford Motor Co., told the council the building program is expected to last eight to 10 years. The first phase could be completed within four or five years at a cost of $175 million, he said.

Basford Bill Not Settled

MONTREAL (CP) — The federal government's proposed Competition Act is designed to support efficiency and productivity through competition, but there is still room for changes in the bill, Ron Basford, consumer affairs minister said here Wednesday.

Mr. Basford told the annual convention of the Federation of Automobile Dealers Associations of Canada the proposed bill is "a set of laws to assure as much as possible efficiency and productivity through competition."

"It is legislation that says if we can get rid of some of the practices that stop businessmen from competing freely and effectively, then we can continue to assure that the Canadian economy moves in a way that will help everyone, businessmen and consumers."

Mr. Basford said the government did not intend to take the bill any farther in its present form.

Calling on businessmen to present their views in a constructive manner, he said:

"We have asked business to study the draft bill, to measure its provisions against their own operations and to tell us if it creates any difficulties or if it could be improved."

He said the mechanisms contained in the proposed Competition Act are ways of governing the economy preferable to complete government control or regulation.

He said the government could have put wage and price controls on the economy but added "I don't see too much support for that unless an overwhelming need arises in the public interests."

The bill would allow the forces of free competition, free enterprise and free market system to "work as effectively as possible."

Reviewing the act, Mr. Basford said he could see no objection to the consumer protection sections of the bill since all businessmen suffer in the loss of public confidence created by unethical dealers.

The act would ban such practices as misleading advertising and pyramid referral selling.

He said the act placed things like export agreements, mergers and monopoly practices and other trade practices under civil law and within the jurisdiction of a tribunal because such activities were generally beneficial or did not harm competition.

"The tribunal's task is to sort out these situations from those which may be harmful to the working of the competitive market and therefore to growth and dynamic efficiency," Mr. Basford said.

Church Said Right Agency

KITCHENER (CP) — Agencies that solicit Canadians to sponsor underprivileged children overseas were described by a church official Wednesday as "cruel and un-Christian."

Instead of responding to that type of appeal, said Rev. Alan Brash of the Canadian Council of Churches, individuals should make their contribution to their local churches which would distribute the money more equitably.

Annual meeting of the council

Mr. Brash, director of the council's commission on interchurch aid, refugees and world service, asked delegates at the annual meeting of the council's central committee:

"Have you any idea what it is like for one child in a family of five children to be picked out and supplied with clothing, food and education while others are not?

"Have you any idea what it does to a family? It's a gross injustice. It destroys that family."

Mr. Brash said churches should aid families so that they in turn can help all of their children, rather than pick one child for special attention.

He said if money for the underprivileged overseas were given to the local church, that church could pass it on to a national council or a world council for distribution to the needy area.

Mr. Brash also disagreed with what he said was published criticism that council money had been used to support violence and revolution in South Africa.

Referring to a $400,000 contribution the council committed in 1970 to 19 organizations in Europe, Africa and Asia, he said the amount was a "drop in the bucket."

"It's such a little amount," he said, "and those who know about racial injustice know how pathetic it is."

INDUSTRIAL VISITORS

In 1970, more than 250 foreign industrialists visited Ontario to study business opportunities available to them.

BOAC Seeks Land Route

TORONTO (CP) — The British-French Concorde jet should be permitted to fly at supersonic speeds over specified land areas for a trial period of six months before governments ban such flights, an official of British Overseas Airways Corp. said Wednesday.

Captain James Andrew, BOAC flight development manager, told the British Canadian Trade Association the trial period would give the public a chance to evaluate the sonic boom caused by the aircraft.

"Authorization might be granted along a certain routing for a period of six months and withdrawn or altered if this was found to be unsatisfactory," he said. "Initial supersonic routes could be planned over thinly-populated areas. . . ."

Judge Writes Indian

OTTAWA (CP) — Judge George Collins has written to the Union of Ontario Indians, saying "I should not have said what I did," union president Fred Plain said Wednesday.

Chief Plain also quoted the judge as saying "I didn't really mean it this remarks) as an insult to Indians as a whole."

Judge Collins made the remarks last week while sentencing a young Indian convicted of assault. He mentioned another young Indian who could "become just another stupid Indian, of which we have many."

Chief Plain said he still feels that the judge would not have said what he did unless "they were on his mind."

George Manuel, president of the National Indian Brotherhood, said he has asked the justice department to remove the judge from the bench if a court transcript shows he made the remarks as quoted in newspapers.

In Sudbury, Judge Collins said Wednesday he will have no official comment on the controversy until he sees a copy of the court transcript. His statement would come through the office of the chief justice in Toronto, probably Monday.

Judge Collins said in an interview he did send a letter to Roger Jay, of the union's communication division, saying he "had no intention of insulting native Indians."

"My comments were just directed at the prisoner and the people with him in the courtroom," Judge Collins said he wrote in the letter.

He said he spoke privately with Chief Plain in Toronto last week and may have said something to the effect that he should not have made the remarks.

But Judge Collins said this was not an official statement.

Robert Chartrand, chairman of a Sudbury committee on human rights, has arranged a meeting between the Judge and the Nickel Belt Indian Club for Dec. 6 in Sudbury.

Dog Invited Him to Enter

ROSLYN HEIGHTS, N.Y. (Reuter) — Charges have been dropped against a man who claimed he entered a house at the invitation of the family dog.

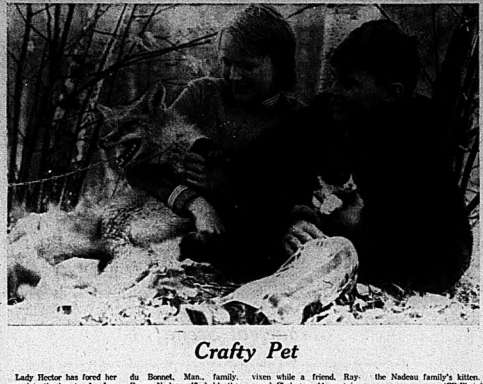
Samuel Eastman told Nassau County police that when he and his family returned from a night out June 4, he found a stranger inside having a drink and talking to Eastman's collie.

When Eastman demanded to know what the man was doing in his house, the stranger slumped down in an easy-chair with his drink and told him, "Why I'm having a drink with the dog and a very pleasant conversation."

Asked by Eastman how he got inside, the man replied, "The dog invited me in and asked me to join him in a drink. So I poured a scotch for him and one for myself."

Eastman called police and the stranger, identified as Douglas Cameron, 29, a market researcher from Andover, Mass., repeated his story. He was charged with first-degree burglary and later released on $1,000 bail.

The case then went to a grand jury which refused Tuesday to return an indictment against Cameron.



Mrs. Eastman, for one, was delighted with the verdict.

"I thought I was the only one who drank scotch and had conversations with Prissy (the collie). I'm so happy there is someone else who can share those pleasures with our dog."

Poles' History To Be Outlined

The wealthy Philadelphia businessman has launched Project Pole, an advertising campaign to alert Americans to the historic accomplishments of Poles.

Henry Morgan Quits CBC Show

TORONTO (CP) — Humorist Henry Morgan resigned from Peter Gzowski's radio show Wednesday on the air after criticizing its producer, Bill Casselman, for 10 minutes.

The CBC cut his attack from the Toronto and Western Canada relays of the show but it went live to the Maritimes.

Mr. Morgan said he was angry because Mr. Casselman had asked him to do some preparation on his 10-minute slots, giving them a beginning, a middle and an end.

Mr. Morgan, a well-known American radio and television personality, recently moved to Toronto from New York.

Mr. Morgan said Mr. Casselman had accused him of "a rip-off" in doing the show extemporaneously.

"That word is street children's language for stealing. I've been talking on the air since I was 17—that'll be 40 years in March—and this is the first time in 40 years that I've been told I was stealing.

"Nobody can talk to me that way. Nobody. So goodbye Peter, I'm sorry, cause I like you."

Mr. Casselman's boss Alex Frame said it is a producer's function to give directions to on-air talent and that Mr. Morgan will not be back on the show "because of that display . . . of unprofessional conduct."

CBC Plans Radio Report

OTTAWA (CP) — The CBC will report on how its Radio One and Radio Two system is working out, at a public hearing of the Canadian Radio-Television Commission, opening here next March 28.

Interested parties or individuals also will be allowed to present views on the system.

Radio One provides a service akin to that of private commercial AM stations, stressing information and popular music. Radio Two on the FM stations stresses classical music, drama and the arts.

Where the corporation has only an AM station, listeners get a blend of the two.

NEW PLAN FOR CALLS WITHIN ONTARIO AND QUEBEC STARTS NOVEMBER 28th,

When to call Long Distance to get the lowest rate.

You'll get the lowest rate available with the new "Sunday Visit" Plan. DIAL DIRECT on Sundays between 8:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., and you'll get three-quarters off the regular rate.

Or, you can get two-thirds off the regular rate with the "Late Night" rate — between 11:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. when you DIAL DIRECT. But remember, this new plan does not become effective until November 28th.

The following changes in discounts on Long Distance calls have been approved by the Canadian Transport Commission for a six-month trial period.

They apply to calls within Bell territory in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and N.W.T.

New "Sunday Visit" Plan

On Sundays, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. when you dial direct you'll get a discount of 3/4 off the dial direct regular charge, as shown in Table 1, for the initial minute and each additional minute of your call. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.00 you'll be billed 25 cents. The "Sunday Visit" rate is not exactly the same as the "Family Calling" rate — in some cases it works out to be a little more, in others less—but it's close. From 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. a discount of 1/2 applies. See table 2.

	From November 28th. "Sunday Visit" Plan 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.		Before June 6th "Family Calling" Plan 10-12 p.m. & all day Sunday
For example:	10 mins.	20 mins.	10 mins.	20 mins.
North Bay to Toronto	$ .81	$1.61	$ .80	$1.55
Kingston to Toronto	$ .73	$1.46	$ .75	$1.50
Ottawa to Cornwall	$ .53	$1.06	$ .60	$1.10

New "Late Night" rate

From 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. you get a 2/3 discount off the regular rate, when you dial direct. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.50, you'll be billed 50 cents. For typical comparisons see Table 3 below.

New pay phone and hotel rates

There is a 3-minute minimum on station-to-station calls from pay phones and hotels, and discounts do not apply to this initial period. Discounts (Table 2) will apply only to additional minutes, as shown in Table 1 — provided that you pay for the call by inserting coins or, in the case of a hotel phone, on your hotel bill.

Since this is provided as an alternative to dial-direct calls, the discounts do not apply to collect calls, credit card calls, or calls billed to a third number. Pay phone charges are rounded to the nearest nickel.

	Customer-dialed call weekday evening		Similar call from pay phone or hotel, weekday evening		Credit card, collect calls or calls charged to a third party
For example:	3 mins.	10 mins.	3 mins.	10 mins.	3 mins.	10 mins.
Ottawa to Toronto	$ .73	$2.37	$1.30	$2.93	$1.30	$3.75
Kingston to Montreal	$ .67	$2.16	$1.20	$2.69	$1.20	$3.44

WORKING ON DEFENSE -- by Alan Maver

Fog Shouldn't Present Grey Cup Problem

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Football League has a secret weapon—fertilizer—to deal with any fog which might threaten Empire Stadium Sunday during the Grey Cup football classic.

A Douglas DC-3 of North Coast Air Services Ltd. in Prince Rupert, B.C., will be on standby to seed any fog blanket with a nitrogen-based fertilizer which absorbs moisture in the air.

Clifford Sandison, chief pilot for the company, said Wednesday North Coast had approached Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the CFL, with the plan for fog protection for the Toronto-Calgary clash.

City council ok's roved the plan Tuesday subject to the approval of the department of transport.

"Sandison said that in the event of fog, the seeding could not remove it entirely, but would be able to improve visibility significantly.

A spokesman for the weather office said that although November is a bad month for fog in Vancouver, it generally occurs only in the morning. The chances of fog during the game are rated as "pretty slim," he said.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Grey Cup week got off to a bang Tuesday when a man fired five shots from a revolver in one of the rooms of a downtown hotel.

A worker outside the hotel heard shots and called police. When police broke into the room, they found a man on the floor, passed out and wearing only shorts.

Bullets had been fired into the television set, walls, ceiling and mattress on the bed in the room. Five spent cartridges and 31 live bullets were found together with a revolver.

"It seems like an early Grey Cup starter," a police-man said.

Peter John Wright, 26, of Calgary is charged with wilful damage, possession of an offensive weapon, possession of an unregistered firearm and discharging a firearm.

Trevino Presents Challenge for Nicklaus

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — A friendly but deadly-serious competition between Jack Nicklaus and Lee Trevino, has enhanced the pro golf tour this year.

Just as it looked that Nicklaus had no more golfing world's to conquer, along came brash and breezy Trevino who made an unprecedented sweep of the American, British and Canadian opens.

And, perhaps more importantly, Trevino interrupted Nicklaus' announced goal of sweeping the Big Four titles —the U.S. and British opens, the PGA and Masters—this year.

The two giants of the game, each 31 but Trevino strikingly different personal and golfing backgrounds, are locked in a battle for the leading money-winning spot going into today's first round of the Heritage Golf Classic.

Trevino already has set a single-season record of $227,343, wiping out Nicklaus' old mark of $211,566 set in 1967. But the Golden Bear is in second place going into the last few weeks of the season at $207,060.

"I think everyone, every professional athlete, wants to be the No. 1 man in his field," said Trevino, who makes no secret of the fact that he's gunning for the Professional Athlete of the Year title.

His credentials are all in order.

Another victory (he has six this year); which would almost assure him of the money title, could just about nail down the Athlete-of-the-Year title in addition to the PGA Player-of-the-Year crown he already has corraled.

The big blonde has won 11 major titles. He has voiced his goal of beating Bobby Jones' record of 13.

Thoroughbred Clocked At 40 on Miami Freeway

MIAMI (AP) — A two-year-old thoroughbred bolted during an early Wednesday workout at Tropical Park and raced down a busy expressway during the morning rush hour.

A radio station's helicopter reported:

The jockeyless Cub Power, adorned in green blinkers, covered more than a mile before spending down an off-ramp and went another four blocks before being cornered by the Florida highway patrol.

"When is that (censored) horse running?" said police Sgt. Ned Dolan. "I want to be sure to bet on him. I've never seen anything run so fast."

Trainer Eddie Cole said Cub Power was uninjured in the romp, but lost one shoe.

Quintes Face Tough Senior A Weekend

The Belleville Quintes get a chance to see if they're really back on the winning track when they meet the Galt Hornets in a Friday night bout.

The Quintes defeated the OHA Senior A leaders 5-3 in one game this season before plummeting from first to seventh spot as they lost five games in a row. Three of those losses came at the hands of Galt.

AL FERGUSON

A big plus factor for the Quintes who are currently tied for fifth place with Woodstock is the play of right winger Al Ferguson. The Belleville veteran scored in Tuesday's 4-4 win over Kingston to lift his total for the year to 16 goals.

Last season Ferguson had only 18 goals for the entire season while Wayne McConnell paced the team with 22.

Coach Gene Poirier set a goal of picking up six of a possible eight points before the Kingston win and this weekend will tell whether or not the team can attain his objective.

The Quintes have back to back games Friday and Saturday night before travelling to Woodstock for a Sunday bout.

Friday's bout with Galt will get under way at 9 p.m. while the Belleville - Kingston battle will begin 8 p.m. Saturday. Saturday's game is particularly important with the Aces trailing Belleville by ony two points in the league standings. The ten meetings between the two teams this season could very well determine which one gains a playoff berth. So far the Quintes have managed to win two of the first three meetings.

Fairways Meet Oshawa Friday

The Belleville Fairways will be looking for their first win of the season against the "big two" of the Eastern Ontario Junior B League when they travel to Oshawa Friday.

The Fairways have counted wins against Kingston, Picton and Gananoque so far but have yet to record a point against Peterborough or the Crushmen.

JEFF HOWARD

Certainly the second place Oshawa entry isn't out of Belleville's reach. The Fairways outshot the Crushmen 48-25 in their only meeting so far this season but still came out on the losing end of a 7-5 count.

Left winger Jeff Howard, a standout for the past two seasons with the now defunct Trenton Golden Hawks showed signs of providing some needed scoring punch to the Belleville attack when he clicked for three goals in Sunday's 9-2 win over Picton.

A bus will be leaving the Belleville Memorial Arena at 5.15 p.m. Friday with seats available for interested spectators.

Punch Gets Some Consolation Despite Loss to Los Angeles

By IAN MacLAINE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Punch Imlach must take some consolation from the fact that no matter how his Buffalo Sabres sink, he'll have another crack at a Gil Perreault or Rick Martin in the National Hockey League's annual draft next June.

In the meantime, the Sabres continued their tailspin Wednesday night, losing 5-3 to the usually hapless Los Angeles Kings while the division leaders continued to dominate—New York Rangers over Pittsburgh Blues 8-3, Boston Bruins over Philadelphia Flyers 2-1, Montreal Canadiens and Chicago Black Hawks tied 3-3.

In other games, Toronto Maple Leafs nipped Pittsburgh Penguins 2-1 for their fourth straight win and California Golden Seals drubbed Detroit Red Wings 6-1.

Imlach has been successful the last two years in snaring prize rookies at the draft—Perreault as the No. 1 pick in Buffalo's inaugural season last year and Martin, the No. 5 choice last June.

Other than veteran goaltender Roger Crozier, who couldn't be faulted if he checked into the nearest hospital to recuperate from shell shock, the two youngsters have been Buffalo's only sign of respectability this season and the only reason the Sabres have managed to stay within one point of Vancouver Canucks and Detroit in the East Division cellar.

Both scored against Los Angeles—Martin his 15th and Perreault No. 10—but ran into an unusually aggressive Kings who pelted Crozier with 44 shots.

The Buffalo phenoms opened a 2-0 lead for the Sabres in the first period, even though Los Angeles had an 18-7 edge in shots.

But from there on, it was downhill for Imlach's punch-less Sabres as Finland's Juha Widing led the offensive-minded Kings with two goals.

Chicago saw their win streak at home stopped at nine, but had to be more than satisfied to settle for the tie when the Canadiens opened a 3-1 lead on goals by Yvan Cournoyer, Frank Mahovlich's 16th and Terry Harper early in the third period.

But the Hawks rebounded in the spirited affair with goals by Bryan Campbell and Danny O'Shea to reclaim a share of first in the West.

Hawk defenceman Keith Magnuson and Montreal's Pete Mahovlich exchanged punches in the first period while tough Cliff Koroll and Montreal winger Marc Tardif squared off later in the game.

Defenceman Brad Park and

GIL PERREAULT

The Rangers, who crushed California 12-1 with eight third-period goals in their last start, exploded for six more in the final 20 minutes against St. Louis.

Walt Tkaczuk scored two each for the East Division leaders in the third-period blitz on veteran goalie Ernie Wakely. He was removed after New York's eighth goal and rookie Peter McDuffe finished up.

Bobby Rousseau, who scored only four goals all last season for Minnesota North Stars, also scored two for the Rangers, his ninth and 10th of the season.

Rousseau, who has had three two-goal games this year, finds it difficult to explain the Rangers' suddenly explosive offence.

"It's hard to believe," said Rousseau, shaking his head at the statistical fireworks the Rangers have assembled in the first quarter of the season. "How many goals? 96? That's awfully impressive."

Rousseau is used to impressive teams. He spent his first nine years in the NHL with Montreal when the Canadiens won six regular-season championships and four Stanley Cups.

"This team is as strong if not stronger than any of the teams I played for in Montreal," said Rousseau. "And that's no knock on those Canadien teams. It's a compliment for this one."

The numbers the Rangers have assembled are indeed impressive. In four of the 20 games, so far, New York has been held to a single goal. That means the club has scored 94 goals in the other 16—an average of almost six goals a game. Ironically, two of St. Louis' three goals came by Mike Murphy, the rookie the Rangers traded to the Blues a week ago.

"Anyone they get from here," said manager-coach Emile Francis, who engineered the trade, "has to be good.

"Otherwise, we wouldn't have him."

The Bruins, who trail New York by three and Montreal by one in the East, used goals by Johnny McKenzie and Phil Esposito to carry of the victory at Philadelphia. The Flyers have not beaten Boston since March, 1968.

Triumphant Return

'Pearl' Proves Worth to Knicks

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Earl Monroe went back to Baltimore in an enemy uniform and received almost unhospitable welcome from the boo birds.

With Monro playing before Baltimore fans for the first time since his recent trade to New York, the Knicks breezed to a 114-94 National Basketball Association triumph over the Bullets Wednesday night. It was New York's fifth victory in a row.

Munro, boos by the 10,718 fans at the Baltimore Civic Auditorium—when he first stepped on the court in the second period, helped his new club cut into a big Bullet lead. Then Walt Frazier took over with a hot second half to make it a New York romp.

In the night's other NBA games, it was Boston Celtics 108, Buffalo Braves 100; Milwaukee Bucks 141, Atlanta Hawks 107; Cincinnati Royals 114, Portland TrailBlazers 112, and Houston Rockets 109, Philadelphia 76ers 108.

Munroe, who scored 12 points over-all in a brief appearance, helped New York cut into a 13-point Baltimore lead as the Knicks narrowed the margin to 52-51 at the half. Frazier, who scored 29 points, and Jerry Lucas, who had 22, then helped the Knicks storm to an unbeatable 78-65 lead at the end of the third period.

Kareem Jabbar, Bob Dandridge and Jon McGlocklin fueled an early barrage as Milwaukee cruised to a 25-point lead at halftime lead and crushed coldshooting Atlanta.

Simmons Suspended by OHA

WELLAND (CP) — Don Simmons, coach of Welland Sabres of the Southern Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series, has been suspended indefinitely by the Ontario Hockey Association for pulling his team off the ice late in the third period of a game Monday in Brantford.

He was notified of the decision in a telegram Wednesday from the OHA head office in Toronto and told a hearing will be held within two weeks.

In an interview the day after the game, Simmons said he sent his club, trailing 6-3, to the dressing room because of the officiating.

Welland had led 3-1 over Brantford Majors early in the third period but was assessed five minor penalties in four minutes as referee Brad Morton and then three misconducts and two game misconducts.

"I couldn't stand to see the team humiliated any further so I ordered them to the dressing room," said Simmons, a former goaltender for Toronto Maple Leafs, Boston Bruins and New York Rangers of the National Hockey League.

He said he feared the game would end in a brawl and that some of his players would receive suspensions.

The teams will meet again in a scheduled game here Sunday.

"I was definitely wrong in pulling my team off the ice, I admit, but I did it for my players' protection."

Liske Shows True Form

NEW YORK (CP) — Neither Pete Liske nor his Philadelphia team-mates are going to set the National Football League on its ear this season but they are beginning to salvage a few consolation prizes.

The Eagles were in the cellar and Liske was on the bench after they dropped their first five games, virtually counting themselves out of playoff contention in the Eastern Division of the National Conference.

Then the former Calgary Stampeders quarterback got another chance and started to show the form that put his name in the record books when he played for Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League a few years ago.

He completed 15 of his 26 passes for 144 yards and two touchdowns against St. Louis Cardinals Sunday as the Eagles won 37-30 and emerged from last place with a 3-6-1 record.

Liske remains far down the table of 17 NFC passers, headed by Greg Landry of Detroit Lions, but his figures are beginning to look respectable. Despite his bench time, only five quarterbacks in the conference have exceeded his total of 88 completions and his passing yardage has topped the 1,000 mark.

Another CFL graduate, VIC Washington of San Francisco 49ers, ranked seventh among NFC rushers in the league's weekly statistics, released Wednesday, with 572 yards in 125 carries. John Brockington of Green Bay Packers is the leader with 806 yards in 146 attempts.

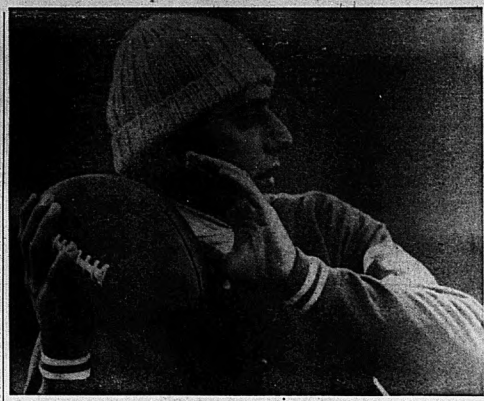
Bo Scott of Cleveland Browns, who preceded Washington from Ottawa Rough Riders to the NFL, has 441 yards in 131 carries, good for 15th place.



Roy Gerela, the place-kicker from Powell River, B.C., who accounted for 77 points with Dallas Cowboys last season, promises to do better with Pittsburgh Steelers this year.

He contributed a field goal and two converts to Pittsburgh's 17-14 victory over New York Giants Sunday for a 66-point total with four games remaining, moving into a three-way tie for sixth place in the AFC scoring race.

Ron Shanklin of Pittsburgh and Billy Parks of San Diego Chargers were tied for the lead among AFC pass-receivers with 41 apiece, the same total as that of Ted Kwalick of San Francisco, the NFC leader.

Touch And Go

New York Jets quarterback Joe Namath winds up for a toss Tuesday during practice in Shea Stadium. Namath was given the doctor's approval to return to action after being sidelined by a knee injury since early in the exhibition season. But Jets coach Weeb Ewbank says it remains a "day-to-day, week-to-week situation." Whether Namath will play this weekend will depend on the weather and how his knee responds during workouts. Atamian Finds Home in Calgary

VANCOUVER (CP) — When John Atamian lines up at offensive guard for Calgary Stampeders Sunday, he'll be facing players in a uniform he used to wear.

But that is not unusual for the second-year Stampeder: Calgary is the fifth team he has been with in the Canadian Football League.

After starting with Hamilton Tiger-Cats, he went to Toronto Argonauts against whom he'll play Sunday, then to Saskatchewan Roughriders and Winnipeg Blue Bombers before settling with the Alberta club.

Atamian first met Calgary head coach Jim Duncan when Duncan was an assistant at Saskatchewan and Atamian was a lineman.

Duncan said that in Saskatchewan, Atamian "was one of our better football players."

"He has had the misfortune of getting caught in the numbers game on two different occasions."

The last occasion was after a shoulder injury in 1970 at Winnipeg and "when he came off the injury reserve list they didn't have any room for him."

Calgary snapped him up, said Duncan, and has not regretted the move.

Although Atamian missed the latter part of this regular season, he came back for the final playoff game against Saskatchewan and received credit for his part in the 23-21 Stampeder win. Calgary took the first match in the series 30-21 and the Roughriders were eliminated in two straight.

Atamian said he has not had any second thoughts about the move, either, and finds that Duncan is easier to work under than Winnipeg's Jim Spavital.

"I was happy for the move—not that I've got anything against Spavital; he's a good coach but too rah-rah."

The man exhibited almost too much enthusiasm, Atamian said.

"There is a point where you draw the line, where you treat a man like a man."

The go-go attitude, the constant high-pitched, high-school type desire were not things professional players could maintain all te time.

"I knew Duncan from Saskatchewan, he was line coach for two years; he's the type of guy you can talk to . . . a looser sort of person in those days, like assistant coaches are, closer relationship with the players.

McMillan Realizes Boyhood Dream Sunday

VANCOUVER (CP) — Picture a youth from a small town in Ontario who grew up with a great desire to play in a Grey Cup game and realized his dream by making it at the age of 19 .

That is the sort of thing children's storybooks are filled with, but Ivan MacMillan, a 19-year-old Toronto Argonaut who will appear in the Grey Cup game here Sunday against Calgary Stampeders, refuses to fit the story-book image.

The game will be carried nationally by the CBC and CTV television networks starting at 1:30 p.m. PST (4:30 p.m., EST).

Ask Ivan, a native of Alexandria, a hamlet near Ottawa, if he is excited about the prospect of being one of the youngest players ever to appear in a national final and he answers:

"Nope."

Ask Ivan, Argos' leading scorer this season, if he's getting excited or nervous about playing in Sunday's Canadian Football League championship, and he answers:

"Nope."

Then ask Ivan if he always had a great desire to become a professional football player and make it to the Grey Cup and he answers:

"Actually, no."

MacMillan, who signals a successful field goal or convert by jumping up and down on the field, has plans to get married next month, two months before his 20th birthday.

After that he'll take a job in a Toronto department store sporting goods department.

In the meantime, he's taking a matter-of-fact approach to Sunday's match at Empire Stadium where the Argos suffered their first loss of the season and where Stampeders lost their last one of the regular schedule.

"I'm not getting nervous about the game—at least not yet," said MacMillan, who booted 26 converts, 12 field goals and four singles for 66 regular season points.

The youngest Argo's relaxed mood was shared by most of the other players, and by head coach Joe Cahill who declared when the team arrived that the cloudy skies which produced rain Wednesday morning wouldn't last long.

"It never rains on the Argos so the sun's going to be shining tomorrow, I assure you," Cahill said.

The skies cleared Wednesday afternoon and the sun helped push the temperature to a high of 51 degrees.

Cahill confined his predictions to the weather, however, and refused to say he was even confident of his team's chances in Sunday's game.

Cahill pointed out a points-scoring comparison of the two clubs for the regular season showed they were evenly-matched. The Argos scored an average of 20 points a game as opposed to Calgary's 18, but the Stampeders allowed an average of 14 points against each game to Argo's 17.

Italy Looks Set for Soccer Berth

LONDON (CP) — Italy looked set to see two of its leading clubs through to the European Football Union Cup quarter-finals after AC Milan and Juventus scored comfortable third-round first-leg victories Wednesday night.

A. C. Milan, which won the European Cup in 1963 and 1969, piled up a 3-0 advantage in its home match against Scottish club Dundee. Milan, which beat Dundee in the semi-finals on the way to its 1963 triumph, went ahead through World Cup star Gianni Rivera in the 13th minute.

Juventus, the Italian League leaders, earned a 1-0 win away to Rapid Vienna of Austria through a 30th-minute header by Roberto Bettega from a cross by striker Pietro Anastasi.

Both Milan and Juventus looked capable of winning by wider margins, with the Milan club being thwarted mainly by the fine goalkeeping of Dundee's Alistair Donaldson.

Another club apparently set for the quarter-finals is Unizale Textile Arad of Romania which hammered out a 3-0 triumph at home to Vitoria Setubal of Portugal.

Wolverhampton Wanderers of the English League gained their fifth successive cup victory 1-0 against the East German League leaders, Carl Zeiss Jena, on German home ground.

A goal three minutes from the end by John Connolly gave Scottish team St. Johnstone a 1-0 win at home to Zeljeznicar Sarajevo of Yugoslavia while Dutch side PSV Eindhoven also scrambled to a 1-0 victory at home to Lierse SK of Belgium.

In the only draw in the seven-match program, Eintracht Brunswick of West Germany was held 1-1 by Ferencvaros of Hungary.

In the European Cup of Nations competition, Romania became the sixth country to qualify for the quarter-finals, beating Wales 2-0 to clinch top spot in Group I.

Romania overhauled Czechoslovakia on goal difference after both teams had completed their six-match program with nine points.

Already through to the last eight are Italy, the Soviet Union, Yugoslavia, West Germany and Belgium. The remaining two quarter-final places are expected to be filled by England and Hungary.

England can afford to lose by three goals when it meets Greece in Athens Dec. 1 and will still qualify in Group III. Hungary looks equally certain of finishing at the top in Group II where it can only be overtaken if France wins by four goals in its final match against Bulgaria in Sofia Dec. 4.

The Spaniards boosted their total to seven points from five matches. But Spain, second in the table behind the Soviet Union, has no hope of overhauling the Russians who already have qualified for the quarter-finals.

In the English League, Arsenal was held to a 1-1 draw by Tottenham Hotspur in a First Division game. Arsenal won both the league title and the FA Cup last season.

Arsenal took the lead in the 30th minute on a goal by Ray Kennedy, before England centre-forward Martin Chivers netted the equalizer 12 minutes from time.

Arsenal defender Peter Storey was booked in the 30th minute for fouling.

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — China and Russia clashed for the first time in the United Nations Wednesday night, each backhanding the other while slapping at the United States. The subject was disarmament.

Deputy Foreign Minister Chiao Kuan-hua of China told the General Assembly the Soviet Union and the United States had "concocted" the nuclear test ban and non-proliferation treaties to "camouflage . . . lively own nuclear arms expansion in the name of disarmament."

Deputy Foreign Minister Jacob Malik of Russia retorted that Chiao had joined U.S. State Secretary William Rogers in "a curious Sino-American duet of negativism in regard to the Soviet proposal for the convening of a world disarmament conference."

Chiao, chairman of China's assembly delegation, touched off the confrontation by proposing that a pending Soviet resolution for such a conference "should not be put to vote at this session" of the assembly on grounds that it had no "clear aim."

Malik, head of the Soviet permanent UN mission, observed that only Rogers had previously opposed the Soviet proposal. He said the idea the Chinese had put forward was "the best possible gift they could make to the imperialists, who for 26 years have been fighting against disarmament."

Chiao lumped the Soviet Union and the United States together as "two superpowers" using UN disarmament resolutions "to hoodwink world opinion."

His basic concept was that the Soviet Union and the United States arrived at agreements that were designed to continue their nuclear weapons leadership over the whole world. Then they had imposed those agreements over the whole world.

He contended that the Africans, the Arabs, and the Indochinese were "compelled" to take up arms to fight variously for national liberation and socialism and against occupation and aggression.

But as for "the two superpowers," he said the people of the world demanded that they withdraw thousands of military bases and more than a million men that they have abroad and the general assembly was duty bound to take effective measures to satisfy that demand.

China had developed nuclear weapons only for defence.

Steel Firms Urged to Utilize 'Waste'

HAMILTON (CP) — Steel and mining companies need to take the initiative they use to develop better products and apply it to finding uses for byproducts they now see as waste, George Kerr, Ontario minister of the environment, said Wednesday.

He told the Hamilton branch of the Canadian Institute for Mining and Metallurgy at McMaster University that when a war breaks out, research people develop miracles such as radar in a year or two.

"Yet in the war to preserve our environment, we continue to adopt the attitude that tomorrow will do . . . I would certainly like to see more initiative taken in this country."

He said that in Detroit, experiments are going on in the use of pickle liquor from smelting operations for the control of phosphates in municipal sewage and said Hamilton would be a natural place to follow up such experiments.

"What I am trying to say is that we must put the kind of financial commitment behind this type of research that we do into producing better grades of steel."

Hamilton Wants China in World Trade

OTTAWA (CP) — Alvin Hamilton, often credited with being the idea man in the Diefenbaker government, has taken his ideas to China in hopes of bringing that country into world markets.

"We have to change our whole approach," he said Wednesday after his return.

"It's not good enough to try to sell goods to them, because unless they can sell to us they won't be able to buy in return."

Mr. Hamilton, Conservative minister of agriculture when Canada's first wheat deal was negotiated with China, has just spent three weeks there, at his own expense, to promote business.

He is satisfied with the results, although "it's still a long way out of the woods."

"There are many basic difficulties. For instance, I told them how they could easily make $100 million a year on the tourist industry, but they have a mental block about this—they regard visitors to their country as guests, not spenders.

"And they don't advertise their goods, which creates problems with Canadian stores which traditionally depend on advertising assistance from manufacturers."

Opening lead—three of spades.

Harry Fishbein, New York expert, tells the story about the unfortunate player who was dealt seven diamonds and six clubs and, naturally, found his partner with the same distribution, but in the major suits.

The bidding zoomed merrily along until the seven level was reached, at which point the unfortunate player had to choose between which of his partner's two suits to support — and guessed the wrong one!

Fishbein had a similar experience when he held the South cards in this deal and his partner bid and rebid hearts opposite his void.

In an effort to solve the difficulty, Fishbein tried three spades, hoping partner would either bid three notrump or raise clubs. But North responded by cuebidding the ace of diamonds, and Fishbein was reluctantly obliged to bid four hearts, despite the void, relying the story he had told so often.

Fortunately, matters took a turn for the better when North now showed club support, whereupon Fishbein bid six clubs which he proceeded to make by careful play.

He won the spade lead with the ace, played a club to the queen, and discarded the 10-5 of spades on the A-K of hearts. Now, instead of drawing trumps, as many players might have done, he ruffed a heart before cashing the A-K of clubs.

He then led a diamond, losing the nine finesse to the king, ruffed the spade return, and tried a second diamond finesse.

When the jack held, Fishbein was home. He ruffed a heart, thus establishing the suit, and in that way overcame the 4-2 diamond division. Had he neglected to ruff a heart at trick five, before drawing trumps, he would have gone down.

Tomorrow: Bidding quiz.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

STARS—FRI., Nov. 26

Aries (March 21-April 19). Some folks would like to offer words of comfort and optimistic forecasts to cheer you out of a depressive cycle. A tough pep-talk would be more in order, as things are just starting to worsen.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). You can't keep dipping into resources forever, as sooner or later you'rb oind to reach the bottom of the pot. Remember how hard it was to start a nest egg from nothing?

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Your mate can almost hae you believing that everything is in the bag, and a difficult job is as good as done. Demand to see definite proof before you start to relax.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). You'll need every bit of imagination plus an Academy Award-winning performance to convince partners to buy your latest set of excuses. Don't weave too tangled a web.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). Those lucky enough to find themselves with a four-day weekend may be wishing by Monday that they'd worked instead. Leisure spending hits an all-time high.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). Your closet tie definitely underestimates your determination, especially your devotion to one goal over a long, unproductive period. The more you're blocked, the harder you try.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). Your stars point to mishaps, accidents, due to carelessness and over-confidence. Companions are just as scatterbrained, so watch out for them, also.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). You're likely to be the first sign to get under way with next month's holiday shopping. Just remember that you've got a long list, so don't blow the bank-roll on one or two gifts.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). By early this morning you'll have kicked off the traces of any disappointment yesterday. Your mood is so high that kin can be tempted to label you insensitive.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The most effective way of coping with home folks is to remain silent about what you know. Give them a chance to come to you with the truth, rather than confront them.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Though your means may be rather limited at the moment, you still need the boost of a small luxury or two to see you through until more cash comes in. Be nice to yourself.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Though you may be dissatisfied emotionally, the financial and material aspects of a new arrangement are perfect. You'll be crying all the way to the bank.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—Two episodes of a triple set of problems are behind as you start this new year. The final chapter, largely affecting key relationships, is written for April. Stay with old partners.

Low Income Home Plan Studied

Plans for a 42-lot housing subdivision intended for ownership by families in the $5,000 to $6,000 income bracket, are being worked out by a special city council housing committee.

The committee, headed by Alderman Enos Dwivd, held its second meeting Tuesday to work out preliminary details of a HOME (Home Ownership Made Easy) plan for Belleville.

"We are making good progress," reported Ald. David today. "We will have a definite proposal for consideration of council possibly early in the new year."

The proposal is to make serviced building lots available on a lease-purchase basis for families in the low income bracket. On entering into an agreement for the lots, pikential owners will be given the opportunity of contracting with a builder or constructing their own homes on a co-operative basis.

The proposed subdivision is on a 17 - acre tract of city-owned land in the city's northwest sector west of Sidney Street and north of Tracy.

Proposed size of the lots is 40 by 70 feet.

A feature of the proposed subdivision would be a central parking area for owners' cars rather than individual driveways on the separate lots.

In this way the lot size can be reduced with resultant reduction in the cost of servicing.

Cobourg Residents Cherish City Hall

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — A citizens' group has launched a $1.5-million campaign to restore the 111-year-old town hall in this Lake Ontario community of more than 10,000 people.

Victoria Hall, one of the province's more imposing public buildings, was started in 1856 and opened in 1860 after an expenditure of $110,000.

A year ago workmen strengthening beams under the hall's opera house discovered dry rot had set in and there were fears the building would collapse.

Work was stopped and the upper portion of the building closed while consultants took over. Estimated costs of restoration ran from $250,000 to $1 million.

"We knew that we couldn't raise that kind of money in Cobourg alone," said Mayor Jack Heenan.

"Even if every man, woman and child in the town donated $10 we would only have $180,000 and this wouldn't be enough even to get the project started."

Then Lenah Fisher moved in. She is a town councillor who owns one of Cobourg's landmarks, the restaurant in the home where famed actress Marie Dressler was born.

Mrs. Fisher recruited the rest of town council and John Taylor, Toronto artist and director of the Cobourg Art Gallery.

Mr. Taylor suggested that a Society for the Restoration of Victoria Hall be formed. At a subsequent meeting more than 50 townspeople pledged support to the campaign and now the society plans to raise funds through walkathons, dances, souvenir trade, door-to-door canvassing and possibly a province-wide lottery.

Restoration of the building would take five to 10 years, Mr. Taylor said. He said $6 million was needed to restore old St. Lawrence Hall in Toronto which is similar in style.

"This building is far superior to St. Lawrence Hall. The stonework on the front of the building is more intricate and of a much finer workmanship and the corinthian columns supporting the outer arch are the most beautiful I've ever seen."

TORONTO (CP) — Mothers who use tranquillizers and other pills on a daily basis are likely to encourage their children to be drug users, Dr. Reginald G. Smart of Toronto's Addiction Research Foundation studied 14,800 students. He found that a teenager whose mother is a pill popper is three times more likely to take LSD, smoke marijuana or sniff glue, and is six times as likely to use opium or heroin than adolescents whose mothers don't indulge.

Chretien Says Indians Are Not Welcome in Alberta Schools

OTTAWA (CP) — Alberta Indian kept their children away from school earlier this month not because of federal government policies but because their children were not welcome in the provincial schools, Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Wednesday.

In a vigorous Commons defence of his department's policies, Mr. Chretien also said it made him angry when Alberta Conservative MPs accused him of forcing the Indians to attend provincial schools.

Mr. Cardinal made his charges on a CBC-TV program Sunday night. The matter subsequently cropped up several times in Parliament this week because the Alberta leader supported his charges by quoting from what he said was a confidential cabinet document.

Mr. Chretien made several unflattering references to Mr. Cardinal and his association. At one point he said Mr. Cardinal had told a pure lie and at another point said he was trying to build a red bureaucracy.

The minister also denied he was withholding money from Alberta. He was interested in providing money for Indian cultural centres.

One of the difficulties, Mr. Chretien said, was that some Indian associations wanted money without being held accountable for it.

But the government couldn't spend millions of dollars without some rules being developed.

He praised most of the Indian associations for doing a responsible job. Some preferred to state their case over television and that wasn't the way things are done.

The minister also made a plea to MPs and Indian leaders to avoid petty politics when discussing what he called Canada's most pressing social and economic problem.

Both Mr. Chretien and Mr. Cardinal were scheduled to appear before the Commons Indian affairs committee today to give their sides of the Alberta dispute.

Mr. Howard accused the minister of failing to carry out his responsibility towards the Alberta Indians. All of their requests were in line with treaties signed with the federal government calling for schools and different living conditions, he said.

He said the minister was holding back money for the cultural centres until election year, an insult to the Indians.

Robert Simpson (PC—Churchill) said the minister was wrong in saying MPs shouldn't make a political issue of Indian problems.

Without politics, nothing would have been done on Indian policy for the last 16 years.

Paul Orange — Northwest Territories — said Mr. Chretien had made tremendous improvement for Indians since he became minister. He expressed his respect and support for government policies.

Tom Barnett (NDP—Comox-Alberni) said some provinces were abusing federal funds given to them for Indian education.

Ottawa should build model schools on reserves and shame the provinces into reaching higher standards for Indian schools.

Mr. Chretien said Indians were not asking for schools on reserves. They just wanted a better school system.

Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) said attempts to integrate the Indian school system with Alberta's produced a drop-out rate of 94 per cent.

Now the Indians wanted to run their own school system. They were forced to pull their children out of school to draw attention to their demands. The school strike was no more wrong than any other strike.

While the Commons debate was taking place Gary Manuel, president of the National Indian Brotherhood, told a news conference that Indians are rapidly losing confidence in Mr. Chretien.

This was caused mainly by government discrimination, implement a new policy on Indians despite assurances it would not. The new policy consists mainly of turning over responsibility for Indians to the provinces.

The Alberta school problem also must be settled satisfactorily, Mr. Manuel said.

'Tennis Elbow' Is Bursitis And Rest Essential for Cure

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Will you give me information on tennis elbow? I cannot bend my arms up without having pain, or in any other ways I use them. I have had this for two years from over-use of my arms.

The doctor has given me shots, and surgery has been suggested. I am wondering if surgery will cure it. Or will it just relieve the pain?—L.M.

Tennis elbow is one form of bursitis, which goes by various names depending on which joint is afflicted.

A bursa is a fluid-filled sac in a joint, provided by nature so the tendons can ride over it smoothly and easily.

Subjected to too much strain or too much pressure, the bursa becomes inflamed, swollen and very tender. In your third sentence you say that trouble developed from over-use of your arms, and I have no doubt that is quite true.

Yet your letter implies that you are not giving those painful elbows the thing they need most: rest from the strain.

I've pointed this out in prior columns. An inflamed bursa needs, more than anything else, a chance to rest from strain and pressure, a chance for the inflammation and swelling to subside.

Injections of hydrocortisone sometimes relieve the pain temporarily, while the healing process begins—but you have to give the bursa an opportunity to heal.

This sometimes can be hastened by using a hollow needle to withdraw excess fluid from a bursa. Ultrasound treatments sometimes help. In severe cases, surgery may be necessary.

But all of these can only help the healing process. They can not do the whole job. And that's exactly the point patients are prone to forget. Rest is of prime importance. The application of heat (whether wet or dry heat is of little significance) will also help in subduing the inflammation and relieving pain.

So start giving your tender elbows what they need. If you say that you can't give them rest and time to heal, then I must ask this important question: If you have surgery, aren't you going to have to let the arms rest anyway?

Bend your arms as little as possible. Put as little strain on them as you can. Wrap them with hot towels. And see if that, in addition to what your doctor can do for you, won't begin to make some difference.

Expecting shots or any, thing else to cure it all, while you keep on subjecting the joints to strain, is asking too much.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My husband has an artery block in the upper part of his leg. Will thining the blood help? The doctor said it is not ready for operation.—Mrs. J.D.

Anticoagulants ("blood thinners") which help to prevent formation of blood clots are frequently used in situations like this, but they are used as a precaution (if needed) and not a cure. They cannot increase the size of the artery.

Surgery, for removal of a blocked or restricted segment of the artery, is very effective in establishing adequate circulation, but there can be considerable variation in cases that are suitable for surgery, as well as in the degree of blockage.

New Guidelines Help to County

New department of education guidelines on grants and educational expenditures will allow Hastings county to reach the provincial ceilings on spending by 1974.

This county has been penalized in the past by department expenditure formulas because it held its spending down in the first year of school board re-organization. The re-pupil amount permitted to each county is based on the previous year's spending.

But "catch-up" factors built into this year's expenditure guidelines should see Hastings county reach the provincial ceiling for elementary spending by 1974 and the ceiling for secondary spending by 1973.

"Because we were under the provincial ceiling we are allowed to catch up at an accelerated rate," business administrator Kenneth Wormald told the board Monday night.

"This is an eighteen and courageous step forward by the department," commented director of education Eric Rusnell.

Rough preliminary calculations set the 1972 budget at about $22,300,000 an increase of $1,955,000 or 9.6 per cent, over the 1971 budget.

The permitted per-pupil cost for ordinary expenditures is expected to rise in 1972 to $593 for elementary schools and to $1,125 for secondary schools.

The 1971 per-pupil costs were $530 elementary and $1,048 secondary.

For the first time the provincial government has revealed the probable ceilings for 1973, thus giving boards an opportunity to plan ahead.

By 1973 Hastings county should get $951 per elementary pupil and about $1,164 per secondary pupil.

Photographs Record Architectural History

AMELIASBURG (Staff) — While the architectural history of Prince Edward County dates back 200 years, it is still possible to photograph the change in building styles period by period, as a Picton high school principal demonstrated to the 7th Town Historical Society meeting here.

Carl Reid, the supervising principal of Queen Elizabeth school, showed his unique collection of color slides which he described as "the distinctive houses in the county, all marked with antiquity." The term showed architecture in the century commencing in 1778 through to 1878.

Mr. Davis was able to choose well preserved dwellings in most cases at locations in different townships of the county. It took him more than a year with satisfaction as much from digging for background information as from enjoying the artistry of shooting photographs of a variety of beautiful and historic subjects.

His selection simplified the mental picture of the order of change commencing with the Colonial expression and followed by Georgian, Grecian (Neo classic) through to the more recent Gothic (Regency) appearance.

Japanese Car Shuns Drunks

TOKYO (Reuter) — Japan's latest contribution to road safety is a car that cannot be driven if the driver has been drinking.

Five workers of the Honda motor company are credited with developing a sensor that sniffs out drinkers and stops them from driving.

At the first whiff, the ignition locks. If the car is in motion, there is a 10-second warning before the motor turns off.

The sensor is located in the steering wheel. In a dramatic test at the Tokyo Motor Show this year officials flashed a glass of whisky under the sensor's "nose." It reacted immediately and seconds later the test car's engine ground to a halt.

Honda officials, now seeking world patents for the device, have started practical tests which they hope will enable them to start marketing the product early in 1972.

Honda has given few details of the sensor's technical aspects, saying simply that it consists of a piece of platinum which reacts to temperature change caused by alcohol in the bloodstream.

The main problem now is to ensure that the sensor cannot be activated by the berry-breath of a passenger or by any other odor such as a woman's perfume.

Wilson Presents Plea For Unified Ireland

Labor Chief's Plan Welcomed

LONDON (CP) — A proposal by Opposition Leader Harold Wilson for unification of Irish within about 15 years as a means of bringing peace to riot - torn Ulster won a guarded welcome in both London and Dublin today.

But Prime Minister Brian Faulkner of Northern Ireland said he is "absolutely opposed" to Wilson's unification plan although he agreed with some aspects of the Labor party leader's statement.

Leaders of the three main parties in the Irish Republic welcomed Wilson's recognition of Irish unity as a long-term objective. They were less than enthusiastic, however, on Wilson's suggestion that the republic should rejoin the Commonwealth as a gesture to Northern Ireland's Protestants.

Sources said government ministers privately expressed appreciation of Wilson's "carefully-reasoned" approach to the Ulster issue although they have no intention of accepting it at present.

Wilson told the Commons Thursday:

"I believe the situation has now gone so far that it is impossible to conceive of an effective long-term solution in which the agenda at least does not include consideration in some way directed to achieving progress towards a united Ireland."

"There must be a substantial term of years before any concept of unification can become a reality, but the dream must be there," he said.

Basically, Wilson's proposal calls for an all-party constitutional commission, composed of representatives from the parliaments of Ulster, the Irish Republic and Britain to draft a constitution for a united Ireland, divided into north and south more than 10 years hence.

His plan, delivered in a special Commons debate on Ulster, stipulates an end to violence in the North—through a military defeat of the terrorists if necessary—before any discussions take place.

Wilson's speech followed a tour of Ulster and the Irish Republic and were intended to win government and opposition leaders there.

The Labor leader said the policy of interning suspected terrorists without trial in Ulster should be continued until the "necessary conditions existed for a improvement in confidence."

Such within hours, other members of the party called for an end to internment and Labor's bipartisan stance.

Hijacker Believed Long Gone

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — A hijacker who apparently knew precisely what he wanted to do and how to do it has vanished after bailing out of a commandeered jet airliner with $200,000.

The pilot of the Northwest Airlines Boeing 727 said he believed the hijacker "took leave of us" in the Woodland, Wash., area 25 miles north of here as the plane flew low and slow from Seattle to Reno, Nev., en route to the man's demanded destination, Mexico.

Helicopters and planes criss-crossed over the brushy and timbered foothills of the Cascade Mountains most of Thursday before the weather closed in. The hunt resumes today.

Authorities held out little hope, however, that the hijacker would be found soon.

"He's probably long gone," a Clark County, Wash., sheriff's deputy said.

It was the first time an aircraft hijacker had used a parachute to make his escape and it was the largest sum of money an air pirate had ever escaped with in the United States.

Pact Saves Blacks From Apartheid

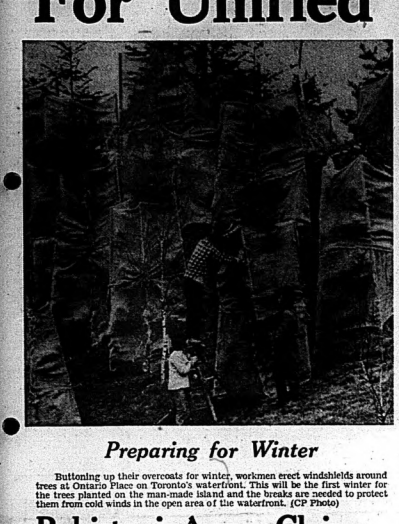
LONDON (CP) — The Conservative government embarked on a new course in foreign policy to win acceptance of its plan to recognize Rhodesia as an independent country by next summer.

The terms of the agreement, signed in Salisbury Wednesday and disclosed here and in the Rhodesian capital Thursday, does not guarantee black majority rule at any time although it envisages the possibility of nature —maybe 20 or 30 years or even more, officials say.

But in explaining the agreement to the UN Security Council in New York, Britain said this is probably the last chance to prevent the former colony from becoming "an appendage of South Africa" by copying South Africa's apartheid theory of racial separation.

national pricing of wheat should be done on an orderly basis within a fixed price range.

"We are working together, looking at when we might get that kind of stability."



As to any possible involvement of trade and politics, Lang said people generally do not let politics intrude unless everything else is equal.

accept that he said he would make war, he said.

She assailed the contention that the Soviet Union was restraining Egypt from embarking on what Sadat says would be a war for liberation of the Sinai Desert captured in the 1967 war. "What sort of restraint is this, when the Soviet Union gives Sadat everything he needs to make war?"

The Labor party central committee then resolved to back the government's refusal to commit itself to troop withdrawal from any occupied Arab land, and it reaffirmed Israel's readiness "for unconditional negotiations for peace."

In Cairo, Egypt's chief of staff, Gen. Saad el Shazli, said that 13 Arab nations had agreed at a military conference to wage war against Israel.

Pakistani Army Claims Indian Advance Halted

NEW DELHI (CP) The Pakistani army claimed today it has halted Indian troops it says have been advancing on five fronts into East Pakistan.

At the same time, President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan acknowledged the existence of political unrest in West Pakistan by banning the National Awami party. He accused it of "trying to foment revolt in West Pakistan." Radio Pakistan reported.

A dispatch from Dacca said an army spokesman reported that forces repulsed Indian attacks in border areas at Jessore, Benapole, Comilla, Chittagong and Sylhet. Dacca is the capital of East Pakistan province.

He said the Indians were "badly mauled," suffering more than 330 men killed—including some 200 in Comilla alone—and losing a huge quantity of arms and ammunition.

Indian officials have consistently denied that any government troops are fighting in East Pakistan on a sustained basis.

In the R hi district at Sardah, Indi.. oops have been seen digging trenches and laying anti-personnel and anti-tank mines, the Pakistani spokesman said, adding that more reinforcements are being brought in to be deployed on the borders.

In the Sylhet area the Indian attack was launched by the 5th Gurkha Regiment at Jantiapur but was halted Thursday and the area littered with the bodies of Indian soldiers, he said.

In the Comilla area, the Pakistani army spokesman said, all Indian manoeuvres failed to gain any ground.

A major offensive came from the Indian side at Hilli in East Pakistan's northern sector but the Indians were "dislodged from the area" where they had earlier gained a small portion of territory.

U.S. Surtax to Cost 44,000 Their Jobs

OTTAWA (CP) — The impact of Canada of the Aug. 15 American 10 per-cent surtax on imports now appears to be far lighter than estimated in August. Acting Industry Minister Alastair Gillespie said today.

U.S. Deficit Biggest Since Dirty Thirties

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States balance of trade with foreign countries plunged into a deficit of $821,400,000 in October—the biggest deficit recorded since the 1930s — the commerce department announced today.

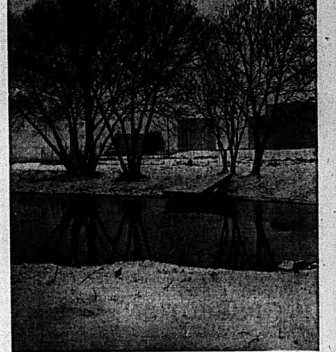
The September trade balance had shown surplus of $265,400,000.

The total deficit for the first 10 months of the year was $1,482,100,000, compared with a surplus of $2,553,800,000 in the first 10 months of last year.

The original estimate was that 90,000 jobs would be lost but the latest government study, which Mr. Gillespie said is highly speculative, puts the figure at 44,000 over a one-year period.

Replying to questions by NDP Leader David Lewis, Mr. Gillespie said less than $2 million of the $80 million special fund designed to offset unemployment caused by the U.S. surtax has so far been approved by the government.

This money would provide work for 3,000 persons.



What about the rest of the 44,000, Mr. Lewis asked.

Applications are coming in every day, Mr. Gillespie said, and the government hopes it will not have to commit the entire $80 million.

PC Leader Demands Smallwood Get Out

ST. JOHN'S Nfld. (CP) — "It is unbelievable that Premier Smallwood can sit by and not accept the wishes of this province," Frank Moores said Thursday as he declared his Progressive Conservative party was the clear winner of the Oct. 22 Newfoundland election.

Mr. Moores said PC candidate Ed Maynard was safe in his St. Barbe South seat, one of 21 taken by the Conservatives, despite a recount of votes left incomplete because somebody burned all 180 ballots at the 13th of 34 polls.

"In the absence of ballots to complete the recount the election result as declared in the official count must stand," Mr. Moores said.

He said the Liberals were legally entitled to petition the Supreme Court to have the seat declared vacant but meanwhile Mr. Maynard was the duly-elected member.

Three more recounts are scheduled all with vote margins ranging from 73 to 165.

The last recount has been set for Tuesday.

Mr. Smallwood said earlier if recounts skewed the Liberals still trailing, his government would resign.

Golda Meir Says Israel Must Live with Possibility of War

JERUSALEM (AP) — Premier Golda Meir has told Israelis they must "live with the possibility of renewed war" in the Middle East.

Addressing a meeting of her Labor party in Tel Aviv Thursday, Mrs. Meir also rebuked the United States for not delivering more Phantom jet fighter-bombers at a time when Arabs talk of war.

If war erupts, "we will win, but we will have to pay a price, and the victory will cost much more in human lives than if we had the planes," she said.

"How is it possible that the friends of Israel can assume such a dreadful responsibility?"

She promised the party members that "what I tell you now, I will tell Mr. Nixon." The Israeli premier is scheduled to meet with President Nixon next week in a major effort to get Washington to resume supplies of fighter planes.

Sand Renewal Claim Challenged by Resident

PICTON (Staff) — A West Lake farmer who contends that quarry operations carried out at the sandbanks by the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd., eventually will prove harmless has been challenged by Mrs. Ronald Barnett, a resort operator concerned with ecology.

Mrs. Barrett said yesterday that when farmer Firman Cockburn drew sand from the dunes in 1968 and 1970 for the Canada Cement Company, he worked with equipment capable of removing substantially less tonnage than the Lake Ontario Cement Company Ltd. now hauls.

"I daresay the sand could recreated the way you operated," remarked Mrs. Barrett.

She added that Mr. Cockburn has shown pictures to her, taken in the 1930s, of the sand dunes in the area now being evacuated.

The tourist resort operator said she was "amazed" to see the road used then, remains today. Two willow trees which appeared small then still stand now full grown.

Mr. Cockburn contends that the sand is self - renewing and has suggested that its removal at the quarry site coupled with the department of lands and forests reforestation program prevents other surrounding areas from being engulfed by sand.

Mr. Cockburn has pictures showing the West Lake Brick factory under construction and says the sand eventually shifted to bury the building.

Mrs. Barrett noted that she feels most of the sand - shifts which engulfed property probably occurred in the 1800s when land was first cleared and trees removed.

She does not believe the sand can renew itself in proportion to its present rate of removal which she claims apparently has tripled in the past year.

Mr. Cockburn was reported in the press to have stated he drew an average of 100 tons a day, six days a week from May through December. He said that in the Bellevile spring the excavated area had been filled in by shifting sands.

Mrs. Barrett stressed that the time for "ecology correction" is now and it is important to look forward to changing what has been done to harm the environment instead of looking in the backward.

She said a former summer visitor at her resort has written to her supporting her stand and has forwarded a copy of his letter to the CBC.

The Ottawa resident, L. A. Sellick, wrote, "As you are aware, we, the owners of sands of others in this country, feel that the Ontario government is trying to shut down the citizens of Prince Edward County but the people of eastern Ontario and possibly their children and their children's children."

Mr. Sellick visited the sandbanks this summer for the first time in four years and told Mrs. Barrett he was astounded by the change in the dunes.

Mrs. Barrett observed her quarrel with the operation of the sandbanks partially centres on the fact that the government spent some time and money in an extensive reforestation program to stabilize the dunes and now is "giving them away."

She commented that many persons seem satisfied when they learn the controversial quarrying operations are not in the provincial park.

Mr. Cockburn has estimated the dune area now excavated by the cement company will completely restore itself in 10 year's time.

Industry Needs Serviced Land Council Is Told

PICTON (Staff) — "There is no point in having a salesman if you have nothing to sell," remarked Hallowell reeve George Vincent as he discussed the need for serviced land in Prince Edward for industrial purposes with county councillors.

Mr. Vincent, chairman of the industrial and development committee, said during a meeting this week that several "fairly hot prospects" have expressed interest in the county but are concerned with serviced property.

He added his committee has examined the need for serviced land to offer to prospective industries and said the county solicitor has discussed the legal aspects of obtaining such land.

Sophiasburg reeve George Foster noted, "the time has come if we want an industrial commissioner here that we have to acquire serviced land for him to get anything here."

The report of industrial commissioner William Duggan presented to council this month stated that three meetings have been held with a United States industrialist considering "the location of a factory facility" in the county.

Informal meetings were held with three local industries regarding possible expansion plans.

Last Grooming For Trixie

Retired Bellevillian To Return to Scotland

It will be joy mixed with sadness for Samuel Wilson, retired Canada Bread Company Branch office manager when he leaves Belleville Saturday to return to his native Scotland to live.

Waiting for him on the other side of the Atlantic will be his childhood sweetheart whom he married in October.

But left behind in Belleville will be Trixie, his eight-years-old Sheltie dog who has been his constant companion since his first wife died about four years ago.

Leaving the pet dog behind will be the hardest part of Mr. Wilson's parting with Canada, which he says has been good to him for the past 44 years.

The pet dog will be turned over to the Humane Society to to him for the past 4 years.

"I wouldn't want to give her to somebody who might not give her the freedom she enjoyed here."

Quarantine regulations which would keep the dog in custody for a year precludes any possibility of the pet being taken to Scotland.

Native of a fish town on the coast of Scotland, Mr. Wilson came to Canada in 1927 and almost immediately got a job with Dempster's delivering bread in Toronto.

More than 20 years later he transferred to Canada Bread with which firm he rose from deliveryman to branch office manager. He came to Belleville about seven years ago.

As a young man in Scotland Mr. Wilson worked for the fish company then owned by the late father of the girl whom he married last month.

He fell in love with the girl but never did get up the courage to ask her hand in marriage.

Before coming to Canada he met up with another Scottish girl and after becoming established in this country sent for her and married her in Toronto.

Since his wife's death four years ago Mr. Wilson received acquaintance with his first childhood sweetheart who in the meantime had married and been widowed for 30 years.

Early this year he asked for her hand in marriage and the couple was wed last month in a quiet church ceremony near Mrs. Wilson said "he home town.

Incumbent reeve George Lyons and former councillor Jack Layfield were nominated for the reeveship, while nine possible candidates were nominated for the four seats open on the town council.

Nominated were incumbents A. Percy Brooks, H. Peter Dickinson and Edgar Gordanier along with John Mitchell, Fletcher Vick, James McVicker, Maurice Kimmett, Allan Blagney and Donald Hubble.

Office To Be Built

TWEED (Special) — A Belleville construction firm will build an addition to the Eastview administration building of the Lennox and Addington board of education in Napanee.

The board of education gave approval to financing the $150,000 addition at its last meeting. It authorized administration to enter into a verbal agreement with Cornerstone Construction of Belleville for the construction, subject to final approval from the Ontario Municipal Board and the department of education.

The addition will be used for administrative offices and board meetings.

Business administration official Clifford Cotton told the board that the OMB had given conditional approval, subject to a board decision on how to finance the project.

The construction will be financed through a bank loan to be repaid over a five-year period.

Although some trustees said the project should be financed over a 15-year period, the short-term loan was accepted in the interest of "not burying the costs down for the taxpayers".

Madoc Tries to Get Senior Citizen Housing

MADOC (Special) — "The Village of Madoc has been trying since June of '69 to get Ontario Housing and has as yet, been unsuccessful.

At that time, they passed a resolution in council requesting the Ontario Housing Corporation to conduct a housing need survey in the municipality. Subsequently, on July 5, 1969, a housing analyst from OHC visited the Village in order to collect information relative to the housing situation in Madoc. The survey was requested by council because it felt that there was a shortage of housing for sale and rent and that this shortage would be accentuated by an influx of new high school teachers required to staff the soon - to - be enlarged high school here.

As a result of the survey, it was recommended that there is no apparent need for the development of Ontario Housing for families in Madoc. Because of the high proportion of senior citizens here, it was recommended that the Village council give consideration to requesting a survey to assess the demand for Ontario Housing senior citizens' units, thereby providing suitable rental units for the elderly at rents they could afford and vacating homes for families.

In March of '69, council passed a resolution to request OHC to conduct a survey to determine the need and effective demand for senior citizen housing here.

Despite the heavy publicity the survey was given, the questionnaires sent out to the area residents received very little response, as only about six questionnaires were answered and returned. OHC, of course, decided this was insufficient response to warrant construction of a senior citizen project in the village. They did, however, suggest that a Senior Citizens Club be formed in the area and in March of '70 the survey was terminated.

Since that time, a very active Senior Citizen's Club has been organized here, so there is some possibility that another survey would bring more positive results.

New Museum To Get Help

PICTON (Staff) — Prince Edward county councillors have approved a financial boost of $10,150 toward the new county museum through the Employment Incentive Program.

A museum board is expected to be formed shortly to supervise the Old Church of St. Mary Magdalene now converted to a county museum.

County warden Allan Anderson supported the plan to cut the costs of social and family services by providing jobs for the unemployed.

Greek Folk Festival

Ethnic Dance Has Deep Meaning

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

Belleville's Greek community will share its independence celebrations with the rest of the Quinte community tomorrow night with a Folk Festival at Centennial Secondary School.

The event will climax the city - proclaimed Greek Week, celebrated to honor the contribution of Greeks to social life in the Quinte area.

But the evening of dancing, music and a film presentation will have a deeper meaning than mere entertainment for the 600 members of the Greek community.

It commemorates the 150th anniversary of Greek independance, when the Greeks were freed after about 400 years of Turkish domination.

Constantinople, the last bastion of the Byzantine Empire fell to the Turks in 1453, beginning a long period of occupation and oppression.

"It was their folk traditions that kept the Greek ethnic soul alive. The Turks suppressed Greek education in a drive to assimilate the people, but they left the music, songs and dances alone.

That is why the folk dances are an intrinsic part of tomorrow night's celebration.

"The outstanding feature of the classical Greek tragedy is the melding of lyrics, music and dancing in a harmonous whole," said John Papoulios, secretary of the Greek-Canadian Community of Belleville and District, Inc.

"Our dances are a live tradition that we try to preserve here, because they preserve the chorus like execution of the dance. They were a traditional form of spontaneous artistic expression throughout history."

The Greeks have no paired dances, he said, only group and individual dances.

The Greek Folk Festival, Mr. Chapoulos said, was motivated by the desire of the Greek community "to give the public an opportunity to share with us some of our cherished traditions which represent the cultural continuity of the Greeks."

"The achievements of the ancient Greeks, the Acropolis, the Parthenon and Plato, are part of everybody's heritage in the western world," he said. "But behind the outstanding achievements are the common folk, whose traditions will be on display tomorrow night."

The Greek community here has another reason for publicly marking the 150th anniversary of independance.

It was similar ethnic communities in Eastern Europe and the Balkans that were instrumental in freeing the county in 1821.

Greek communities in cities like Vienna, Odessa and Bucharest formed "friendly societies," a reading group organization to prepare for the revolution with education and money.

They also created a sympathetic feeling among European intellectuals toward Greek independence. Outstanding among them were Goethe in Germany, Chateaubriand in France and the poet Byron in England. Byron took a personal interest in the cause, to the extent of fighting in the revolution. He died in Greece and was buried in Missolongi.

The Greek - Canadian Community has members in Trenton, Campbellford, Cobourg, Picton, and Belleville. They conduct Greek language night classes at Queen Alexandra School for 40 children and hold church services in St. George Hall every other week. The community here shares a priest with a Toronto congregation.

The community owns land at the corner of Avondale and Hardor Drive and hopes to build a church on the lot.

Belleville's first Greek immigrant was Mike Pappas, who arrived in 1903. Mike Maraskas, father of city lawyer Louis Maraskas, arrived in 1915 and the population has increased steadily through immigration since.

The first organization of Greeks took place in 1940, when they united, to bring a priest to Belleville from Ottawa for services. The present community organization got its provincial charter in 1963.

Winding up the observance of Greek Week: CJBQ Radio will present the Epitaphios Liturgy at 7:45 Sunday night. The music to be heard on the recorded broadcast dates from the fourth century and is part of the Byzantine liturgy still heard at the celebration of a full Greek Orthodox Mass.

Befriended Squirrel Attacked by Student

Chippy was a black squirrel befriended by students at Belleville Collegiate on John Street.

A tame little fellow, the squirrel came to recognize the youngsters as his friend. The students saved portions of their lunch for their bushy-tailed buddy.

Most of the rural bus drivers knew he was prone to dart around after the youngsters and kept one eye open to prevent running over him. The squirrel would climb up from next to the windows and teachers turned a blind eye to their students placing titbits on the ledge for him.

Yesterday afternoon, while students were boarding buses, an unidentified youth drove Chippy out of his tree and then pummeled him with hard snowballs.

BCI principal William MacKay said this morning he knew nothing about the incident, but would be looking into it.

"This person needs help," he said.

Mr. MacKay said a program of responsibility has been introduced this week.

"It's a code of the student that you can't rat on a fellow.

"However, when you get out into the outside world, it's a different story and it's a lesson that has to be learned.

"It's the way people learn to care for each other. Do you feel sorry for and watch someboby being beaten; do you help; or do you at least call the police?

"This is the kind of thing that burns you especially since the squirrel had been trained to trust."

The young girl who took Chippy away hasn't been found, but another student who saw him shortly after reported "he wasn't breathing".

Education Cutbacks

The cutbacks in administrative staff announced by Hastings county board of education effecting savings up to $73,500 by 1973 are assuredly a welcome initiative and one which sets an example for the entire province.

No question of dismissal is involved. Rather the cutbacks and resulting savings stem from routine retirements and the establishment of a greater degree of administrative self-sufficiency in the schools themselves.

It is not often we hear of either savings being effected or prices going down, not in a day in which the federal minister of finance is moved to say "if you do not pay your taxes we will kill you", so that governments may continue taxing and spending.

Recently however we did hear of a Kingston landlord reducing the rent of his apartments, and there was that report from Creston, B.C., the other day about a Grade 3 teacher returning $1,000 of her $11,222 to the local school board saying that "unbridled salary demands will undercut our public image."

Here then are positive steps toward curbing inflation for one thing and releasing money which might be put to other uses than in the educational sphere. It is encouraging to know there are some public bodies, as well as individuals, who are able to say "enough is enough."

Idle Hands

So the kids down Picton way amuse themselves by removing, defacing or even destroying road signs. That is the word from a post-Hallowe'en survey mentioned in our news columns the other day.

And not just in Picton. County engineer D. F. Clark says the areas hardest hit by vandalism Hallowe'en night were Bloomfield, West Lake, Salmon Point and the Lake-on-the-Mountain and Waupoos areas.

All this is certainly at odds with the county's outwardly quiet, almost somnolent image. Drive around the region and signs of human presence are not all that evident. Homes, farms, yes, but where are all the people? They are there of course, and among the young there is evidently mischief aplenty.

Vandalism is a singularly detestable practice but it is very much a product of our age. Of course it is only a minority who indulge in this sort of thing but if they are small in numbers the damage they cause is great. Maybe there are not enough outlets for recreation or creative activity in the county. Amid the height of recreational activity for a fair number there, as indeed in this area, may be nothing. so inspiring as lengthy periods spent in smoke-filled contemplation and idle chatter in coffee shops.

We are not really geared in this country to the kind of disciplined behavior and interested attitude toward work, both manual and academic, the way they are in say China. Instead we have idle hands and/given to irresponsibility.

We note another report from Picton, that there are no courses in music at Prince Edward Collegiate, not even a school band. We agree that this is a serious lack and one that should be remedied.

And speaking of vandalism, defacing signs and so on, we noticed on the blank side of a stop sign in the Queen Street area here has been inscribed a four-letter word. It was of the kind favored by our more addle-brained citizens of lo-morrow (and unhappily, of today too), an obscenity that seems to sum up much of the dilemma of our times.

Fidel's Progress

Cuban Premier Castro has been continuing his merry way in Chile which if the folks there will pardon the pun is still in its chilly season. Down in Punta Arenas at least, the most southernmost centre of that Latin American country. From playing basketball during an earlier stop Castro donned a warm windcheater-style outfit for the trip south where he hammed it up with a drink of chicha (apple jack) from a receptacle called a cacho. In a picture of this leg of the trip the premier is seen flanked by General Manuel Torres, governor of the Magallanes Province, suave in a fur-trimmed topcoat and fur hat and surrounded by military officers. In the background are milling workers and on a wall the inscription: "Fidel." The man is evidently popular down there, propagating, if nothing else, the "Spanish fact" in that area of the world.

Bantu Allowed to Develop Own Culture

Canadian M.P. Sees Apartheid in A New Light

Farmer Tisdagian in the Peterborough Examiner

OTTAWA — The situation of South Africa in Canada is much worse than that country deserves.

This, in brief, is the considered opinion of one Canadian member of Parliament who recently visited South Africa. He is the Hon. J. Angus MacLean, an MP for Prince Edward Island and the former minister of fisheries in the Diefenbaker government.

Mr. MacLean was one of three MPs invited to visit South Africa by an organization called the South Africa Foundation, a wholly independent organization financed entirely by private enterprise. Its purpose is to explain South African policies and promote the country through personal contact at the top level with people throughout the world.

Mr. MacLean made it clear to me in an interview that because he spent 18 days in South Africa he does not, in any sense, regard himself as an expert on that country, its problems and policies. On the other hand, I know he is a mature and experienced MP, not open to easy persuasion from any quarter. For that reason his impressions are, I feel, of more than passing interest.

There were three basic things which greatly impressed him. The first involved the racial problem. He found these to be much more complex than he had imagined. While Canada is a bilingual country and has two major founding races, South Africa also bilingual, has a population composed of four groups, whites, colored people, Asiatics and Bantus.

Mr. MacLean says there is a tendency to equate the Bantu problem with the problem of the black people of the southern United States. But this is a fallacy. While the U.S. racial relationship is developing along the theory of white and black hopefully mixing together on the same cultural basis and standards, the Bantu people reject this. They want to retain their own language, culture, history and unique . It is for this reason the is attempting to b bout a parallel development of all races and groups that make up the more than 21 million population.

The areas in which the Bantu live are more in the nature of separate provinces and these can eventually become and become independent, if they so desire. At the same time, Mr. MacLean was impressed with the facilities provided by the central government for the Bantu homelands in the fields of education, health and child care.

Of the misunderstood word "apartheid" Mr. MacLean says it is based on the premise that people of different backgrounds do not want to be shoved into a melting pot, as in the United States, but want to retain their self-determination: over what parts of their own culture they will retain and what parts abandon.

The second thing that impressed the PEI MP is the vitality of the country's economy which is expanding rapidly under almost full employment and almost industrial opportunities. While job reservation is still practised in some trades, whereby only Europeans can hold jobs, this is beginning to break down. Here, Mr. MacLean says, conservation in the newer trades such as tourism, is the rule. the economy is booming so strongly that almost anyone who is prepared to work can usually get it.

The third impression is the apparently complete freedom of the South African press. Newspapers which are generally said government are frequently more forthright in their criticisms than are the newspapers in Canada.

"At no time did I have a feeling of being in a police state, although admittedly there may be some situations where the Bantus may feel this," Mr. MacLean says. "Neither did I get the impression of great unrest, although this could come from those native people who have been urbanized. The Bantus who live within their own homelands appear to be reasonably content."

One of the trip's highlights was a two-hour meeting with Prime Minister B. J. Vorster. Mr. MacLean was impressed by him and said there is no question the prime minister sincerely believes the policy his government is following is a practical one for South Africa, given the complexity of their problems.

"I doubt if Canadians have been given a true picture of South Africa. The views expressed by its critics are not necessarily more enlightened than the views of the people in positions of power. The critics tend to have simplified answers to their problems, but such answers are not always adequate. The South African argue that to force the pace of development before the people have reached the necessary standards of progress, may only retard the process and many of the ultimate objectives more difficult to attain." Mr. MacLean concluded.

Nixon Sidetracks State Department

FBI and U.S. Reds Among First to Hear of Moscow Trip

By PETER KIERNAN

NEW YORK (CP) The presidency of the United States has always been a many-tentacled apparatus drawing much of its strength from the information it absorbs from the bureaucratic sea which surrounds it.

Under President Nixon it is evolving into a bipedal entity at least in the field of foreign affairs with, its critics say, one foot resting on the shoulders of presidential adviser Henry Kissinger and the other on the body of conservative doctrine which underlies the Republican party.

One of the truncated tentacles of the presidency used to reach into the state department, wherein the pulse of world politics was taken on a regular basis and the diagnosis presented to the president along with his morning coffee.

The president still has the information at his disposal, but the state department is getting the distinct impression it plays a much-reduced role in the decision-making process.

Announcement last month of Nixon s planned visit to the Soviet Union is an example of this estrangement.

Most state department officials first heard of the trip through a memo circulated by the FBI a few days before the announcements.

The memo said the FBI learned from an informant that Gus Hall, general secretary of the American Communist party, had been informed of the trip several days earlier by a Soviet diplomat.

Commented one state department official: "He's obviously more clued in than I am."

Only State Secretary William Rogers apparently knew about the trip, together with, perhaps, a few of his key aides.

In another development, the general director of the foreign service, William Hall, messaged the 300 chiefs of missions overseas that leaks regarding dissent "give us problems" with Congress and the public and must therefore be marked "Limdis."

Limdis is the state department classification for limited distribution of a message from a mission to the top 20 or so officials surrounding the state secretary.

The message from Hall was kept secret from staff members, but its existence was confirmed for the New York Times by a senior foreign service officer.

Another foreign service official suggested the effect of the message — whether intentional or not — would be to intimidate the young officers, who theoretically have the right of dissent from the government they stand, from voicing such dissent.

Washington sources said the order was probably prompted by recent reports of low morale at at least one embassy.

Another state department official said at least part of the aim was to help adverse criticism from the news media, where it could be picked up by political opposition.

Opposed to the apparently waning influence of the state department is the influence of Kissinger, who, together with Rogers, was probably the only government official to know about the visit shortly when the Chinese representatives of the United Nations made their debut with a speech that was described by UN Ambassador George Bush as "the crime as nothing earth-shattering; merely a fairly mild re-statement of long-known Chinese positions.

However, following a subsequent White House conference, Bush emerged with a caustic denunciation of the Chinese speech, reflecting, most observers feel, the view of the White House aim of kicking the UN especially the right-wing Republicans whose support largely owes his tenure in the White House.

It is in this sort of foreign-policy conduct by the Nixon administration that many foreign observers find a slightly schizophrenic approach. Some observers attribute it to the wild which is ruling to separate the president and aspirations and the body of his own government structure designed to allow him to keep in touch with that opinion.

India, Pakistan, and the UN

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Why, you may ask, doesn't the United Nations do something to stop the hostilities on the Indian subcontinent?

The question is a good one. The UN is the organization that is supposed to stop war. The 15-country Security Council has the specific function of seeking peace.

The answer is realism. What can the UN or the council do?

To date India and Pakistan have felt that a council meeting might s counter-productive .

In other words they are doing anything be achieved by sitting around a table and calling each a liar - name? Furthermore, Pakistan has taken a look at the composition of the council and come to the conclusion that it may not have enough friends there to get action that I. agrees with.

A council meeting can be called by any member of the UN on any significant subject. But, in practice, only those who are involved in a dispute call a meeting.

An exception was in 1967 when, just before the Middle East six-day war, Canada and Denmark felt that the situation in the area was so dangerous that the council should take some action.

The Soviet bloc pooh-poohed the idea and nothing came of it.

The council met, about the best it could do is call for peace .

In the past the UN could send observer forces to areas of trouble. They acted as a calming element.

But to send such forces, the UN must have permission from the countries on whose soil which they would be established. It is not certain that both India and Pakistan would accept them.

Credit-Men's Confidence in Man was the subject of an interesting and informative address made by William F. Shade, Jr., of Toronto, a member of Dun and Bradstreet, to the Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon in the Quinte Hotel. Mr. Shade was born in Moose Jaw, receiving his education in the west, in Toronto and finally at McGill University, where he graduated with a Commerce and Finance degree.

Not His Day

Ottawa Journal

Monday the country was waiting to hear if it was to lose a postal strike at the height of the Christmas mailing season. Parliament was waiting and Conservative Walter Dinsdale rose during Question Period to seek from the Postmaster General a report of the situation.

But the question had to be given a non-answer by the Postmaster General's parliamentary secretary, for the minister was not there. It was not "his day" to be in the House under the Cabinet roster system!

Senior Phone Operators Get $20 Boost

MONTREAL (CP) — Bell Canada said Thursday that a new contract worked out during marathon contract talks will include a $20.25-a-week pay rise for senior operators in Ontario and Quebec over a 37-month period.

A Bell spokesman said the new settlement, which must be ratified by the membership of the Traffic Employees Association, would distribute the wage increase in two stages to bring the top level to $125 weekly.

The first raise for Bell operators would be $10.25 a week after 14 months with $10 a week at the end of the remaining 13 months.

The spokesman said the settlement also will eliminate the lowest level of pay in the four-tiered waged scale. The fourth level is expected to be eliminated by November, 1972, by which time all operators will have been advanced to higher levels.

The contract affects some 8,500 operators in Ontario and Quebec.

Canada Will Not Lift Rhodesia Sanctions Yet

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada will not lift its economic sanctions against Rhodesia, at least for the time being, External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp said Thursday.

He said in the Commons that Canada will take its own view on the Britain-Rhodesia agreement in light of all the facts.

Britain and Rhodesia have signed an agreement to end the latter's six-year-old declaration of unilateral independence.

Mr. Sharp said he will confer Saturday with British Minister of State Joseph Godber about the agreement announced Thursday in the British Parliament.

Outside the House, Mr. Sharp told reporters that Canada's position is that there should be no independence without majority African rule.

Critical Stage Reached In Clearing of Seaway

CORNWALL (CP) — An unforeseen buildup of ocean-going vessels in the St. Lawrence seaway system has reached a "critical stage" as the Dec. 12 official winter closing date nears, an official said Thursday.

Randall Quail, the seaway's assistant director of operations, said the system is rapidly reaching a saturation level because of ships diverted into the system by a dock workers' strike on the United States east and gulf coasts.

Since the deadline for normal inbound shipping Nov. 12, about 70 vessels have entered the seaway at Montreal. Another 170 ships were still in the system Thursday morning.

Mr. Quail said many vessels are not taking advantage of opportunities to leave the system because of delivery commitments.

Judge, Prosecutor, Sheriff Threatened at Rape Trial

HALIFAX (CP) — Threats against a Supreme Court judge, a Crown prosecutor and the Halifax county sheriff led to the tight security imposed at the court house here during the rape trial of six members of a local motorcycle gang, Sheriff Arthur Conolly said Thursday.

Mr. Sibley said seven men provided security for the opening of the trial Nov. 15, but the number was gradually increased as threats were received. Forty two officers were stationed at the court house when a 12-man jury brought in their verdict Wednesday.

Five of the men were found guilty of rape and a sixth on a reduced charge of indecent assault. Charges were laid after a 16-year-old girl said she was raped Oct. 7 in the clubhouse of the 13th Tribe motorcycle gang.

The men were remanded to Dec. 3 for sentencing.

Mr. Sibley said a sheriff's deputy was stationed at the home of Mr. Justice D. J. Gillis of the provincial Supreme Court after a threatening call was received.

He said he was threatened in another call, as was Crown prosecutor William Alton.

On Monday, a caller said: "Tonight's the night," Mr. Sibley reported. It was Monday night that a gang of 18 to 20 men, some wearing jackets of the 13th Tribe, attacked Ken Paul, a 43-year-old police inspector.

He was taken to hospital for treatment of cuts and bruises to most of his body, but was later released.

One member of a Montreal motorcycle gang was arrested and charged with assault causing bodily harm for the beating of the inspector. But police said further arrests were being delayed because witnesses feared reprisals if they came forward and gave information.

Russian Gets Adequate Care

DARTMOUTH, N.S. (CP) — Treatment for a Russian, who speaks no English or [illegible] nearly 30 years in Halifax area mental institutions, has not been restricted because of a language barrier, the medical director of the Halifax County hospital said Thursday.

Convicts Get Food Parcels

ATTICA, N.Y. (AP) — At least nine of about 40 convicts in a special security section at Attica state prison received food packages on U.S. Thanksgiving Thursday, thanks to a group of Niagara Falls women.

Prison authorities had told the women that only relatives would be allowed to deliver parcels to the prisoners.

Laura Dove, speaking for the group, said the women handed the parcels to relatives of prisoners lining into the visiting quarters.

Trudeau Distrusts Republic

MONTREAL (CP) — Loud and enthusiastic applause greeted Prime Minister Trudeau Thursday night when he told his constituents he does not believe a republican form of government would work for Canada.

Mr. Trudeau, on a two-day visit of Montreal, was speaking to some 500 members of the suburban Town of Mount Royal Liberal Association, gathered in the town hall for their annual general meeting.

The prime minister said in reply to a question that before changing to a republican system of government, "we would have to know whether it was good for Canada and whether it was what the people wanted."

"However, personally I don't think it would work for Canada. Why replace one symbol with another if it won't work any better?"

During his speech, Mr. Trudeau dealt mainly with the advantages of restrained style of participatory government in a democracy and warned against the dangers of masses deciding what government policies should be.

Using violent means to make one's views known was dangerous to democracy, he said.

Asked whether in view of the federal government's policy on bilingualism he was not embarrassed by the Quebec vote towards unilingualism, Mr. Trudeau said he regretted any move in that direction.

He termed any move towards unilingualism, whether French or English, a regressive step, adding that laws could not be used to promote a language or culture.

Mr. Trudeau received loud applause from the many women among the audience when he said women should be the ones to decide on abortion laws.

However, he was not convinced the majority wanted any further liberalization of the law.

Officials Control New Jersey Prison

RAHWAY, N.J. (AP) — Officials are again in control of Rahway state prison after reaching a peaceful agreement with 300 rebellious convicts who held two wings of the maximum security prison for 24 hours.

The prisoners released their remaining five hostages Thursday night in return for a promise of no reprisals against them. They also were permitted to air their grievances to three reporters who entered the prison.

Officials pledged full negotiations on the grievances.

A team of eight lawyers headed by state public defender Stanley C. Van Ness planned to meet with prisoners this morning.

Under the agreement, the convicts were returned to their cells as fellow prisoners watched to ensure against possible reprisals.

The prisoners' demands included better medical care, better food, prompter parole hearings and an end to alleged racism by white officers.

'72 CRICKET

It's the happy little car that'll help you come smilin' through

Those first few years, when you're just getting started, can be rough. There's not too much left over for the care and feeding of the family car.

When it's a Cricket. Cricket is a 4-door sedan that seats 5 adults quite comfortably. And it has a 14 cubic foot trunk that performs amazing tricks like swallowing baby buggies, suitcases, golf clubs, outboard motors.

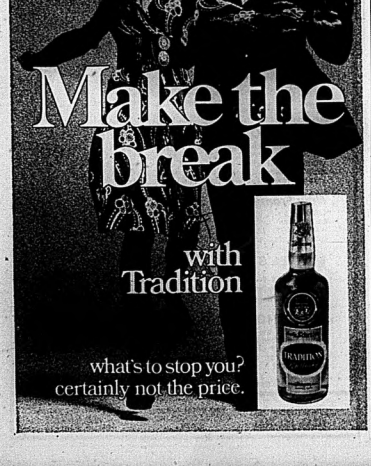
So it's big... but will it last?

You bet. The body is a solid, rattle-free unitized structure that will stay that way for a long long time. And to keep it looking new, it gets a 7-step dip-and-spray rust protection treatment. Front fenders are bolted on for easier, lower cost replacement if need be.

Now, about the nuts and bolts

Cricket is powered by a 4 cylinder, 1500 cc. engine that has been tested in all kinds of weather, so Cricket knows all about Canadian winters. The twin-carb version puts out 70 hp. @ 5400 rpm. The transmission is a fully-synchronized 4-speed unit, mounted on the floor. If you prefer, you can get your Cricket with 3-speed automatic.

Cricket handles the way you expect a small car to handle—nimble. It has rack & pinion steering—the direct steering system that's used on many high-priced sports cars. You can turn Cricket around in less than 32 feet. For stopping, Cricket comes on strong with 9.6 inch power disc brakes up front and self-adjusting drum brakes at the rear.



Don't jump to conclusions.

Sure, there are some very good cars in Cricket's price class but don't make any fast decisions until you've taken a demonstration drive in a Cricket. Your local Plymouth dealer will be glad to put one at your disposal and be happy to tell you all you want to know about Cricket.

Take the time to investigate thoroughly. You have to get the most for your investment—and that's where we think Plymouth's got the answer.

Employees Honored At Union Dinner

MARMORA — The annual banquet and dance of Local 4856 Unitad Steel Workers of America of the Marmoran Mining Company was held in the recently renovated Royal Canadian Legion Hall in Marmora last Saturday evening with 314 members, wives and gues s in attendance.

President Roy Frost welcomed the guests and introduced the head table guests and included: Rev. John Pelaxy and Mrs., Peters, Reeve Jack Reynolds and Mrs. Reynolds, Reeve John Wilkes and Mrs. Wilkes, Mrs. Roy Frost, Mr. and Mrs. William Jones, Mr. and Mrs. William Powell, Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lindale and the guest speaker John Eleen.

A presentation of gifts was made to the five employees who retired during the past year due to age or ill health: Jim Kennedy, Ira Butterfield, Harold Nobes, John Smith and Cecil Bennett. A gift was also presented to Mr. Sam Davidson on behalf of her late husband.

In his introduction of the guest speaker, the president mentioned that John Eleen has been research director for the Ontario Federation of Labor for the past seven years, secretary of the OFL Conservation and Pollution Control committee, a' dropout from the University of Manitoba and author of two books, Poverty in Ontario and The shutdown. To the amusement of the audience, Mr. Eleen added that he had also worked in a mining town in Manitoba as a teenager — washing dishes.

Speaking on the subject of conservation, pollution and jobs, Mr. Eleen said that everyone should be concerned about the quality of life because ik is possible to visualize that a century from now people will have to wear gas masks to survive.

He compared the earth to a spaceship, saying, that like a spaceship, the planet Earth has a most delicate and critical supporting system. Its supplies, such as water, air, soil and minerals are irreplaceable.

There is no home base to go to for repairs or to replace used up supplies. This spaceship Earth can only support so many occupants and its proper functioning is dependent on the co-operation and responsible actions of all the passengers," Mr. Eleen said.

He also added that Unions used to be concerned solely about wages and working conditions, but some few years ago the Unions decided they must tackle the problems of pollution control as well. They are considering having anti-pollution control clauses written into contracts in order to protect the workers and give them clean air and water.

In continuing he said, "Society must not allow itself to be intimidated by the threat of closing down when a firm is faced with the necessity of installing expensive equipment to provide clean air for its workers. We must accept the fact that conservation and pollution control will entail large expenditures of corporate and public funds, but our natural resources must be preserved for future generations who also have a right to them.

In speaking briefly Reeve John Wilkes agreed that pollution is one of the big problems of today. He thanked everyone for the invitation to the banquet and congratulated the Legion members on the renovations to the building.

Reeve John Reynolds also spoke briefly and told of the benefits the community has received through its union members. He noted that $500,000 was spent by them in Marmora every year; the village receives $600 for the rental of the Union office and an $18,000 mining grant from the Government of Ontario.

Area representative William Powell reminded everyone of the health problems connected with the Deloro Refining and Smelting Company back in the 30s and pledged that the unions would continue to battle for a better way of life.

Dancing was enjoyed to Murphy's Merry Mixers.

Mrs. Norris Whitney was the surprise recipient of a crystal boobon dish with a trillium design representing Ontario. The presentation on behal' of the Prince Edward Women's Conservative Association marked Mrs. Whitney's retirement from public life with her husband Norris, who was MLA for Prince-Edward Lennox for the past 20 years. With Mrs. Whitney is Mrs. Walter Nind, a charter president (left) and Mrs. George Pitt second president of the association formed in 1962.

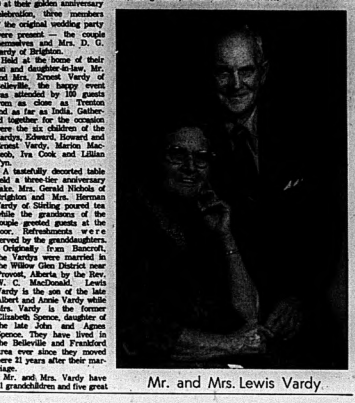
100 Guests at 50th Anniversary



Fifty years ago, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Vardy of Trenton were united in marriage and on Saturday, November 20 at their golden anniversary celebration, three members of the original wedding party were present — the couple themselves and Mrs. D. G. Vardy of Brighton.

Held at the home of their son and daughter-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Vardy of Belleville, the happy event was attended by 100 guests from as close as Trenton and as far as Delhi. Gathered together for the occasion were the six children of the Vardys, Edward, Howard and Ernest Vardy, Marion MacLeob, Iva Cook and Lillian Tym.

A tastefully decorted table held a three-tier anniversary cake. Mrs. Gerald Nichols of Brighton and Mrs. Herman Vardy of Stirling poured tea while the grandsons of the couple greeted guests at the door. Refreshments were served by the granddaughters.

Originally from Bancroft, the Vardys were married in the Willow Glen District near Prowse, Alberta by the Rev. W. C. MacDonald. Lewis Vardy is the son of the late Albert and Annie Vardy while Mrs. Vardy is the former Elizabeth Spence, daughter of the late John and Agnes Spence. They have lived in the Belleville and Frankford area ever since they moved here 21 years after their marriage.

Mr. and Mrs. Vardy have 21 grandchildren and five great grandchildren. Cards and congratulatory messages poured in from Richard Potter, William Davis, George Hees, Prime Minister Trudeau and Robert Stanfield. The couple were honored with the gift of a scroll from the government of Ontario.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Vardy.

Ministers Outline Principals of Faith

A unique meeting, the first of its kind in the area, was held at the Knights of Columbus Hall in Trenton when special guests for the evening were three non-Catholic ministers. The Grand Knight of the Belleville Council was also in attendance as an invited guest.

H. J. Carter moderator for the meeting warmly greeted the guests and large number of members present. Each guest was introduced and asked to outline the principals of his faith.

Rev. Frank Hobbs of Grace United Church spoke of the founding of the United Church in the early 1900s when the Presbyterian and Methodist churches united.

Rev. Michael Caswell of St. George's Anglican Church and president of the Trenton and District Ministerial Association spoke of the early High English and Low English o fthe Church of England which is now the Anglican Church.

For the Christian Reform Church Rev. Ray Popma explained how his church became established in the Netherlands in 1834. For political reasons they came to America in 1857 and established in Michigan and since that time have spread throughout the country.

Each of the invited guests thanked the group for inviting them and giving them the opportunity for a better understanding of the others' religious beliefs.

Mr. Carter expressed thanks and agreed with the others by saying "with understanding comes respect."

Ann Landers

Daughter Is Target Of Mom's Yelling

Dear Ann Landers: Everybody sees himself in your column, sooner or later. I saw myself a few days ago. It was the letter from the girl whose mother yelled at her constantly over nothing. I get chewed out by my mom regularly. I realize she is not really mad at me but she has to take out her anger somehow and I'm the handiest target. No matter how hard I try to stay out of her way she finds something to holler about.

Her pattern of yelling is always the same. It starts out over nothing and builds. The more she yells the madder she gets. Pretty soon she is screaming about a completely different subject than the one she started on.

Please tell me what I can do about it. I have another two years to go before I get out of the house and go to college. —Battered Ear Drums

Dear Battered: A person who understands a problem has it half solved, and it is obvious that you do understand. There is no way you can change your mother. She needs professional help. You can, however, protect yourself by listening quietly and remembering that her rage has nothing to do with you—that she is really angry with herself. Make no attempt to reason with her when she's off on a screamer. She's not rational. And if it will make you feel better, dear, you have lots of company.

Dear Ann Landers: I work on a newspaper and have written heads and subheads for your column for many years, so I've read every word you've written for a long time. Today I see another letter from someone who is upset because someone said the wrong thing. Bereaved mourners are unhappy because of a thoughtless comment. An adoptive dad is distraught because someone made a snide crack. A mother with a homely child is miserable because a friend made a hurtful remark.

Even the kindest and most considerate people are frequently surprised when a thought that seemed all right in the head comes out of the mouth in a cloddish manner. It happens all the time. So why should anyone allow himself to become totally fragmented by an insignificant, ill-phrased statement that wasn't intended to hurt?

Most folks are decent. The malicious and mean devils are definitely in the minority. Wouldn't it be a happier world if we didn't attach so much importance to what people say I hope you will print this, Ann, and I hope I said it right.—I Understand

Dear Understand: You did and I thank you.

Dear Ann Landers: My mother and grandmother both smoke like a couple of chimneys. They always seem to be lighting up during a meal—a cigarette with the breakfast coffee, a cigarette after the salad, a cigarette before the dessert. It ruins my appetite and makes me sick to my stomach. Does a 13-year-old have the right to say anything? If so, what?—Choking To Death In Greenwich

Dear Choking: In some countries, smoking during a meal is considered an insult to the cook. In our country it is bad manners to smoke during a meal unless one asks permission from the non-smoker. Since your chimneys—I mean your mother and grandmother—are not about to ask your permission, I suggest you tell them that their smoking spoils your appetite and if they would please cut out the cigarettes between courses, you would be glad to leave the table when they light up with their dessert and coffee.

Three Tasty Dishes for Apple Lovers

By ALICE DENBOFF

Lots and lots of pumpkin and mince pies around—it's that time of year. But it's always the right time for apple pie, that perennial favorite. And it's always the perfect time for apples.

There they are, those packets of health and flavor, piled up in their green, gold and ruddy beauty in our markets. The apple is a fruit beloved by poets and writers, as well as the apple-eaters of the rest of us. Look up apples in your Bartlett's and note the numerous quotations.

As for statistics, there are some 7,000 named varieties of apples. Some are the Red or Yellow, Delicious, Jonathan, McIntosh, Winesap, York, Stayman, Yellow Newtown, Cortland, Northern Spy, Rhode Greening.

So now, let's get to work and turn out - truly:

BLUE RIBBON APPLE PIE
¾ cup sugar
2 teaspoons ground cinnamon

½ teaspoon ground allspice
⅛ teaspoon ground cloves
Pastry for 2 crust 9-inch pie
5 cups sliced fresh apples
2 tablespoons light cream
1 tablespoon butter or margarine

Thoroughly mix sugar and spices; set aside. Line a 9-inch pie plate with pastry. Place apples in layers in pastry, sprinkling sugar mixture over the apple layers. Add cream. Dot with butter. Top with remaining pastry. Press edges together and flute edges of pastry; make gashes in top of pastry. Bake in preheated hot oven (400 degrees F.) 15 to 20 minutes. Reduce heat to 350 degrees F. and continue baking 30 to 35 minutes longer or until crust is browned and apples are tender.

APPLE PIE, always a big winner, rates a Blue Ribbon when it turns out like this one, nicely spiced and golden brown.

FRESH APPLE CRUMB CAKE
5 cups sliced apples
½ cup sugar
1 tablespoon flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
¼ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons fresh lemon juice
2 cups all purpose flour
½ cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
½ cup shortening
1 egg, slightly beaten

1 teaspoon vanilla extract
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon ground cinnamon

In medium saucepan, combine first 6 ingredients. Bring to boiling point, stirring constantly. Reduce heat and simmer, covered, 5 to 8 minutes or until apples are tender but firm. Stir together flour, sugar, baking powder and salt. Add shortening. Mix well with pastry blender or fork. Add egg and vanilla; mix well.

Save 1 cup pastry mixture for topping.

Put remaining dough into bottom and sides of a greased 8 x 10 x 2-inch baking dish. Spread apples over dough; dot with butter.

Add the 2 tablespoons sugar and ½ teaspoon cinnamon to the reserved topping. Sprinkle over apples.

Bake at 350 degrees F. 35 to 40 minutes or until topping is golden brown.

Serve warm or cold. It's a winner either way. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

Apples take honors in a delicious slaw, try this and see how much you like it:

HOT APPLE SLAW
3 cups finely shredded fresh cabbage
2 tablespoons cider vinegar
2 teaspoons sugar
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1 teaspoon tarragon leaves
¼ teaspoon salt
1-16 teaspoon pepper
2 cups (1 medium) grated raw apples

Place cabbage in saucepan with remaining ingredients except apples. Bring to boiling point. Stir in apples and cook 1 minute. Serve with apples. Serve as an accompaniment for ham, corned beef or tongue.

Makes 4 servings.

Canadian Correspondence Course Designed for the Remote Areas

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Our too-brief encounter in Halifax was most enjoyable and will bear repetition.

My correspondence course in creative writing will be a first for Atlantic Canada and quite possibly for the entire country. As I told you, it is designed for people in remote areas, handicapped folk who cannot attend regular class, and for shift work personnel; for young people with interest and ambition and limited funds and any others who find in it the answer to their needs. — Marjorie

Dear Marjorie: Congratulations to you for tackling something like this. I don't believe a week passes without somebody asking for help in getting started at writing. People who feel they have an itching pen and don't know what to do with it!

You have approval from outstanding educationists, and I quote Donald Westmore, Supervisor Cultural Services, NFB Department, Education Adult Division:

"We have encouraged and supported Mrs. Marjorie Fisher to develop a correspondence course in creative writing. We highly endorse the course and believe that a person who puts sincere effort into it will greatly benefit from it."

Readers: Want to know more? Send me a stamped, self-addressed envelope and I will go into detail.

• • •

Dear Doris: I'm to pour tea at my sister-in-law's 25th wedding anniversary. Please tell me what is expected of me. How do I dress and so on? — Pouring Tea

Dear Pouring: You are indeed honored to be asked — but it's not very complicated.

You sit at one end of the tea table with the silver teapot, cream and sugar before you. When a guest approaches, you pour her cup, ask would she care for milk and sugar — or lemon —and put in these trimmings.

In a large tea, assistants to the hostess often circulate with trays of cups and saucers, already filled with tea. Follow up with a small cream and sugar tray. Then passes sandwiches, cakes—and cookies.

• • •

Time was when hats were a must at all tea parties, but now, with our top-high hair-fashions, hats hardly get a look - in. Dress? Something soft, dressy, afternoon-like with appropriate jewellery, not evening. You don't want to look like a pre-season Christmas tree.

• • •

Dear Doris: In your column I read an unfortunate inclusion in a plea for racial broadmindedness.

I quote, "... And do you know how discrimination starts? By a mother telling her small daughter not to play with the little girl whose father happens to be a minority, who speaks a strange language, who looks or smells differently."

Honestly, can you feature a concerned mother telling her somebody "smelling" differently? I know enough people in the past have considered this to be so, but surely this is all part of the whole discrimination problem and such thinking is prejudicial — is it not? Or do you know something that I don't know? — Puzzled

Dear Dot: Prejudicial? It sure is! What I was describing was a true instance of the kind of mother who (unhappily) communicates to her small fry her playmate is different and undesirable.

In some people the sense of smell has a good deal to do with their rejection of another individual; otherwise, how would so many television commercials on the subject get by? . . .

If something is troubling you, there's help to be had. Write to Doris for another slant on your difficulty.

Couple Mark 40th Wedding Anniversary

A pleasant time was spent recently when Mr. and Mrs. Gerald Brickman celebrated the occasion of their 40th wedding anniversary.

To mark the event dinner was enjoyed at the Four Seasons Hotel when the honored couple were joined with their only daughter and husband Marilyn and Allen Hackett and grandchildren Debbie and Robbie of Toronto, along with other immediate relatives.

Later in the evening a social time was spent at the home of Mrs. Florence Moon when 50 friends and relatives gathered to extend congratulations and best wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Brickman. Included in the group were relatives from Oshawa and Cobourg.

Refreshments were served and all enjoyed a time of reminiscing and fellowship.

UCW MEETINGS

FRANCFORD UCW UNIT 1

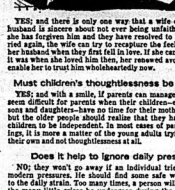
Unit I of the United Church Women met at the home of Mrs. Bill Sanderson on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 9, with 18 members present. Mrs. Robert Tomecek took charge of the business part of the meeting dealing with coming events in the local church, and neighboring churches, the purchase of five extensions for tables, and the repair of an organ fund for the church.

Mrs. Tomecek will be the new leader for Unit I with other offices remaining as they were last year.

Mrs. J. K. Beach gave a report on the Presbytery rally held recently at Westminster Church. A visitation program was outlined by Mrs. George Halsall. Each member of Unit I chose one person to visit before the Christmas meeting. It is hoped those visited will come for the Christmas meeting.

Call to meditation was given by Mrs. Tomecek. Mrs. W. Scott read the scripture followed by a poem on prayer by Mrs. Tomecek. The worship service was centred around prayer, with Mrs. Beach, Mrs. Finnigan, Mrs. Morrow, Mrs. Boyer, Mrs. Ada Osmun, Mrs. Scott and Mrs. Tomecek taking part. The thought for the day left with the members was "teach us to be humble".

A card to Mrs. Leonard Reid, who is a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital was signed by all.



Mrs. W. Sanderson and Mrs. M. Dafoe brightened up a dreary November day with a colored slide trip across Canada, from coast to coast, and then finished with a few slides of Florida as a gentle reminder it would be enjoyable to be in the warm climate for the winter months.

A very enjoyable afternoon was brought to a close with a delicious lunch served by Mrs. Madill, Mrs. Osterhout and Mrs. Sanderson.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can a wife ever believe a 'reformed' husband?

YES; and there is only one way that a wife can be sure her husband is sincere about not ever being unfaithful again. Once she has forgiven him and they have resolved to be happily married again, the wife can try to recapture the feeling she had for her husband when they first fell in love. If she can remember how it was when she loved him then, her renewed avowal of love will enable her to trust him wholeheartedly now.

Must children's thoughtlessness be accepted?

YES; and with a smile, if parents can manage it. Sure it may seem difficult for parents when their children—especially grown sons and daughters—have no time for their mothers and fathers, but the older people should realize that they have taught their children to be independent. In most cases of parental loving feelings, it is more a matter of the young adults trying to get by on their own and not thoughtlessness at all.

Does it help to ignore daily pressures?

NO; that won't go away if an individual tries to ignore the modern pressures. He should find some safe way to give vent to the daily strain. Too many times, a person will try to "jungle" the many little crises he undergoes during the day; then, as it often happens, he suddenly finds himself overwhelmed by something and the whole "shooting match" falls apart as he collapses under the strain he had thought he could ignore.

Chretien and Cardinal Quarrel Over Accounting of Money

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien said Thursday the Alberta Indian Association has yet to give a proper accounting for about $250,000 it received from the government in the last fiscal year.

But Harold Cardinal, president of the association, said every penny of federal funds was accounted for in quarterly statements provided to the Indian affairs department.

The split between the minister and Mr. Cardinal came to light as the Commons Indian affairs committee sat for six hours to look into the school strike staged by 1,225 Indian students in protest of living conditions on three northeastern Alberta reserves.

Also part of the protest was a demand for schools on the reserves to avoid sending the students to provincial schools in neighboring communities.

The committee resumes its sittings today.

Although the main purpose of the sessions were to find out if the school strike could have been averted, committee members spent most of the day on federal financing of programs carried out by the Alberta association.

Mr. Chretien said the association received about $330,000 last year for community development and leadership programs.

These were formerly operated by the Indian affairs staff but were turned over to the association and formal contracts signed.

Mr. Chretien said a government audit bureau, independent of his department, had informed him that only $61,000 was spent within the terms of the contract.

About $125,000 went in general administration of the Alberta association in violation of the contract terms, said the minister.

There was no accounting yet for the remaining $135,000, declared Mr. Chretien.

Mr. Cardinal, who sat by while Mr. Chretien gave his evidence, explained his side at a night sitting.

He said his association received $165,000 for community development in late February, about a month before the end of the government's fiscal year.

There was no way his group could spend so much money on the program in the short time remaining. So he wrote the department asking permission to use the money for other programs already in force.

His only answer was that the matter would be studied by treasury board.

Mr. Cardinal also said Mr. Chretien had spoken of the need for Indians to become involved and be consulted on programs.

"Our interpretation of that was we must have a viable program and do it with our own people," he said.

He said there was no reason to run the program the way the department had since it hadn't worked under the public servants.

"We had to have some leeway to develop alternatives," he added.

"In that framework, we have accounted for every penny. I was surprised by the minister's statement — it was never brought to our attention before."

Mr. Cardinal's statement didn't appear to satisfy many of the committee members.

Walter Deakon (L—Toronto High Park) asked whether the association hadn't signed a contract and wasn't obliged to live up to its terms.

Clifford Downey (PC—Battle River) started his line of questioning by saying he often noted Mr. Cardinal sitting first-class on airplane flights, complimented him on his fine skin clothing and added that Mr. Cardinal drove "a respectable automobile."

He was called to order when he asked Mr. Cardinal how much income tax he paid a year.

Mr. Cardinal, 26, responded he wouldn't be able to wear such clothes if his father didn't trap and his mother wasn't such a fine sewer. A finance company owned more of his car than he did.

NEW PLAN STARTS THIS SUNDAY.

When to get the lowest Long Distance rate for calls within Ontario and Quebec

When to call Long Distance to get the lowest rate.

You'll get the lowest rate available with the new "Sunday Visit" Plan. DIAL DIRECT on Sundays between 8:00 a.m. and 6:00 p.m., and you'll get three-quarters off the regular rate.

Or, you can get two-thirds off the regular rate with the "Late Night" rate — between 11:00 p.m. and 8:00 a.m. when you DIAL DIRECT. But remember, this new plan does not become effective until November 28th.

The following changes in discounts on Long Distance calls have been approved by the Canadian Transport Commission for a six-month trial period.

They apply to calls within Bell territory in Ontario, Quebec, Labrador and N.W.T.

New "Sunday Visit" Plan

On Sundays, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m. when you dial direct you'll get a discount of 3/4 off the dial direct regular charge, as shown in Table 1, for the initial minute and each additional minute of your call. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.00 you'll be billed 25 cents. The "Sunday Visit" rate is not exactly the same as "Family Calling" rate — in some cases it works out to be a little more, in others less — but it's close. From 6 p.m. to 11 p.m. a discount of 1/2 applies. See table 2.

	From November 28th. "Sunday Visit" Plan 8 a.m. to 6 p.m.		Before June 6th "Family Calling" Plan 10-12 p.m. & all day Sunday
For example:	10 mins.	20 mins.	10 mins.	20 mins.
North Bay to Toronto	$ .81	$1.61	$ .80	$1.55
Kingston to Toronto	$ .73	$1.46	$ .75	$1.50
Ottawa to Cornwall	$ .53	$1.06	$ .60	$1.10

New "Late Night" rate

From 11 p.m. to 8 a.m. you get a 2/3 discount off the regular rate, when you dial direct. That means if the regular rate for your call is $1.50, you'll be billed .50 cents. For typical comparisons see Table 3 below.

New pay phone and hotel rates

There is a 3-minute minimum on station-to-station calls from pay phones and hotels, and discounts do not apply to this initial period. Discounts (Table 2) will apply only to additional minutes, as shown in Table 1 — provided that you pay for the call by inserting coins or, in the case of a hotel phone, on your hotel bill.

Since this is provided as an alternative to dial-direct calls, the discounts do not apply to collect calls, credit card calls, or calls billed to a third number. Pay phone charges are rounded to the nearest nickel.

	Customer-dialed call weekday evening 3 mins. 10 mins.		Similar call from pay phone or hotel, weekday evening 3 mins. 10 mins.		Credit card, collect calls or calls charged to a third party 3 mins.	10 mins.
For example:
Ottawa to Toronto	$ .73	$2.37	$1.30	$2.93	$1.30	$3.75
Kingston to Montreal	$ .67	$2.16	$1.20	$2.69	$1.20	$3.44

Ancient Art of Knotting Is Revived

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The arts and craft world is tied up in knots — entangled in the revival of an ancient textile technique.

The technique is as old as a caveman with two vines to join together, and as new as a small boy with his first ball of string.

The craft glories in the French name macrame, but in essence it consists of tasteful creative knotting that results in textile-like products. Wall hangings, belts, jewelry, handbags, even clothing are being turned out by the craftsmen working with the new skill.

Belleville's recreation committee offered a course in knotting this year for the first time as part of Queen Victoria School's community programs, and found the response overwhelming. It had to program two courses, each with about 20 people enrolled. The chief is Mrs. Elizabeth Marshall, who learned the craft from a physiotherapist in Thunder Bay.

Macrame consists of two basic knots, and variations on them. There are no tools required — no needles or pins or hooks that tend to deter people," says Mrs. Marshall.

The two knots, the square and the half hitch, are part of everyone's basic repertoire, but it's how they're put together that makes the difference.

But because knotting was almost unknown until recently, its followers have problems unique to their craft. Finding proper materials is one — string and twine and cord suitable for the work take some searching out and a lot of word-of-mouth advertising among knotters. In the past year, companies that cater to knitters and crocheters have started macrame cords on the market, but it is expensive and not adaptable to all knitting projects.

Marine and fishermen's suppliers and hardware stores are still the main source of materials, and the pooling of information is one of the reasons Mrs. Marshall favors knotters working together. Another reason is creative inspiration.

"Macrame is still uncommon, it is just becoming a craft, and knotters need to learn from one another's experiments," she says.

That's why she hopes to end the course she is now teaching with a public display. Only half way through the course, her students have already turned out wall hangings, belts and necklaces.

Mrs. Marshall is typical of the younger women taking up the new craft.

"I was never interested in crafts and was convinced I wasn't clever with my hands," she says.

But she found knotting easy, and since it requires no equipment beyond a ball of string and a board for measuring the cords, it can be done anywhere.

Simple knotting is part of the training of physio- and occupational therapists, who use it to help patients regain use of their fingers and hands.

But following a wave of popularity in England and Europe in late Victorian times it almost disappeared until a few California craftsmen, mostly weavers revived it in the late 1960s.

Decorative knotting for fringes on garments was known in the Babylonian and Assyrian civilizations and spread westward as civilization swept across the Mediterranean lands.

During the high age of needle and bobbin-made laces in the 1500s, macramé lace was produced in Italy and Spain, and from there missionaries and sailors carried the craft to Mexico and South America.

But throughout most of its modern history, macrame has been a sailors' craft, practiced to while away long hours at sea.

When the Hudson's Bay ship Nonesuch visited Belleville harbor last year she was decorated with a few small pieces of macrame provided by her English riggers.

Perhaps macrame's revival is a victory for women's lib — although it is traditionally a masculine craft. few men today are clamoring to learn knotting.

Parks Board Asks Council For East Zwick's Funding

Cost estimates for the proposed development of East Zwick's Island Park are set-

Head Count Now Official

TWEED (Special) — The official count is in from the Hastings and Prince Edward Assessment Office, and this village's population for 1971 is 1,719.

Council received the report at its last meeting.

It also considered a petition from residents on Park Ave., for installation of a sanitary sewer under the Local Improvement Act.

J. D. Lee Engineering Ltd. has requested to draw up plans for the sewer and to apply to the Ontario Water Resources Commission for its approval.

A letter was received from the department of transportation and communications, granting approval to the paving of College St. from River Street to Katharine St., at a cost of $2,241.

ting inflation along with the times.

Latest cost estimates for the park as submitted by the city parks board consultants Johnston, Sasiunik, Weinstein and Associates call for a total of $655,000, including design fees, property acquisition and stockpiling of soil.

This compares with a previous cost estimate of $400,000, which had been considered for the five-year 1972-76 capital works budget for both Zwick's Island and a service building.

Now, revised cost estimates indicate basic requirements for the park development including top soil, grass seed, road construction and tree planting can be provided for approximately $250,000 in phase I of the project with design fees estimated at $97,000.

Yesterday the parks board recommended that $100,000 per annum be provided in the city's capital budget for each of the 1972-76 period for East Zwick's development.

The recommendation will be forwarded to city council for budget committee approval.

Also at yesterday's parks board meeting members discussed possible winter works projects which might be undertaken under the federal and provincial governments' incentive works program.

Two Break-ins

Police report two overnight break-ins, neither of which resulted in serious loss.

Nothing appears to have been taken.

A break-in was also discovered at Marv's Service Station on the corner of Church and Dundas Street. A window, valued at $2 was broken, but again, nothing appears to have been taken.

As the thief or thieves left the premises, a latch on the rear door was broken. Replacement value is $10.

Family Planning Group Will Survey Doctors

Physicians in Hastings and Prince Edward counties will be surveyed on their willingness to co-operate with the newly formed Family Planning Association here.

The survey will be a first. According to Family Planning Association headquarters in Toronto, no community has questioned its doctors to learn their attitudes toward counseling patients on birth control and their willingness to accept referrals from the association.

"Until we have a list of doctors willing to co-operate, we can't get off the ground," said Dr. R. E. Bellamy at a board of directors' meeting at United Community Services last night.

The questionnaire, prepared with the assistance of Dr. W. M. Weaver of Trenton, a member of the Family Planning Association's board of directors, will ask doctors if they would be willing to see patients referred by the association. It will query them about their willingness to counsel patients and prescribe in regard to contraception, sterilization, abortion, venereal disease, and infertility.

The directors discussed preserving the anonymity of unmarried adolescents in cases in which doctors bill patients directly, instead of providing medical insurance claims to OMSIP.

"If you were a doctor who bills patient directly, the bill for an unmarried girl would go to her parents and the insurance agencies don't give a damn about the girl's right to privacy," said Dr. Weaver.

He added that the association would have difficulty learning which doctors bill patients and which bill OMSIP, and doctors have the option of changing their billing system every three months.

Dr. Weaver cautioned the association about including a question about confidentiality for adolescents in the doctors' questionnaire.

"You can't expect to bind them," he said. "Most will treat the situation confidentially anyway. Despite what the public thinks, most doctors are interested in keeping their patients happy, although you'd never know it reading the press."

The association also decided to form a literature committee to investigate the literature available in district libraries. Members of the board of directors will read the books and pamphlets available in libraries and those put out by drug companies and the central family planning association.

A report will be prepared on all literature available locally and any literature distributed will carry the directors' recommendation.

Tentative plans were made to discuss a half-day workshop with physical education teachers from Hastings and Prince Edward county schools. The physical education teachers are responsible for teaching sex education in high schools, and the association is seeking a liaison with them sharing the educational function of the family planning branch.

Other projects discussed were workshops for ministers and for association workers, who will eventually staff an educational and referral agency.

Mrs. Evelyn Payton, a caseworker from the Family Services department of the Family and Children's Services of Hastings county reported on the annual Family Planning Association's convention held recently in Halifax.

Absorbed caused a large share of the conference time, she said. It was decided that it was up to the local branches to decide on their own attitude toward abortion and liberalization of abortion laws.

She reported that the most successful branches were those who maintained evening drop-in centres for information and referral services.

"The people who should be reached won't be reached unless we go to them," she said.

Dec. 15 Date Set For Boards

Belleville residents wishing appointment to various civic boards or commissions are invited to make their wishes known at city hall before the middle of December.

The invitation was extended at this week's city council meeting by Mayor J. Russell Scott when the nominating council will hold a caucus meeting Wednesday, Dec. 15 for consideration of appointments to the various boards.

The appointment decided on at the caucus meeting will be ratified at the first meeting in the new year.

In extending the invitation for submission of names for board appointments, Mayor Scott expressed his appreciation to civic minded residents whose terms of office will be concluded at the end of this year.

Bake Sale at Tweed

TWEED — A successful and interesting bake sale was held Saturday, November 20 by the Tweed Kinette Club, at Ron Way's Auto Show room, on Victoria Street. There was a fine array of buns, bread, pastries, jellies, pickles, etc, which were quickly purchased and the convener, Kinette Helen Shenton was pleased for the good response to the sale.

A "birthday cake" was made, decorated with icing, and in the centre opening a dish of yellow "mums set off with candlestick, by Mrs. Monaghan, on which the Kinettes sold tickets, to help raise funds. The winning ticket was drawn by a new Kinette member Margo Blower. with the cake being awarded to the ticket-holder, Miss Margaret Spencer.

The Tweed Kinette Club is planning a Christmas party, to be held December 18 in the Hungerford Township Hall, with Kinettes, their husbands, and members of the Kinsmen Club invited as guests.

Letter from Zambia

Combating Health, Nutrition Problems Rewarding Experience

Editor's Note: This is the second letter received by The Intelligencer from Mrs. Harry Fast, a former Bellevillian. Mrs. Edythe Fast and her husband have been living in Zambia, Africa, for about 18 months. She is as active in community affairs here as she was while a resident of this city.

The Nutrition Group Conference held in Kabwe in June, 1971 gave some of us working with or interested in the Nutrition Group in Zambia, an opportunity to spend three days with Dr. Maurice King and his wife, also a medical doctor, the directors of the conference.

Dr. King established the Department of Social Medicine at the University of Zambia and he and his wife are doing research work on malnutrition in this country. Dr. King is also the editor of Medical Care in Developing Countries, a book based on a conference assisted by WHO and UNICEF and held at Makerere University, Uganda in 1966. It is from these sources I base this article.

There are certain basic differences encountered between health care in "developed" and "developing" countries, the result, in part, of the limited resources in any given country and of these resources having to be spread between education, economic and social welfare as well as medical services (in Zambia approx. $1 per head per year). It is not surprising, therefore, that persons coming here from any industrialized nation are dismayed at the care taken in assuring the standards are not set too high so the provision of service may benefit the greatest numbers. The patient is treated as close to home as possible, since transportation is a major problem, but also to provide some form of medical care to all the people all the time.

A "referral system" is a highly planned chain of health units which begin with the simplest and least expensive health sub-centre and progress to the more extensive health centres, district hospitals, regional hospitals, and finally the National Hospital (University Teaching Hospital and Research Centre, Lusaka).

Professional staff is at a premium in the country may rely on professionals or volunteer agencies outside Africa until such time there are enough of their own people trained. It is for this reason the auxiliary staff is of prime importance. Their training endeavors in "health aid" which has to be repeated many times, even though it is comparatively intricate."

There are five categories of auxiliaries. They are classified according to their level of basic education, the specialties within medicine and the length of vocational training. They are:

1. Curative medicine and pediatrics as performed by the medical assistant (3 to 4 years training in a medical school).

2. Nursing . . the enrollee nurse (presently 2 years' high school and 2 years training) and graded dressers. . .

3. Midwifery . . the enrolled midwife who also may do health visiting with the aid of an assistant if necessary.

4. Environmental health . . the duty of the Health Inspector and his assistant and-or Health Visitor.

5. Public Health Nurses . . also known as Comprehensive Nurses who have nursing and midwifery skills and act as Health Visitors as well.

It is estimated that between 40 and 50 percent of children die in Zambia before the reach the age of five years. The main causes and in order of the highest percentages are diarrhoeal diseases pneumonia, protein-calorie malnutrition, malaria, whooping cough, measles, TB, smallpox and neonatal tetanus.

It is because of this distressing circumstance that the Under-Five Clinics were made a priority in the first four year development plan (1966-1970) following independence. The clinics are set up throughout Zambia and the numbers are increasing as staff and accommodation become available. There are 30 nurses who are present manned in large part by health volunteers mainly from the Scandinavian countries. On Oct. 13 a new government was announced by which an Under - Five Clinic will be established in every general council area by mid-1972 at Zambia.

The majority of people in developing countries live with pre-industrial harmful beliefs, as Europeanized Americans did prior to the Industrial Revolution. Many have not outgrown even today. It is thought imperative then that the young child be kept exposed to scientific medicine the more he is kept at his home life and from a clinic or hospital when he is older.

The adult population of the rural areas in particular require a change of knowledge, a change of attitude, a change of behavior which will hopefully cause a change in habits and eventually lead to a change in diet. This is not an easy task and demands the utmost patience and understanding. It is not only an exercise in sociology but psychology as well.

The doctor holds a unique and influential place in these communities and it is not only social training to deal with the social change in culture but a knowledge of the diseases peculiar to the tropics.

The traditional African healers are revered and should not be underestimated in the part they play in medical treatment. They must be employed in working with them. Professional people here regard most traditional healers as quacks and those that are not mercenary, but tactically changed. The Medicine Man is an experienced herbalist whose knowledge has been handed down from father to son. Research is now being carried out to determine the benefits or otherwise of their medicine.

Children are all too often brought to the hospital when they are gravely ill and too late to die. This fate leaves the mothers with the impression hospitals are where you take children to die which makes them reluctant to bring other children when they become ill.

The Under - Five Clinics break this vicious circle by getting early diagnosis and treatment and they help to resince confidence in the scientific method.

The clinics promote not only the general welfare and good nutrition but immunize to prevent disease.

It is interesting to note that the mothers are grouped around the nurse's desk while the interviews individuals. They thereby hear what others are told and learn frequent repetition. The mother will find it easier to change her own practices if she knows her friends are also changing.

The Nutritionist in following countries is not only a protein-calorie deficiency but also the lack of vitamins and minerals. The diseases resulting are known as "marasmus" which affects children usually under one year and distinguished by the child's body; "Kwashiorkor" is usually found in children about 18 months old, the child not necessarily appearing thin. There are children with a combination of these two diseases, No matter which they suffer their resistance to other disease is very low and thus the high mortality rate. Thoshi who come to the hospital afflicted with the protein-calorie malnutrition deficiency can respond dramatically to treatment.

Prevention is the paid-disciplinary forces such as agriculture, education, community development workers, rural development workers, women's clubs for the masses, etc.

2. By treatment, early diagnosis and prevention through education.

Another area of medical care in Zambia that makes a tremendous contribution to children as well as adults is the Flying Doctor Service. This group of dedicated people serves the rural areas too remote from the line-of - rail health services. They carry comprehensive medical services in nine airstrip clinics throughout Zambia and are expanding yearly as funds permit. Doctors and nurses visit all the clinics three times weekly or depending on the volume of work and the distance from headquarters, are left at a clinic from five days to three weeks. They fly patients to hospitals when necessary and in 1970 treated 98,000 patients.

All developing countries face tremendous problems. What a challenge to those who wish to serve humanity without concern for the almighty dollar! What an opportunity for the present generation of young people seeking a truly rewarding life than a bank account! What a gratifying experience to assist in whatever way one can to further the realization of the health goals set for Zambia.

Dallas Holds Tight

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Dallas Cowboys have tightened their grasp on the National Conference East lead and, by doing so, have thrown the West into an even wilder three-way scramble.

The Cowboys beat Los Angeles Rams 38-21 in one of Thursday's National Football League games—Detroit Lions topped Kansas City Chiefs 32-21 in the other—to open a one-game edge over Washington in the NFC East.

That also sent the Rams sliding back into a virtual dead-lock with San Francisco 49ers in the West—and Atlanta Falcons are only half a game behind the front-runners.

The 49ers can take sole possession of first with a victory over New York Jets Sunday and the Falcons can stay in the race by turning back Minnesota Vikings.

Sunday's other games have Washington at Philadelphia, St. Louis at the New York Giants, New Orleans against Green Bay at Milwaukee, New England at Buffalo, San Diego at Cincinnati, Denver at Pittsburgh, Cleveland at Houston and Baltimore at Oakland. On Monday night, Chicago visits Miami.

"I feel sorry but happy," Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach said after scrambling for 33 yards and passing for 234 more. "We won it and it was a big win."

Staubach rifled touchdown passes of 13 yards to Bob Hayes and 21 to Lance Alworth and Isaac Thomas steamed 99 yards with a kickoff return for the Cowboys' other scores.

Roman Gabriel, the Rams' quarterback who struck for touchdown passes of 33 yards to Bob Klein and two yards to Pat Curran, passed for 234 yards but suffered an injury.

The Rams took a 14-7 lead heading toward halftime but, instead of increasing it, they blew it when a fake field goal backfired.

"I've bit that play a million times in practice," said holder Jerry Rhome, who overthrew a open receiver. On the next play Staubach unleashed his scoring bomb to Hayes.

Nebraska Number One

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Top-ranked Nebraska defeated No. 2-ranked Oklahoma 35-31 Thursday and Auburn quarterback Pat Sullivan was named winner of the Heisman Trophy, the premier award in college football in the United States.

Jeff Kinney's fourth touchdown of the day, a two-yarder climaxing a 91-yard drive with the closing minutes, gave Nebraska its win over Oklahoma in one of several games played on the U.S. Thanksgiving Day holiday.

The victory all but wrapped up the national championship for the Cornhuskers, who will play in the Orange Bowl in a post-season game. The victory stretched their winning streak to 21 games—17 this season—and their unbeaten string to 20.

Sullivan, Auburn's strong-armed quarterback, has led his team, ranked ninth in the U.S., to a 9-0 record so far this season. However, still to come for Auburn is a game against fourth-ranked Alabama and a post-season game against Oklahoma in the Sugar Bowl.

Sullivan, a six-foot, 190-pound senior, ranks third in passing this year in the poll of sports writers and broadcasters. Sullivan received 1,597 votes, outdistance Ed Marinaro, Cornell's record-smashing fullback who received 1,445. Third place went to Greg Pruitt of Oklahoma whorhad 566 points.

In another top game Thursday, Texas drove for four first-half touchdowns, two by Donnie Wiggiston, for a 34-14 victory over Texas A. and-M that gave Texas its recfort fourth consecutive Southwest Conference title and a berth in the Cotton Bowl against Pennsylvania.

Slanguage

Norm Hawkes didn't know sign language when he became football coach of the Pennsylvania School for the Deaf near Philadelphia but he uses what he calls sign language slang. He is saying "congratulations" to End Raymond Fox who has just scored at left. A player usage too well but his team has "talks back" to Hawkes at a 5-2-1 record. (AP Photo) right. Hawkes says he still doesn't understand sign language.

Calgary Has Grey Cup Experience

VANCOUVER (CP) — Almost half the Calgary Stampeders on the field Sunday will be making their third try at bringing home the Grey Cup.

Fifteen played in 1968, when Ottawa Rough Riders won 24-21, and were in again last year when Montreal Alouettes put down Calgary 23-10.

They will be joined by eight newcomers, half the number of first-year men playing for the opposing Toronto Argonauts.

Game time is 1:30 p.m. PST (4:30 p.m. EST) for the national football feast. Both CBC and CTV television networks will carry the game.

Calgary's Grey Cup veterans have an average 7.4 years of experience and are led by three players with 11 years each.

Wayne Harris, selected Thursday as the Canadian Football League's top lineman for a record fourth time, is one of Stampeders' defensive signals. He has been an all-star each year since he started.

Larry Robinson, holder of the CFL's record for most field goals, 126; converts, 304; and second high all-time score with 817 points, was named to the Western Conference all-star team Thursday. It was his second defensive back. It was his second all-star award.

The other 11-year veteran, quarterback Jerry Keeling, was an all-star twice in eight years as a defensive back before becoming the quarterbacks' signal caller in 1969.

Stampeders have a 10-year veteran in linebacker Jim Furlong, and three men with eight years of professional ball, guard Herb Schuman, tight end Herm Harrison and defensive halfback Terry Wilson.

With seven years experience are guard Lanny Bolesky, flanker Gerry Shaw and defensive end Dick Suderman. Defensive halfback Frank Andruski is in six years with the club, defensive tackle-Fred James five, defensive end Joe Fernandez and Granville Liggins and halfback Rudy Linterman four.

Throwing in the other 17 members of the team, Calgary has an accumulated experience of 148 years and 36 WFC all-star awards. Experience is the area in which Calgary's offensive line has gained the most in the last few years, coach Jim Duncan.

Centre Basil Bark came to Calgary last season after five years with Montreal, seasoned guard John Atamian was picked up from Winnipeg and Liggins switched from defensive tackle.

Of Liggins' first full year on the offensive line, Duncan says the 225-pounder "gives strength.

"Last year he did a good job but it was a new position for him. This year he has had an opportunity to learn from the start and he did a good job."

Playing beside Liggins is tackle Boleski, who Duncan said "is probably one of the most under-rated players on the squad." And Schumm, who Calgary acquired from Edmonton in 1967, is versatile.

"Over-all we've improved, mainly by experience, rather than the addition of any outstanding personnel."

Duncan, however, puts little stock in the fact 15 of his players have twice been in a Grey Cup game while Argos have missed the national finals since 1953.

"I don't think Grey Cup experience has anything to do with a game like this."

Argos Overcame Adversity To Reach Grey Cup Game

VANCOUVER (CP) — The one theme that coach Leo Cahill keeps coming back to in preparing Toronto Argonauts' 1971 football season is their amazing success in the face of adversity.

The adversity Cahill has faced included trying to mould a team out of a collection of men, half of whom are first-year personnel with the Argos, and keeping them going despite numerous injuries.

Exactly half Cahill's lineup for Sunday's Grey Cup clash against Calgary Stampeders was never played for Argos before this season and nine of them are rookies.

"I don't think any other team could have pulled off what we did going against the things we had to put up with," said Cahill, Cahill's rookie corps:

Cahill says that his problem was made more pronounced by the fact that, with the exception of Andrusyshyn and Abels, the rookies are Americans who had to be taught the Canadian style of play.

Included in that class, too, was quarterback Greg Barton, not a rookie, but with only three years previous professional experience in the National Football League.

Other first-year Argos are slotback Dave Cranmer, centre Paul Desjardins, tackle Ellison Kelly, place-kicker Ivan Mac-Millan, defensive back Bernie Paquette and guard Joe Vijuk.

Oddly enough, three of these first-year players give Argos more than half their comple ment of men with previous Grey Cup experience.

Cranmer, who came to Toronto in a trade this year, played with the Stampeders in last year's Grey Cup against Montreal Alouettes who had frequetic. And Kelly saw 10 seasons with Hamilton Tiger-Cats before being traded to the Canadian Football League championship six times during that stretch.

Only two other Argos played with a Grey Cup team—defensive backs Dave Ramsey and Dick Thornton, both former Winnipeg Blue Bombers.

The Argos haven't been in a Grey Cup game since 1952, so even veteran offensive tackle Danny Nykoluk never made it to a championship.

Nykoluk retired last year after 16 seasons with the club and came back for the playoffs when his rookie replacement, John Trainor, was sidelined by a knee injury.

The Argos worked out for the second time on the artificial turf at Empire Stadium Thursday and despite heavy rain most of the day, the players were happy with the surface.

Jonas Chosen For Schenley MVP Award

VANCOUVER (CP) — Don Jonas, a football player who has been right a good deal this season, calls Calgary Stampeders' over Toronto Argonauts to take the Grey Cup this Sunday.

Jonas, quarterback for Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Conference, was named to Canada's outstanding player Thursday night. Wayne Harris, middle linebacker for Calgary, and flanker Terry Evanshen of Montreal Alouettes were named top lineman and top Canadian respectively.

Jonas accepted his award with an emotional speech, but recovered his composure when asked who he picked to win the cup.

"Calgary," he said, "by seven points."

The voting, done by football writers and broadcasters in the nine Canadian Football League cities, is sponsored by Canadian Schenley Distilleries, Ltd.

Jonas beat out rookie halfback Leon McQuay of Toronto Argonauts, the club which trailed Jonas away at the end of last season.

"I was all set to quit, to get out of football," Jonas said, clutching his trophy.

"I had a high-school coaching job lined up, then I was traded and Winnipeg called me."

Jonas, after a season of discontent with Toronto during which he was part of coach Leo Cahill's unique two-quarterback rotation system, caught fire with Winnipeg.

The veteran, who came to Canadian football from the Southern Division of the Continental League, led the CFL in passing with 253 completions in 458 attempts for 4,036 yards and was scoring champion of the WFC, Grey Cup kicking ability.

In his emotional acceptance speech, Jonas said:

"Many of you who voted know what it means to go through a long, hard season, through the grind and the sweat and the guts, and then through the weekend.

"This award answers this question."

Remember, who became the only player to win the award in both conferences—he won as a flanker with Calgary in 1967, defeated defensive back Dick Fouts of Edmonton Eskimos.

Referring to Montreal's slide from Grey Cup champions to last place in the Eastern Conference in one season, he said:

"I'm only sorry the whole team isn't here. We went from first to last, but we'll be back up. We'll be there in Toronto in 1972."

Quiet-spoken Harris, asked how he felt about his record fourth victory, said:

"I'll feel a lot better Sunday afternoon when we go back with the Grey Cup."

He defeated Mark Kosmos, outside linebacker with Montreal.

Prior to the ceremonies honoring the record-setting performers, Don was accorded three somewhat older personalities.

Named to the Canadian Football League Hall of Fame were

DON JONAS

Jackie Parker, Hal Patterson and Len Back.

Parker, general manager of British Columbia Lions, was Canada's outstanding player in 1957, 1958 and 1960 and seven times won the Jeff Nicklin award as the western player most valuable to his team. He was a member of the Eskimos when they won three consecutive Grey Cups, 1954-55. In a playing career that lasted from 1954 through 1962, he scored 89 touchdowns, kicked 49 field goals, 180 converts and 19 singles and passed for another 88 touchdowns. He played both at halfback and quarterback.

Patterson, who played with Montreal and Hamilton Tiger-Cats until retiring in 1967, played 14 years and scored 75 touchdowns, 84 on passes and three on kick-off returns. His longest kick runback was 105 yards and his longest gain on a pass play was 109 yards, a record that still stands. Another Patterson record still on the books is 338 yards on pass receptions in a single game in 1956, the year he won the outstanding player award.

During his career he averaged 28.6 yards on passing plays and his average kick return back was 27.3 yards.

Back is a director of Hamilton Tiger-Cats whose ties with that organization go back to 1918. He managed the club in 13 Grey Cups, eight of them Hamilton victories.

Vancouver Taking Cautious Approach

VANCOUVER (CP) — Pre-Grey Cup enthusiasm—with two days to go before the east-west classic—is, in a word, subdued.

As one writer put it:

"Football fever in Vancouver has soared to 98.7 degrees."

Possibly residents are approaching the game with caution, cognizant of the fact that this city has produced some wildly exuberant sports crowds in the past.

The most recent example was in 1966, the last time the Grey Cup was played here. A total of 629 persons were arrested in weekend revelry and rioting.

This year, steps are being taken to keep things quieter.

The parade, which traditionally brings crowds downtown on game day, is being held the day before the game and it will start and finish in a remote corner of the city without coming within earshot of downtown.

City police have drafted a secret, 30-page memo on security arrangements and while they won't say what's in it, they stress the police intend to present a "low profile" during the festivities.

"This a celebration, not a confrontation," says Deputy Chief Tom Stokes.

"If they want to celebrate in the streets and run up and down them and if some of the fans have had too much to drink to bring horses through the streets—they can go ahead."

There are expected to be some 36,500 persons—fans and players—at Empire Stadium at 1:30 p.m. PST Sunday when Governor-General Roland Michener kicks the hotel-room darkness by living aboard chartered yachts in the harbor.

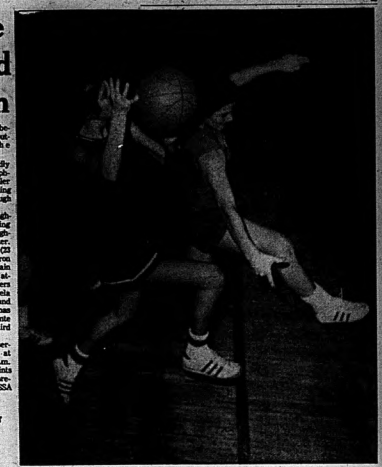
Collegians Take Big Step Toward Senior Girls Win

Some teams like a cushion for the final game of a total point series. The BCI seniors preferred to build an entire sofa however as they hurled Quinte 73-21 in the first game of the Bay of Quinte girls basketball championship.

The Collegians, who defeated Quinte for the title last season will not carry a 52 point edge into the final match of the two game, total point series. Each team had compiled perfect 8-0 records during the regular season to allow them to reach the championship round.

Quinte, the western division champions, started well building an early lead before BCI managed to get untracked. Play see-sawed back and forth throughout the first half with the eastern titlists taking a 30-18 lead to the dressing room at half time.



In the third quarter, however, BCI's pressing defence began to force Quinte into costly turnovers while at the same time the Collegians began hitting steadily from outside and controlling the boards.

Quinte was hampered badly by the loss of Gladys Stephenson, their top ballhandler and Rygena Armonas, leading rebounder and scorer, through foul trouble.

BCI dominated play throughout the second half, holding the losers scoreless throughout the entire fourth quarter.

Corners Marilee Jones (22 points)-and Dorothy LeBaron (12 points) were the two main factors in the BCI scoring attack. Other top points getters for the winners were Angela Murray with 12 points and Carol Dealy with 11. Armonas scored 11 points for Quinte before fouling out in the third quarter.

The final game of the series will be played Tuesday at Quinte beginning at 4 p.m. The team with the most points on the round will then represent this district in the COSSA championships.

Helping Hand

Janet Whalen of Quinte gets a helping hand from teammates Susan Bennett as she battles for possession of the ball with BCI's Dorothy Baron in the first game of the Bay of Quinte senior girls' basketball championship. The Collegians will carry a 52 point edge into the final game of the total point series by virtue of their 73-21 win Thursday. The winner of the round will go on to play in the COSSA championships.

Going Up

Quinte's Sandy Mousseau attempts to halt the lay up attempt of Dorothy LeBaron in action at BCI Thursday. The ing game of the play-off series. LeBaron was one of the unbeaten BCI seniors remaining standouts for BCI hooping ed just that way by handing Bay of Quinte girls' basketball Quinte 73-21 loss in the open- points in a winning effort.

One Quinte String Snaps

Belvedere Hotel kept one string intact and Stinson Construction snapped another in Quinte Hockey League action last night.

The Hotelmen remained unbeaten as they turned back second place Central Taxi 5-3 to widen their league lead to four points. Stinsons, on the other hand, picked up their first point of the season by playing to a 4-4 draw with Reids Dairy.

Goals by Larry Marshall, Jack Francis, Lorne Millen and Elmer Cain boosted Belvedere into a 4-0 lead in the first half of their game with Central. Francis added a second goal for the witners with Gerry Jones potting the final marker. For the Cabbies it was Tom Pearce, Grant Hagerman and Andy Prudhon getting the goals. The winners commited 11 of the game's 18 infractions.

Errol Johnston scored the other Reids goal, while Ted Waite had a pair for Stinsons with singles going to Phil Meeks and Rick Ronebush. The Constructionmen drew 10 of the game's 15 penalties.

Moore Paces Pack

GALT (CP) — Grant Moore of Orillia Terriers has moved into a four-point lead in the Ontario Hockey Association Senior A scoring race.

Earning seven points in his last two games, the Orillia left winger increased his total to 12 goals and 18 assists for 30 points.

Linemate Mike Draper, who leads in goal scoring with 16, advanced into a second-place tie with Doug Acomb of Barrie Flyers. Both have 26 points, one ahead of Barrie centre Ron Robinson.

Mike Corbett of Oakville Oaks is the penalty leader with 66 minutes.

Walsh Among Frontenac Leaders

Belleville drivers made off with their fair share of prize money at Frontenac Downs in the first half of harness racing season at Ontario's newest track.

They'll all be back this weekend as racing starts Saturday afternoon for the first time. Wednesday night racing has been discontinued.

Now there'll be action Saturday and Sunday afternoons with both post times at 1:45 p.m.

Gerry Walsh is the most successful of the horde of Belleville drivers. Walsh has seven third-place finishes in 46 drives.

Walsh's efforts give him earnings of $1,767; 13th on the money list. He has a percentage of .268 for a two-way tie for 11th place in the leading percentage driver race.

Walsh was the first man to ever make a claim at the Downs and ironically had his 10-year-old pacer Kendal Brook claimed last Sunday afternoon by George Webb of Kingston.

Bruce Kemp has won three races in 11 starts and winnings of $550; Sid Booth of Marbank has two victories in nine drives; Trenton's Roy Buchanan has scored a win in his four drives; Belleville's David Irwin, like Pat Herrington, have two wins. Herrington has won $725.

Orr Reveals Presence In 4-2 Win Over Flyers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

If Bobby Orr's whereabouts was in doubt, the superb Boston-Bruin defenceman surfaced Thursday night in a 4-2 win over Philadelphia Flyers in the only scheduled National Hockey League action.

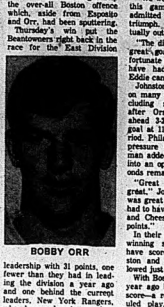
The high-scoring blueliner had been loitering about midway in the pack of top 10 scorers in recent weeks. But a goal, the winner, and three assists against the Flyers put him in the leadership race, currently headed by teammate Phil Esposito.

Espo has 37 points to Orr's 36.

But what is probably upper-most in the minds of Boston fans, Bruin management in particular, is the whereabouts of right winger Ken Hodge.

The solid 220-pounder can't be missed in the Boston lineup, stretching six-feet two inches above the ice surface. It was evident Thursday night when he wrestled off the Philadelphia defence while Orr sped in to recover his own rebound and punch home the winner behind Flyer goalie Doug Favell to break a 2-2 tie.

The impetus Bruins fans, however, have been overlooking Hodge as a physical asset in the area and are looking to the scoring machine that potted 43 goals last year and ran his point totals to 88, fourth best in the league behind team-mates Esposito, Orr and Johnny Bucyk.



The boo-birds were at it again Thursday night at Boston Garden where little else is appreciated but the word "score."

Hodge, a 27-year-old native of Birmingham, England who grew up in Toronto, ranks third among Bruins in points, with 18, but has managed only four goals in 21 games.

A year ago he had 12 goals and 17 assists and ranked third in the NHL behind the current leaders.

His inability to find the target this year has had him in the Bruins' doghouse on a couple of occasions when coach Tom Johnson decided a rest on the bench might help the over-all Boston offence which, aside from Esposito and Orr, had been sputtering.

leadership with 31 points, one fewer than they had in leading the division a year ago and two behind the current leaders, New York Rangers, who have played one less game.

Their over-all production lags behind the scoring machine of 1970-71. To date the Bruins have scored 81 goals compared with 91 a year ago after 21 games.

But why really shows to Boston's advantage is its defensive mark. This year the goaltending tandem of Eddie Johnson and Gerry Cheevers has allowed the opposition 53 goals, best in the East, against 54 at the same stage last season.

It was the 35-year-old Johnston's turn to sparkle against Philadelphia, just as Cheevers did in a 2-1 win over the Flyers Wednesday night.

"We were really lucky to win this game," coach Johnson admitted after the holiday triumph. "Philadelphia actually outplayed us.

"The difference was we got great goaltending. We were fortunate at times. They could have had some goals, but Eddie came through for us."

Johnston was spectacular on many of his 29 saves, including several key stops after Orr had put Boston ahead 3-2 on an unassisted goal at 11:23 of the third period. Philadelphia applied the pressure until Wayne Cashman added an insurance goal into an open net with 19 seconds remaining.

"Great goal-tending, just great," Johnson repeated. "It was great both nights, and we had to have it to beat Eddie A. and Cheesy got us four big points."

In their current seven-game winning streak, the Bruins have scored 28 goals while Johnston and Cheevers have allowed just 10 in the stretch.

With Boston's main theme a year ago being essentially to score—a theme Eddie Sandelled play, the Bruins may have learned something from their early defensive in post-season play, an Eastern semi-final loss to the Stanley Cup champion Montreal Canadiens, by concentrating more on defence during the current campaign.

In tonight's only scheduled game, Minnesota North Stars hope to use California Golden Seals as a stepping stone into first in the West in a game at Oakland.

Trade Action Likely

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The official business gets under way Monday morning but that won't be the only business at this year's winter baseball meetings.

Along with a rash of week-long sessions, including the annual draft of minor league players, there'll be behind-the-scenes intrigue manufactured.

And this, the biggest of all baseball's marketplaces, will provide a shopping bonanza for some of the 24 major league teams.

Some want power, some want infielders, but most all need pitching—including the world champion Pittsburgh Pirates.

Rumored to be available at the right price are New York Yankee ace right-hander Mel Stottlemyre, Cleveland Indians star southpaw Sam McDowell and New York Mets fastball king Nolan Ryan.

The Yankees are in the market for a power-hitting third baseman, something the Mets would also like. And Chicago's Ron Santo appears to be on his way out. He's among Cub players who didn't see eye-to-eye with manager Leo Durocher last season.

Of course, the Indians could use anyone to bolster their talent-poor squad, which sorely needs a right handed power hitter.

Atlanta Braves are reported willing to part with first baseman Orlando Cepeda and Philadelphia Phillies would deal Deron Johnson, who hit 33 homers last year but is getting older. Frank Howard, the one-time American League homer king, might also be unloaded by the new Texas Rangers.

Third baseman Richie Hebner and outfielder-first baseman Al Oliver, who has expressed wishes to be traded, could be swapped for another starting pitcher for Pittsburgh. The Pirates won the National League pennant without a 20-game winner before beating Baltimore Orioles in the World Series.

Los Angeles Dodgers, who covet left-hander Ken Holtzman of the Cubs, will be in there pitching for another starter, too.

Among some other "name" players reported available are shortstop Mark Belanger and second baseman Dave Johnson of the Orioles, who are bidding for another pitcher and maybe four 20-game winners in 1971. They have expressed a strong interest in Wilbur Wood of Chicago White Sox.

Nudity Decision Delayed

CALGARY (CP) — City night spots will have to wait at least another week to find out if they can feature bottomless dancers on their stages.

Kelly Johnson of nearby Okotoks was remanded to Dec. 1 when she appeared in court Thursday on a charge of giving an immoral performance in a public theatre.

Provincial Judge F. A. Thurgood reserved decision for a second time in the case to allow the prosecution and defence time for further argument to help him decide whether dancing in the nude is immoral.

Lock Those Papers Up

New Security Rules Disturb Civil Servants

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal employees were ordered Thursday to lock away, before leaving the office, classified documents they use daily.

"I have papers all over my desk; on the filing cabinet; everywhere,' a busy senior official said, lamenting the security crackdown.

"How am I going to do it?"

The royal commission on security may have been talking about him. In 1968 when it delayed the feebleness of security in some federal departments.

The royal commission found that attention paid to ordinary security precautions depended upon the importance placed upon security by a cabinet minister and his senior officials.

Security, as a result, varied considerably from department to department.

It was of capital importance that experts inform and guide the minister on security matters, that they inspect and verify security practices, and department officers be used, the report said.

Prime Minister Trudeau has shown little patience with lax security. He sicked the RCMP on La Presse reporter Lysiane Gagnon two years ago when she somehow got a copy of an unpublished bilingualism and biculturalism report. And the Mounties have been called in for other cases.

One employee says a wave of terror hit the department he worked in when a document was leaked and RCMP security men began questioning those who had access to it. Everyone was under suspicion.

The government's position has been that such documents are its property and those who leak them may be subject to action ranging from dismissal to charges of theft.

In the La Presse case, the government hinted at charges of possession of stolen property, though nothing was done.

The latest leaks include the minutes of a July 29 cabinet meeting on foreign investment and Indian affairs. A cabinet minute is a genuinely top secret document, since a premature leak can force resignations and perhaps topple the government.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Trudeau says the Opposition eggs on public servants to leak documents. And the Opposition talks about slovenly security.

"Those people who see nothing but good in the publication of cabinet papers should understand that they are really approving a fundamental change in our system of responsible government," says Ottawa correspondent Anthony Westell of the Toronto Star.

He says "a branch-plant Ellsberg"—a reference to Daniel Ellsberg, who leaked the Pentagon papers on the Vietnam war and now is facing court action in the U.S.—shouldn't decide he is the best judge of who should know what, and when.

This only opened government to destructive pressures before policy actually had been made.

The foreign investment minute was published by Southam News Services, under the bylines of Nick Hills and John Walker. But neither has been Harold Cardinal, leader of the Alberta Indian Association, turned up on television Sunday night with the minute on development of native cultural-education centres.

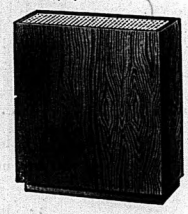
This document says the cabinet gave approval in principle to a $40 million program to develop the centres.

It also called for more detailed studies and said funds wouldn't be available until supplementary spending estimates were provided later in the year.



But Indian leaders have suggested that the cabinet is holding back funds until they toe the line on other issues. There have been calls for the resignation of Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien.

Cable TV Is Issue

Ottawa Watches Quebec Moves

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal government is taking a wait-and-see attitude toward Quebec legislation to regulate cable television.

A spokesman for State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said Thursday the government is not taking any steps in the cable debate with Quebec because it is not clear what the provincial government intends to do if the legislation is enacted.

Other Ottawa sources say Ontario may be keener about actually using regulatory powers in cable TV than Quebec. They suggest Quebec may shelve the legislation once it is passed and keep it as a weapon for negotiations with the federal government on other issues.

A spokesman for Charles MacNaughton, Ontario minister of transport and communications, said in a telephone interview that department officials are preparing material on possible ways for Ontario to regulate cable.

The Ontario government is keenly interested in cable but has not yet made any policy decisions, he said.

Woman Heads New UHF TV Station

TORONTO (CP) — Phyllis Switzer, representing Toronto's newest ultra-high-frequency television station, said Thursday the trend in television is to specialized stations.

Mrs. Switzer, 40, is a founder of Channel 79 Ltd., which was granted the UHF licence in Ottawa Thursday by the Canadian Radio-Television Commission.

"This is the first recognition by the CRTC in Canada that the trend is shifting to specialized stations," Mrs. Switzer said in an interview.

She predicted that trend three years ago after she moved to Toronto from the Prairies when she suggested the idea to her husband, Strukt, chief engineer for Maclean-Hunter Cable TV Ltd.

Mrs. Switzer will be vice-president of the company, primarily concerned with community relations.

She told CRTC hearings in Toronto in September that ownership was distributed among many small shareholders so that the station would remain a community outlet and would not expand outside Toronto. No shareholder has a majority interest.

Toronto's other UHF station is Ontario's educational TV Channel 19.

MPs Complain About Radio Reporting

OTTAWA (CP) — Both the CBC and private radio took their licks in the Commons Thursday as MPs complained about slanted reports, separatist advertising and secular censorship.

Colin Gibson (L—Hamilton-Wentworth) struck out at the CBC-TV Weekend program, which he said has become "NDP Weekend." The Sunday night public affairs program, he said, is constantly slanted in favor of the New Democratic Party.

The complaint against private radio came from P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) who said Sunday morning church services are no longer broadcast by a station in Toronto.

Liberal Government Prefers More Jobs to Guaranteed Income

OTTAWA (CP) — The government would rather use its available money to try to generate jobs than spend it on a guaranteed annual income scheme, Health Minister John Munro said Thursday.

He told the Commons both things can't be done well at the same time, since the guaranteed annual income would cost $3 billion a year.

Besides that, he said, he is not convinced the guaranteed annual income is the panacea he once thought it might be.

The minister spoke on a Social Credit motion that condemned the government for not proposing legislation "establishing a social and economic security plan placing all Canadians above the poverty level."

Its mover, Social Credit Leader Real Caouette, advocated a system whereby every Canadian family earning less than $15,000 a year would be given a credit, depending on family size.

Stanley Knowles (NDP—Winnipeg North Centre), said he was in favor of a guaranteed annual income, but only if it were given to all families and taxed back from the rich.

He did not approve of a negative income tax or any scheme that would give money just to the poor because they were poor, because such approaches kept them separated in their poverty.

And Jack Marshall (PC—Humber-St. George's-St. Barbe) said the government should quit making studies, declare the eradication of poverty its number one priority, and do something about it.

Mr. Munro said he was weary of simplistic demands for a neat, guaranteed-income welfare package to replace the present programs, his department now offers.

He hadn't heard anybody say specifically what they would drop, he said. Certainly the Canada Pension Plan, unemployment insurance and old age pensions weren't to be discontinued!

A Senate poverty committee recommendation that a guaranteed income scheme be instituted to assure poor families of 30 per cent of the income needed to reach the poverty line would just institutionalize poverty, replacing one welfare system with another.

And a guaranteed income scheme would have to pay supplements to the working poor or it would cause serious disincentives.

The minister said the government was trying to promote jobs for the 13 per cent of people on welfare that are employable through such things as its local initiatives program, opportunities for youth and subsidies for industries creating jobs.

The government was recognizing it had to get increasingly more into job-making because it was said the private sector couldn't do it alone.

The government would spend most of its money on jobs for the moment, while spending some on guaranteed income pilot projects.

"But I'm not as sure as I once was that it is the panacea some people claimed it was."

Mr. Caouette said every single person earning less than $15,000 a year should be given $1,500. For families, the sum should be as much as $4,000 if there were six children.

The present welfare set-up, he said, is a "social pittance system."

John Lundrigan (PC—Gander-Twillingate) said that while manpower training programs were not the only answer to poverty, their improvement would go a long way toward solving the problem.

Under House rules, Mr. Caouette's motion didn't come to a vote.

Finance Minister E. J. Benson appeared Thursday to be cool to a suggestion made the day before by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield that the bill be split.

But Stanfield wants tax cuts and increased personal exemptions to come into effect on Jan. 1, with other parts of the bill left for further debate in the new year.

Mr. Benson told reporters any delay in passing the bill would hurt businessmen.

Splitting the bill, he said, would mean rewriting the whole package.

Emphysema Different Disease From Pulmonary Fibrosis

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What is the difference between emphysema and pulmonary fibrosis? Some people say they are the same. Is there any cure or help to make breathing easier? — e.f.

They are not the same, although either can make breathing difficult.

The inside of the lungs contains vast numbers of air spaces, or air sacs. When you breathe, the air filters into this myriad of spaces, just as water fills a sponge.

In the surfaces of these sacs, there takes place the exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide, the blood picking up oxygen and getting rid of carbon dioxide.

Emphysema means that the walls of these tiny air sacs have weakened and broken down. The "sponge" effect is diminished, and the area where the oxygen exchange takes place is reduced. The elasticity of the lung is lost.

Pulmonary fibrosis, however, means that excessive scar tissue is present in the lungs. This can result from various causes: infection (tuberculosis being an important one); exposure to dusts and irritants; sometimes it is related to the collagen diseases; cancer; fungus infections of the lungs; and various less common causes. Sometimes no specific cause can be identified.

There is no effective treatment for pulmonary fibrosis in the curative sense. It is important, naturally, to combat whatever is causing the scarring, so it won't get worse.

Treatment for emphysema involves abstinence from tobacco, medication to keep the airways open so the patient can get more oxygen, and mechanical means of aiding breathing.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please print cause and cure or treatment of a spastic bowel. I have been told by doctors that is my trouble, but get no information as to it cure.—Mrs. E.R.

Tense, nervous people are the usual sufferers from this, but allergies, errors in diet and other factors can be involved. Although you are dieting, yourself if you think some simple, specific "cure" will be the answer. It is a chronic condition that, usually, yields best to gradual, persistent control.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a professional furniture stripper and use large amounts of commercial paint remover. The shop is well-ventilated. I have recently begun to suspect that I am pregnant. Would the fumes of this stripper be harmful to my baby?—Mrs. N.W.

You have probably answered your own question with your statement that the shop is well ventilated. I doubt that the mere smell of the solvents would harm the baby.

More Money Is Sought For Mohawk Institute

OTTAWA (CP) — The government is awaiting a decision by the Six Nations Indian band council at Brantford before deciding on future help for use of the old Mohawk Institute there, the Commons was told Thursday night.

Derek Blackburn (NDP—Brant) appealed in a late-night adjournment debate for federal assistance to support use of the institute buildings in Brantford as a cultural and educational centre.

Barnett Danson, parliamentary secretary to Prime Minister Trudeau, said a band-council decision was awaited. He also observed that the institute land would be valuable for development.

He was speaking in advance of a scheduled visit to Brantford Saturday by Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who will meet Six Nations chiefs at the institute.

The institute, a group of stone-old, stone-new buildings on 10 acres of land away from the reserve, was a residential school for Indians from various communities from its foundation in 1831 by the Anglican church until it, ceased operations last year when under federal government auspices.

The Brantford band was given possession of the buildings last month to use for meetings, with $50,000 in government funds and $5,000 from the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Saturday, November 27

Aries (March 21-April 19). The truth hurts even more now, mainly because you've refused to believe what others have been telling you all along. Don't be duped a second time.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). Thinking that you've reversed an economic decline in your private accounts proves premature. If you've got anything left to lose, guard it with your life.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). The shock at discovering a scandalous situation developing right under your nose can spark a major split with a mate. The two of you don't see eye to eye on moral issues.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). A chronic, possibly mysterious, health ailment can send you running back to experts for another quick cure. This time, though, relief may not be as speedy or painless as before.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). The worst disillusionments that can befall you are those that strike at the heart. A beautiful but reckless romantic chapter in your life is about to close.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22). There's no avoiding the pressures to make a final choice between blood ties and outside allies. Those who choose to abandon family should know that there's no turning back.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). If conditions are knocking on your door and none can be turned away.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Playing hopscotch with overdue bills and debts has finally caught up with you. Now all the creditors are knocking on your door and none can be turned away.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Thinking that you could toy with someone's affections with no harm ensuing has built up to your imminent downfall. Heart interests intend to hold you to every last promise.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). By ignoring the obvious signs of trouble in employment or health areas, you've created a whopping crisis. Little things pile up until the whole mess is hopeless.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Success can be the worst evil to wish on someone who is not yet able to cope with fame. You may have gotten what you wanted, but you sure don't know how to keep it.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). The most needed protection that you've been counting on from authorities can vanish at the first sign of trouble. There are many misplaced loyalties that come to light.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—The present rift with key partners can be mended, only to reappear next spring. Before reconciliations are attempted, judge whether basic differences are too great. Mate won't change.

You are South, both sides vulnerable, in each of the following four hands. What would you bid at the point where the question mark appears?

1. Three spades. There is some doubt whether you should have passed one spade, but, granting that you did, there is an obligation to tell partner you made an absolutely maximum pass. To bid two spades at this point is simply not descriptive—that is what you would do if the clubs were, say, Q-J-4-3. North's redouble announces much more than a minimum opening bid—for example, he may have:

in which case you would surely want to be in game. North cannot expect a huge hand from you; he will surely remember that you lacked the values for a response to his spade bid.

2. Three diamonds. You had a maximum notrump response and you can indicate this by cuebidding the ace of diamonds before raising spades later on. Second choice is to jump to four spades directly. It would be wrong to bid only three spades at this point. That is what you would do if the king of clubs were the deuce.

3. Double. East will probably go down 800 or 1,100, and you shouldn't let him off the hook by bidding two or three notrump instead. You don't often get such a fine chance to teach an opponent to mind his manners after your partner opens with a notrump.

4. Five notrump. This is the grand slam force, requesting partner to bid seven diamonds with two of the three top trump honors (kings and aces treated as trumps). If, North has only one top honor he responds six diamonds. In either case, you plan to play the hand in hearts.

Tomorrow: Evasion.

Cairo Dims Lights Preparing for War

CAIRO (AP) — Cairo is dimming its lights, expanding civil defence forces and carrying out war emergency drills as its leaders speak of fighting with Israel as the only remaining solution in the Middle East.

The Egyptian capital began dimmed Wednesday night. The five tiers of spotlights on the 500-foot Cairo Tower were doused as were the neon signs along a main shopping street.

Headlights on automobiles were painted blue.

Newspapers said plans were announced for extensive blood banks and Interior Minister Namduh Salem watched fire and rescue drills in Cairo. Special instructions were given in the handling of napalm.

In another development, King Hussein of Jordan hinted in a magazine interview he would be willing to meet with top Israeli government leaders if Israel agreed to withdraw from Arab territories, including Old Jerusalem.

No Arab leader has risked public acceptance of direct talks with Israeli leaders because this has long been portrayed to Arab masses as high treason.

Israel insists on direct negotiations as a prerequisite for a peaceful settlement of the 23-year-long Middle East conflict.

Barn Burned

TWEED (Special) — On tario Provincial Police at Madoc are investigating a fire that destroyed a barn man on the Crookston Road 2½ miles west of Tweed.

Tweed's volunteer fire department was called to fight the blaze about 4:50 p.m. Nov. 24. However, they could not save the building and the farm machinery and baled hay stored in it.

Amount of the loss has not been released.

Wanted Trio Seizes Plane

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Three young blacks identified by the FBI as New Mexico murder suspects hijacked a Trans World Airlines jet to Havana today after allowing 40 passengers to get off during a fuel stop at Tampa International Airport.

J. F. Santoiana, agent in charge of the Tampa FBI office, said the hijackers were armed with two revolvers and a knife. He declined to comment when asked if any of the passengers had been threatened but army Pte. Charles Dennis of Boston said one hijacker shoved a gun into the side of a male passenger as the plane took off from Albuquerque, N.M.

C. A. Hill, a plane passenger from Phoenix, Ariz., said one of the men held a cocked army .45-calibre pistol on one of the stewardesses as the passengers, including two elderly people in wheel chairs, filed off the plane.

The jet took off for Havana at 7:31 a.m. EST after taking aboard 2,328 gallons of fuel.

Hill said one of the stewardesses walked down the aisle and told the passengers "Everyone remain seated, we're being hijacked."

The plane was taken over as passengers were getting aboard in Albuquerque.

The men ordered the pilot to fly to Tampa International Airport, where they said they

Hospital Costs Over $7 Million

Budget Passed By BGH Board

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

It will cost an estimated $7.3 million to operate Belleville General Hospital in 1972 — a year in which the hospital also will move to handle more patients.

The 6.8 per cent increase in operating costs was projected in budget estimates yesterday.

Other highlights:

—The 403-bed hospital will gain 34 more beds as its administration centre moves to new quarters.

The 1972 budget, which must be approved by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, was endorsed yesterday by the hospital's board of governors, and is marginally lower than the annual increase ceiling permitted by the OHSC.

Hospital administrator Philip Richard said hospitals in Ontario are restricted to a seven per cent increase in yearly budgets — except where the OHSC is prepared to approve new services.

Administrative facilities are scheduled to move to new quarters next summer.

The new 54-bed ward facility which will replace administration offices will require an additional 40 nurses.

Other staff requirements, outlined in the estimates, include:

Increased teaching staff for the new Edith Cavell Regional School of Nursing; a new staff pathologist; five additional in-service teachers; additional psychiatric unit staff.

Also included is two-thirds of the salary for Dr. R. M. Anderson, co-ordinator of new nursing-care and home-care programs in the Belleville area.

The board hopes for OHSC approval of its budget estimates by January.

Later Mr. Rickard told reporters that BGH is scheduled to receive $194,000 in rebates from the OHSC.

The rebates are for money spent by BGH in 1969 and 1971.

Certain items — including medical supplies and foods — were deleted from the budgets as unnecessary expenses, explained Mr. Rickard. But, finally, the hospital had to provide such items and the OHSC now has approved these past expenditures.

Woman Climbs Into Prison

BRISBANE, Australia (Reuter) — A 22-year-old woman scaled a 14-foot wall topped with barbed wire to break into Brisbane prison Thursday night only eight hours after she had completed a jail term.

Pamela Noble was caught with two cans of beer on her, which she said she was taking to a friend in the prison.

She was fined a total of $80 on charges of breaking into the prison and faces a six-week term if she cannot pay.

Package Deal On Economic Ills Is Aim

BRUSSELS (AP) — The finance ministers from the world's richest non-Communist countries will most likely try to work out a bulky package deal during the Group of Ten meeting in Rome next week.

Informants here said Thursday the package, aimed at solving the world monetary crisis, would have to contain:

—A new set of values for the U.S. dollar and other currencies, probably including a devaluation of the U.S. dollar in terms of gold.

—An end to the 10-per-cent U.S. levy on imports.

—Some firm promises from Japan and the European Common Market that they would increase their imports of U.S. goods.

Paul Voelker, undersecretary of the U.S. treasury for international monetary affairs, doesn't think it can be done at a single session. The meeting, starting Tuesday, lasts three days.

What Western governments really need is a long-term system for collecting and holding money reserves and for changing the values of their currencies when necessary. Such a system could take months or even years to work out.

The immediate problem is to start reducing the huge U.S. balance of payments deficit.

Football Fans Wander in B.C. Rain Looking for Riot That Never Starts

VANCOUVER (CP) — They threw a Grey Cup riot here Friday night, but nobody came.

Newspaper photographers peered out from behind the furniture in hotel lobbies; newsreel cameramen with their light-carrying outriders patrolled the streets.

Motorcycle police, in twos, swooped down on a couple illegally parking their car in an alley, because all the parking lots in the hotels district were full.

Most of the cocktail bars were full, too, and security guards trod politely on the toes of anyone who didn't get in line.

You couldn't get into the main downtown hotels unless you could prove you lived there.

But the lobbies were full, with the Hamilton fire department drums and bugles holding forth in Hotel Vancouver. There was a modicum of square-dancing to fiddles and a guitar in the Georgia.

The mood was jovial and very, very damp with intermittent downpours.

Th air was one of anticipation—crowds, still and for the most part orderly, circulated in the rain where five years ago police with dogs held the mobs at bay and arrested 688 persons.

To the question "where are the dogs hiding?" one policeman replied:

"You wouldn't bring a dog out on a night like this?"

This year there is no parade to attract crowds to the downtown area, leaving them there with nothing to do. Instead, the parade, which begins at 11:30 a.m. PST today, will wind through outlying streets. It will be telecast starting at 11 a.m. PST (2 p.m. EST) on both CBC and CTV networks.

The reason for the estimated 15,000 fans evenly divided between Calgary Stampeders and Toronto Argonauts supporters—in town, is the east-west football game here Sunday, with a 1:30 p.m. PST kickoff. Both networks will carry it.

The situation was not without humor.

Jake Gaudaur, commissioner of the Canadian Football League, hit for an unexpected $25 business licence, reported "we scraped around and came up with the money."

A western airline deliberately made a test case of the British Columbia liquor laws by serving alcohol on planes travelling between B.C. destinations and the head of the liquor control board said "It's a police matter, so I guess I'll have to turn it over to them."

High-tigger Bar—so Ald. Tom Priddle of Calgary took his business across the street to the George's where he got his drink but his horse didn't.

The Newsmen's Club of B.C. had a discreet sign inside—"Grey Cup brunch cancelled. No licence from LCB."

Science Council Expert Reports

Russians and Yanks Agree Canada Patsy for Foreign Firms

OTTAWA (CP) — State capitalists of Russia and private capitalists of the United States look on Canada in the same way —as a patsy, foolish to allow so much foreign control of industry.

Their views were part of the research base built by Dr. Pierre Bourgault, dean of applied science and engineering at University of Sherbrooke, for recent Science Council of Canada recommendations to the government about foreign ownership.

The Council's report, Innovation in a Cold Climate, maintained that Canada will sink to supplier of raw materials to the United States unless the government rescues the faltering manufacturing segment of industry.

Dr. Bourgault, who conducted extensive interviews with industrialists in Canada, the U.S. and overseas, personally favors urgent government action to save science and technology-based industry.

Dr. Bourgault recalled Friday his embarrassment at the questioning of one high-level Russian electro - chemical industrialist about the use by U.S. subsidiaries in Canada of paper and aluminum products from abroad at a time when Canada is the world's biggest paper producer and second biggest aluminum producer.

"My impression of most Americans is that they themselves would not allow this at home and they have considerable sympathy for the Canadian position. They wonder why Canadians are not more nationalistic."

Dr. Bourgault sees Canada's choices as three. Canadians can just muddle along as now, gradually slipping further into foreign economic control, they can take a resolute if really stand for complete independence, or they can opt for economic and political union with the United States.

"The thing that puzzles me is those in government who are unprepared to admit the incompatibility of economic integration and political independence."

He says many top men in multi-national corporations are fundamentally more honest about the effects of foreign ownership than senior men in Canadian government.

He believes Canadians want and will pay the price of more economic independence.

"My impression is that the politicians do not really believe the public is willing to make the sacrifices to be independent, I think they misread the public in that."

He is confident that if Canada provides the protection and other measures to make domestic manufacturing grow "it would not be too long before we would benefit more than we lose, in the order of five to 10 years."

Dr. Bourgault said one top U.S. corporation officer interviewed for the Science Council studies "called in the world's policy." The executive said he argued that "free markets are good for the strong but foolish for a developing country like Canada."

Answer to White Paper

Indians Prefer Federal Liason, Chretien Told

BRANTFORD (CP-Staff) — "The unique position the Indian holds in the political system of Canada" should be preserved, Indians of Tyendinaga Reserve told the federal government today.

The 1,200 Mohawks at Tyendinaga united with Indians from five other Ontario reserves to present a position paper to Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien at a meeting on the Six Nations reserve near here.

The 66-page paper, a rebuttal to the white paper on Indian policy released two years ago, was drafted by the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, an organization representing 20,000 Indians.

The association took a strong stand against turning reserves over to the provinces and urged the federal government to retain full jurisdiction over native affairs.

Among the Indian leaders in Brantford today to present the paper to Mr. Chretien is Tyendinaga Chief Earl Hill and his band council. Chief Hill is a vice-president of the association and the Tyendinaga Indians have played a leading role in the formation of the association and the drawing up of the position paper.

Final draft of the paper was approved two weeks ago at a meeting of the Association at Tyendinaga.

During the nine-months the Indians worked on their submission, Chief Hill asserted that the minister would be asked to come to the Indians to receive the paper, rather than a delegation going to Ottawa to present it.

The Indian Affairs minister received the paper at a large public meeting at the Mohawk Institute on the Six Nations Reserve. A day-long session was planned to permit full discussion with Mr. Chretien, with participation from everyone present.

The paper said the Indian's status as a charge of the federal government "was established in the very earliest dealing with native people."

"It is imperative that this unique position be maintained," said the association submission. "Canada would lose something very vital and historic if a course of action was taken which would do away with it."

The association said the Indians have retained "haven't too much quarrel with the Indian Act" as it now stands. The act should be maintained, though a number of sections objectionable to Indians should be deleted or amended.

"Economic, educational and cultural programs can be carried on within the framework of the existing legislation with only a few minor amendments — it is not the existing legislation that is at fault."

Rather, it is the failure of successive governments during the past 150 years to implement properly the intent of the legislation, a breakdown in human relationships and policies that has left the Canadian Indian socially, culturally, educationally and economically handicapped.

The association represents the Six Nations, Tyendinaga Mohawks, Oneida Missassaugas, Moravian and Six Nations bands. The Six Nations band is the largest, 3,000 residents, in Ontario's largest Indian community.

Bicultural Educational Approach Needed Say Indians

BRANTFORD (CP) — The Allied Indians says government education of Iroquois tribes should take a "bicultural approach" to Indian education by sending white students to schools on reserves as well as shipping native children to schools in white communities.

In a brief presented today to Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, the association said that under the present educational setup, 94 per cent of Indian students drop out before completing high school compared nationally with 12 per cent of non-Indians.

Three years ago, the Indian affairs dept. began withdrawing from the educational field. Indian residential schools were closed and students sent into white schools with the federal government paying percapita grants to the provinces.

The association, representing 20,000 Southern Ontario Indians, said the present educational system largely ignores the culture and history of the native population, producing serious feelings of inferiority among Indian children.

"Unemployment, poverty and welfare are the result of such an educational experience and this, unfortunately, is the case of the Indian today. Education, to many Indians, means assimilation, and assimilation leads to a loss of identity."

The association brief, released in advance, said joint agreements on integrated school programs "appear to be feasible" but it must be a two-way street.

"The schools must be located on reserves as well as in white communities. That is, non-Indian school children would be invited to attend classes on the reserve with Indian students and Indian students would in turn attend schools in non-Indian communities."

The association also urged Indian curriculum revisions in elementary and secondary schools incorporating courses in Indian studies. In addition to damaging Indian students, the lack of such courses "also has a negative effect on non-Indian students."

The brief noted that French and Latin are taught in most secondary schools across Canada and often German and Spanish as well.

"It is not unrealistic to have a course in Indian, if not as ample, available at the secondary school level. It is believed that as the Indian language would be as interesting as Latin to the non-Indian student and the native student."

Revision of Canadian history text is also a priority need, said the association. Contemporary textbooks almost totally ignore the contributions of Indians to the building of Canada.

In reality, the Indian child may find himself facing overwhelming problems—discrimination against him by other students, a poor command of English, and responsibilities at home forced upon him by the economic circumstances of his family.

"Absenteeism and an overwhelming feeling of alienation and inferiority have been the basic reasons for the incredible dropout rate among Indian students," said the brief, noting that 80 per cent of Indian children fail Grade 1.

Choir Carries Anvil

Furthermore, it's a real one — at least one-half a real anvil — now promoted to the distinguished role of musical instrument.

The Canadian Centennial Choir of Ottawa uses it to accompany the music of — naturally — the Anvil Chorus from Verdi's Il Trovatori.

The choir was in Belleville Friday for a performance before a select audience — senior elementary and secondary students from Hastings and Lennox and Addington county vocal music classes.

Its appearance climaxed a vocal music enrichment day that began with a workshop taught by Dr. Nicholas Goldschmidt, director of music at the University of Guelph and director of the choir.

Students attending the workshop were selected, two from each school, from the vocal music classes. In most cases they were accompanied by their teachers, who took advantage of the occasion to join their students for the instruction from Dr. Goldschmidt and to sing with the choir.

"What an enchanted group of people!" exclaimed Dr. Goldschmidt of his pupils after the morning workshop. Later, the 200 students joined the choir to sing with them some of the selections they had learned in the morning.

"School audience are more attentive than adult audiences," said Bobbi Cain, a member of the choir's board of directors, in explaining why the choir enjoys travelling long distances to sing at schools.

The choir members are aged 17 to 70, and most work in Ottawa, making it difficult for them to give week-day performances. About 40 of the 50 members made it to Centennial yesterday by chartered bus.

The appearance of Dr. Goldschmidt and the choir was sponsored by the Youth and Recreation Branch of the Ontario department of education, and the Hastings and the Lennox and Addington boards of education. Quinte Arts Council arranges the music enrichment programs held every year for area school children.

And the anvil, played yesterday with a regular hammer by Bayside Secondary's music teacher, is more than an attention - getting gimmick.

When the choir sang with the National Arts Centre Orchestra, the orchestra was so impressed it substituted the musical anvil for the customary orchestra bells in its rendition of the Anvil Chorus.

A Word From A Pro

Dr. Nicholas Goldschmidt, distinguished conductor and director of music at the University of Guelph, taught a workshop for area students at Centennial Secondary School Friday. The choral workshop attracted 200 senior elementary and secondary students and their teachers from Hastings and Lennox and Addington Schools.

Others Soon to Study Hospital Unit: Potter

Last detail in the former Queen's Motel becoming an extended care unit of Belleville General Hospital, has been overcome.

Friday, the hospital's board of governors agreed to sign a five - year lease between Belleville Motor Hotel Ltd., and the hospital. Annual rent will amount to $200,000, it was disclosed.

Dr. R. T. Potter, MPP for Quinte, initiator of the scheme, said the unit was the "first of its kind in North America" and as such, will be a research guinea pig.

"In a few months, this project will be studied by other hospitals across the province and other areas in the country," the local MPP said.

"The CIBC is interested in doing a documentary on it," he added.

Monsigner J. P. SUllivan, board chairman, said the hospital is "very enthusiastic" about the project. "Only one medical bed was vacant at 9:30 a.m. today," he said.

Portions of the motel have been open to patients since the first week of November.

The Queen's extended-care unit offers a different concept in medical care. Patients wear street clothes, take their meals in the restaurant, and live in motel rooms that bear no trace of a hospital atmosphere.

Even nursing staff have discarded their uniforms for

Lecture Series

A combined series of lectures on fire, security and safety at Belleville General Hospital, are to be repeated for the benefit of staff.

A total of 424 hospital staff plus 108 teachers and students have attended six lectures in the past. Administrators hope to complete 100 per cent staff coverage at the training sessions.

Now that the lease is to be signed, work can progress on renovation required for convalescing patients. Covered passageways will be built between the three lodges so that patients can walk to the dining room with a minimum of difficulty in winter weather.

A large common room is also being planned.

Two types of patients will be cared for. Persons recovering from an acute illness or surgery and patients who must undergo tests, X-rays, and medical investigation before hospital admission, will use the unit on the self-care unit.

Dr. Potter expressed dissatisfaction with the efforts of several citizens to call a halt to the project. However, Mr. Monsignor Sullivan stated, "there are no more problems," and plans for one unique facility, can proceed as planned. When work is completed, the patients will be able to take advantage of the operation.

OSD Girl Winner

By BRIAN AMARON
Staff Reporter

A girl who has never experienced the sound of Christmas bells is the new Miss Santa Claus Parade.

Nancy Dillon, grade 13 student at the Ontario School for the Deaf, was selected from among seven girls at Centennial Secondary School Friday evening.

In addition to having her own float in next Saturday's parade, she will also assist Santa visiting youngsters confined to hospitals and will return to crown the second parade queen next year.

The 18 - year - old beauty impressed a panel of six judges with her visual interpretation of the song Climb Every Mountain. Even members of the audience not acquainted with sign language— and they were not the majority — were fully aware of the symbolic meanings conveyed by Miss Dillon's hand gestures.

Runner-up was Lois Watts of Ontario Business College. Terry Wilton of Moira Secondary School placed third.

Miss Dillon, a reading and sewing enthusiast, is not new to the beauty business. In 1966, she was selected queen of OSD's annual carnival.

Born in Ottawa, she hopes to return there upon graduation to take up clerical work. To keep herself active, she participates in volleyball and basketball at school.

Miss Dillon was nearly deprived of her crown when a mix-up occurred as emcee Pete Thompson of CJBQ was reading the names of the winners. Cards indicating the first and second place finishers had apparently been placed in wrong envelopes but the matter was soon straightened and the queen was able to take her place on the throne.

Presenting the sash and crown to Miss Dillon were Trenton mayor Duncan Macdonald and Mrs. Barbara Foley, wife of parade chairman, Frank Foley.

The judges, headed by Ald. Jean Smith, also included Flo Vanover, Sandra Saunders, Ald. Paul Russell, Bob Rowbotham and Colin Bruce.

The audience of more than 100 persons was entertained by the Centennial concert orchestra which played a selection of show tunes.

Students Get Emission Control Story

The emission control wagon pulled into Loyalist College yesterday to give lectures and demonstrations to the students of the automotive mechanics course. Rick Sunley (foreground) briefs students Art Koomen (left) and Ron Creasy (right) and teacher Norm Storms (rear, seated) on the operation of the equipment. The van's equipment determines the amount of pollutants coming from a car's exhaust during normal driving conditions.

Technicians Test Auto Exhausts

Drivers of old clunkers rejoice. The Ontario Government has come out with a truck that is designed to spot-check the new cars fitted.

Because pollution has become such a topical issue, the government has stepped up the regulations on emissions from automobiles.

A staff member who appeared yesterday at Loyalist College for educational purposes, said, "the old cars are a waste of time stopping because we'd run every one of them off the road".

The technician said "the older cars were not equipped with emission control devices but the new ones are".

The completely self-contained van, operated by two technicians, is designed to check the exhausts from late model cars by simulating actual driving conditions using a test ramp.

"We place the car on rollers and accelerate to 30 miles an hour, then slow to 15 miles an hour and finally to 30 miles an hour. The complete test takes about 18 minutes," said Rick Sunley.

With charts and graphs, technicians can determine the amount of carbon monoxide carbon dioxide and unburnt gases in the exhaust of the test vehicle.

"If we find a car is running high above the proper level, we ask the owner to have a tune-up, which usually takes care of the problem," said Mr. Sunley.

"Although a thorough back check to insure that the tune-up was done is not always possible, in most cases we ask the motorist to submit a mechanic's certificate that the work has been completed," he said.

If emission control devices are taken off the car, the owner is liable for a fine of up to $500.

The truck and one other like it, travels the entire province, doing checks in the summer and touring colleges in the winter.

Wolves Have Their Supporters As Well as Many Detractors

By IAN ROBERTSON
Staff Reporter

Wolves have been a bane to farmers for centuries and although many claim the animals cause little or no harm unless provoked, they are hunted down as a matter of course.

An organization to protect the timber wolf from extinction through trapping, poisoning and hunting has been established.

The Ontario Wolf League, known as OWL is a chapter of the Canadian Wolf Defenders whose chief goal is the conservation of wolves throughout Canada.

Those urging elimination of wolves from the wilderness areas and those urging their protection, have been having a running battle for years.

Conflicting reports from farmers in Thurlow and Sidney Townships have led to reports of wolves, dogs or coyotes ravaging flocks of sheep. When narrowed down, these reports have generally centred on the smaller coyote or a hybrid cross animal.

Frank Cheshire, district biologist for the department of lands and forests in Tweed, reports a total of 174 coyotes bounties in the Quinte district as compared to only 24 timber wolves.

Also, two wolf-dog hybrids and one coyote-dog hybrid were reported.

In Sidney Township, nine coyotes and a hybrid were bagged. In neighboring Thurlow Township, only four coyotes were taken. It has been Thurlow Township residents who seem to have been more heavily preyed against, with numerous reports of sheep killings.

Mr. Cheshire says many people confuse the coyote with wolf and tend to "cry wolf". "In Sidney and Thurlow, these are coyotes we are dealing with. Timber wolves are low in number and those taken are largely from north of Highway 7.

The lands and forests officer admits both animals are similar.

The wolf weighs from 60 to 65 pounds in this region . . . 15 to 20 pounds heavier in the northwest. Its most common color is gray fawn, but it can vary from reddish brown to grizzled grey and even pure white or black.

A larger animal than the coyote, the wolf has long legs and big paws. Its tail is long and bushy, with a dark stripe at the top. Its head has a long muzzle, yellow eyes and big erect ears.

As opposed to the coyote, the wolf is a lover of the family atmosphere. Hunting in packs their major prey are deer, caribou and moose. In the summer their staple diet where available is the beaver.

The coyote closely resembles its cousin, the wolf, but averages between 30 and 40 pounds. A long-legged animal with a long muzzle and a long, bushy tail, the pups can easily be mistaken for those of a fox.

Originally found on the prairies, the coyote has extended its territory from the turn of the century, when ranchers made an all-out effort to eliminate the species.

Unlike its larger cousin, the coyote prefers country that is interspersed with woodlots and open clearings. They survive well in marginal farm areas but tend to shun uninterrupted forest. Coyotes have been found living in ravines in Toronto and other cities.

A true scavanger, the coyote relies heavily on mice, rabbits, woodchucks, muskrats and squirrels. Although a natural hunter, it is not averse to eating carrion along highways or foraging in garbage dumps. Few deer kills by the smaller animals have been recorded.

Unlike the wolf which is not as common as most people think, the coyote seems to have the last laugh against man's concentrated attempts to eliminate it. Its yipping howl, serenaded against the night sky, is a memorable song to hear.

Although the coyote has been hunted relentlessly and is despised for its nuisance value, wolves are the topic of folklore. Tales of slinking, bloodthirsty creatures pouncing on unwary hunters or cradle-nappings are scoffed at by nature experts.

The department of lands and forests official stand on the wolf is "that Ontario has no record of a wolf attacking a man where the animal was not found to be suffering from rabies."

"Research has shown that most wolf kills are completely consumed and that wolves are not reckless killers of wildlife.

"The wolf is a symbol of the wilderness. Thousands of people go to Algonquin Provincial Park and other vacation spots in the hope of hearing a wolf pack howl in the night . . . a truly thrilling outdoor experience."

The first organized wolf howling session in 1963 attracted some 600 people.

In areas where wolves and coyotes are a problem, lands and forests officers will investigate the problem and inaugurate any control program they deem necessary.

If they do not personally carry out the program, officers may instruct the complainant in the proper technique of setting traps or snares. The foresters establish the initial sets, which are then maintained by the person who issued the complaint.

A somewhat lucrative business, wolf and coyote bounty-ing can pay anywhere from $25 to $50 to the hunter or trapper. These bounties vary in certain regions. The province pays a basic $25. Some counties match that. At the same time, smaller amounts are occasionally paid by townships.

Mr. Cheshire reports there is nobody in this area making a living out of hunting or trapping wolves. However sportsmen often take after the dog-like animals, finding them a truly exhilarating prey.

He says the difference between coyotes and wolves is so fine, that often the entire head must be sent to Toronto for expert opinion.

Commenting on founding of the new OWL organization, Mr. Cheshire said, "there are wolf haters and wolf lovers. They have their own reasons for their approaches to the wolf."

People joining OWL agree that "the control of wolves should take place only where direct conflict will man's interest is proven, and even then not to the extent as to endanger the survival of the species."

Membership in the new organization is $2 per year and headquarters is at OWL, P. O. Box 177, Postal Station S, Toronto 382, Ontario.

What 'Sell Out?'

Political opposition parties, like the governments they oppose, are often models of inconsistency. The British labor party for instance is currently screaming "sell out" over the accord reached by the Heath government and the rebel regime under Ian Smith in Rhodesia. It appears they are sceptical that the black African majority will ever attain full political rights in Rhodesia. They forget however that a people years away from the ability to govern themselves not to mention the white minority cannot be given the necessary powers overnight.

At the same time Harold Wilson's is quoted as advocating the unification of Ireland and thereby the sellout of Northern Ireland within 15 years. He has admitted he is not hopeful of such a plan succeeding and he is correct in that assumption at least. The Unionist party there has a legitimate majority government, and the Catholic minority has its members in parliament who have been democratically elected. In education for example the Catholic segment in schools are the recipients of large government grants for their system. Living conditions, for both Protestants and Catholics, in the north, and the economy generally, have for long been materially superior to those in the Irish republic.

But the very basis of the Ulster dilemma is that the Protestant majority in the north wants no part of a united Ireland that would be under a Catholic-orientated government. But even allowing for this, there are grave doubts also about the political aspirations of the IRA, the terrorist organization attempting to bring Northern Ireland to its knees. The IRA is heavily infiltrated by Marxist elements whose objective is a Communist style people's republic of all-Ireland. Imagine then another Cuba, this time on Britain's doorstep.

Ireland, as somebody once said, is a "most distressful country," or as Irish novelist George Moore put it long ago: "Ireland is a fatal disease — fatal to Englishmen and doubly fatal to Irishmen." It is full of contradictions, but fundamental to its discontent is the fact that its population is not a homogenous society like that of say Sweden. It has its small, landed aristocracy, a strong middle-class, and it also has its so-called lower middle class and poor. Among these there is first the basic cleavage of class and over and above that there is the religious rift. Ulstermen and southerners, though they vote each other out of the country, have little in common. There are those too who have contributed to the economic upsurge of both sides in recent years: Americans, Canadians, Germans, Dutch, French and others and their executives and families live there. It is a polyglot population.

Why don't the Ulster Catholics go south, some may ask? The answer is that the southern economy could not absorb them and anyway they share the material benefits of life in the north. They are not the oppressed minority Ulster's detractors and the IRA would have the outside world believe. Moderate Catholics are on good terms with their Protestant counterparts. But so long as the Unionist majority holds power in Ulster, preferring to remain part of the United Kingdom, so long is it wishful thinking to talk about unification.

Winter Trap

When an individual or group gets caught in a mountain storm their ordeal can be great. We have always understood too that to halt one's progress, to lie down seeking some protection, can be fatal.

That was the fate some months ago, last Spring as we recall, of a 21-year-old Oregon girl who lay down in wet snow and froze to death on a mountainside. Ironically, she was participating in the graduation exercises of an outdoor survival school, and her death was caused by pyhothermia — low body temperature.

Similarly a 19-year-old Scottish teacher with mountaineering experience and five children perished recently 3,000 feet up in the Cairngorm Mountains. One of two survivors, and the leader of the expedition, Catherine Davidson, 21, had once won a gold medal from Prince Philip for mountaineering skill.

The dead children, four of them girls, and their teacher were from an Edinburgh School taking an adventure course at the city's Centre for Outdoor Education in the Highlands. We would like to think of similar outdoor activities for young people here, but of course with proper safeguards. In this case Edinburgh officials are puzzled why the party of 14 people forecasts of storms and heavy snow. The Scottish highlands experience some of the most severe winter weather in the British Isles.

Has Ottawa Backed Down Again?

Postal Union Ignored Last Year's Warning by P.M.

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — So the postal workers have been acting up again, with threats to drag down the Christmas mail delivery if the Post Office does not shut out casual part-time workers. Used their "rotating strike" again.

The cost of that is more overtime — at the inevitable price of higher postal rates — for the mail users.

There is a settlement?

Will it settle what has been continuing unrest and militancy of postal workers through the last five years?

It may get the Christmas mail delivered, but it will have to be a miracle of a settlement to bring peace and quiet — most of all decent public service — to the Post Office.

After Christmas mail come New Year resolutions.

Remember Prime Minister Trudeau's resolution?

It was not made for the new year but for his then new administration, back some three years ago.

It dealt with strikes in the public service.

Not just the federal branch of the sprawling bureaucracy, but the provincial and municipal, too, for he spoke of the whole embracing "public sector" as he called it.

And he made it clear that he did not hold with strikes in the public service.

Legal strikes, illegal walk-outs, "study sessions," or "withdrawal of services," as the rationalising New Democrats have called it in trying to justify the shut-downs of essential government operations.

He firmly opposed strikes — even said they should not be permitted — in the public sector of the economy because the balance of opposing forces operating in business and industry did not function in government services.

It did not, he explained, because the government, any government, unlike business and industry, could always pay the strike ransom demand out of the pockets of the taxpayers.

Particularly, he specified, "the unprotected and unorganized section of the taxpayers."

But having said all that, the Prime Minister has done little since except mutter about the possibility of outlawing strikes in the public service.

Meanwhile, civil servants, postal workers, teachers, firemen, policemen, hydro power employees and many other groups — all paid by the taxpayers — have struck these same taxpayers.

Especially the postal workers.

Due to the many postal strikes — wildcats, work stoppages, study sessions and other forms of disruption — the Post Office has lost 80 percent of its business of delivering letters.

"Our letter carriers deliver them in around seven days," a Post Office executive admitted at the time, "while private delivery firms do it in three."

So some of that lost postal revenue is being made up raising mail rates, up six to seven cents a letter and on the new year to eight cents.

The dollar loss is only part of the cost.

The real and continuing price is the increasingly deplorable mail service and the on-again-off-again unreliability of the Post Office.

When the irrepressible Eric Kierans was Postmaster General he blandly confessed that Canada, as far as he knew, was the only country with five-day-week mail delivery.

It is one of the few nations with but one residential delivery a day and a service schedule that sometimes takes a letter more than a week in getting from one address to another in the same city.

Acutely sensitive to this unbelievably rotten service made even worse by sporadic strikes, Prime Minister Trudeau only a year ago addressed himself directly to the postal workers.

The Government, he warned them, would "find another way much longer" this sort of public service irresponsibility.

He took some of the blame, conceding there was an element too of inept management of government to enforce its authority.

But he hammered the postal workers with the words: "The nations should not have been building up a case for the government to take the right to strike away from them.

"If the result of their actions is continuing disruption of a basic public service, the government must have no choice."

But the postal workers did not appear to be listening any more closely than they were when he made his "New Administration Resolution" — that "something will have to be done about strikes in the public service."

Coffee Stop For Drivers

Montreal Gaz eite

Quebec drivers were given a sobering alternative today: Start drinking more coffee or prepare for a record number of fatalities.

The plea for increased coffee consumption came from the Quebec Automobile Office following an accident on the Laurentian Autoroute on the weekend that took three lives.

Automobile police believe the driver fell asleep at the wheel while negotiating a curve. Driving conditions were excellent when the accident occurred, police said.

The accident brought to 19 the number of deaths in mishaps on the three autoroutes in the area, only three less than the record 22 deaths on the autoroutes in 1970.

And to avoid reaching that record, motorists are being urged to take advantage of the free coffee available at autoroute kiosks, an innovation started last year by the Quebec Autoroute Office.

The final section of the original Welland Canal from Port Dalhousie to Port Robinson was opened 142 years ago today—in 1829. The canal took five years to build. Before it opened, all freight moving between Lake Erie and Lake Ontario was transported overland. The canal was deepened in 1841 and later further enlarged, but was replaced in 1932 by the new Welland Ship Canal with a depth of 27 feet.

1933—American playwright Eugene O'Neill died.

1942—The French scuttled their battle fleet at Toulon rather than allow it to fall into the hands of the Germans occupying the country during the Second World War.

1940—Germany annexed Lorraine.

1888—Curtis Brady received New York City's first driver's permit to drive an automobile in Central Park.

Union Chief Defies Economic Measures

Nixon-Meaney Confrontation Dominates U.S. Scene

By PETER BUCKLEY

WASHINGTON (CP) — Behind the curtain of secrecy are raised voices and harsh words, the Nixon administration and American labor leaders plainly have more at stake than mutual animosity.

Both sides are aiming for the allegiance of the men in blue collars or hard hats—or even button-down shirts—who make up the working force in the United States.

In the short term, that allegiance will be needed in the battle over the nature of wage and price controls that will characterize the president's fight against inflation and unemployment. In the longer run, the working man's political affections are being wooed.

The days seem past when AFL-CIO president George Meany and other labor officials could routinely guarantee a broad trade union vote to the Democratic party and its candidates. They no longer can be assured of automatic loyalty even from that fraction of American workers who are union members.

Nixon has consistently exploited labor's weakness on behalf of the Republicans, appealing over the heads of union leaders for support from the membership on such issues as the crime rate and rising costs.

The pattern is being continued now by Treasury Secretary John Connally, whose words are often taken by observers here to be a fairly accurate reflection of the president's thinking.

In the same breath in which he accused the 77-year-old Meany of "arrogance, boorishness and discourtesy" toward Nixon, Connally expressed the view that Meany was "out of step" with the working man.

Meany has denied any discourtesy to the president, who has coldly received when he gave a blunt speech to the AFL-CIO convention in Miami last week. But White House staff members seem to have made an exceptional effort to inform Washington correspondents how irate the staff was, despite official word that Nixon was not upset.

Meany's own tough talk has not subsided. Hardly an official in the Nixon administration was spared an unflattering description—for example, Labor Secretary James Hodgson was called a "Little League umpire" as Meany blasted "the Nixon recession."

Much of the current jockeying concerns the body heat set up —with business, labor and "public" representatives—to control wages as part of the anti-inflation fight.

After first hinting that they might quit the Pay Board, Meany and the four other labor representatives instead announced that they wouldn't let the administration "drive" them off it. They will remain members but abstain from co-operating until the question of retroactive pay is frozen. Then they'll be called to their satisfaction.

The administration's approach is to stress the benefits to be gained by working people from a stable economy and expanding employment. The Nixon view that concern about inflation is the overriding one of Americans is amply supported by public opinion polls.

And lest the public at large share Meany's view that big business is getting unfair privileges, Treasury Secretary Connally was there to complete the picture.

Connally told a press conference that as a result of Ly in Meany's salary, to $90,000 from $70,000 a year, showed a "balanced contempt" for the principle of restraint in wage claims. He left it to Meany's "conscience" whether he accepts the increase.

New York Churches Get Involved In Prison Reform

The Christian Science Monitor

We have seen many a prison reform program come and go—some to be shelved, some that have promised much and delivered little, a few that have delivered deperately had conditions. But one of the most hopeful programs we have yet heard about has nothing to do with the usual approaches of firing prison officials, building new jails, or changing parole procedures. Nor even with reforming prisoners. Rather, it involves a reformation of the public's attitudes toward prisons and their occupants.

We refer to a program in which 30 New York City church parishes have "adopted" the 1,400 prisoners in the Brooklyn Home of Detention for Men. Each of the churches sends at least one clergyman once weekly, or more often, to visit one of the 24 cellblocks that the parish has "adopted".

The visiting clergyman makes personal contact with individual prisoners. He helps out on family problems, arranges for therapy if needed, find jobs, and offers various kinds of counsel and support. Through him, every prisoner can have a rejection to the community. With that comes the knowledge that someone knows he is in there and cares.

Another useful program is that conducted by a union local which offers counsel, bail bonds and "moral bail" for its members in case of arrest. "Moral bail" means the union will vouch for the detained person. thus improving his chances of being freed until trial time.

What is new and vital in these programs is citizen involvement. Instead of pointing the finger of blame at prison officials or guards, or at substandard physical conditions, individual citizens are taking it upon themselves to make personal contact with the men that society has swept out of sight and out of mind.

Isn't this where reform starts? Government agencies, be they in marble palaces in Washington or in granite cages in Brooklyn, reflect exactly the interest and concern — or lack thereof — of the public to which they are accountable. If society cares enough to treat convicts as the individual human beings they are, so will those whom society pays to be professionally responsible for convicts' care and rehabilitation.

We salute these Brooklynites who care, and who, caring, reach out to help.

Records Of Note

Ottawa Journal

The Guinness Book of Records 18th edition of which has just been released in Canada, is in no place more amusing and amazing than in its chapter on The Human Being.

Some examples:

19th century Russian peasant gave birth to 69 children, including pairs of twins, seven sets of triplets and four sets of quadruplets. Heaviest twins in the world are a pair of North Carolina farmers who weigh 660 and 640 pounds. A Frenchman by May, 1961, had shed 207 pints of blood. In 1967 a Turk recited 8,666 verses of the Koran from memory in six hours.

Some records most of us would prefer not to attempt: break: growing fingernails 22 inches long; hair 26 feet 8½ inches long; a beard 17½ feet long; swallowing a 27-inch sword or producing from ear canals a flame 6½ feet long: sneezing for 152 days non-stop; or modelling the Brit who between 1788 and 1811 drank 33,668 bottles of ruby port — four a day.

British Missionaries Search For Opportunities for Service

LONDON (AP) — British missionaries are in a quandary. Like Britain, they have lost an empire and are still searching for a new role.

The idea of the Christian striding through Africa with the Bible in one hand and a medicine chest in the other, to bring the one true religion to a pagan people is a thing of the past.

The 6 to 8 per cent usually shuffled out by the winds of change that raged through the colonial world after the Second World War, ushering in independence for a multitude of nations.

For Anglicans and Roman Catholics this has resulted in a reappraisal of aims and outlook.

New guidelines are still being formulated. Gone is the arrogance and conviction of its place is emerging a new and refreshing humility.

"We are not uncertain about our own religion, but we are uncertain about our judgment of other religions," said Rev. Hans Reinhardt, secretary of the Roman Catholic Mill Hill Society, which has 1,500 members scattered around the world engaged in missionary work.

"We are still preaching around. We are asking ourselves whether all the accent on dogma, ritualistic observances and church membership is really necessary. Is that what Christ wanted? There is a lot of evidence that He didn't.

"Today we say, right, if someone finds his inspiration to do good in another religion—OK —so long as he does it well."

The ultimate aim of missionaries is still to bring others to Christ." But the idea of the dramatic conversion and using the number of new converts as a yardstick of success has been jettisoned by many churches.

Now it is more a matter of illustrating through example to others that "if people are Christian in the real sense of the word it is easier for them to find a way out of the troubles which confront them," said Father Burman.

For Britain, perhaps more than any other nation, missionaries were tied up with the concept of empire and the paternalistic attitude it fed. The task of adjusting to a changed situation has consequently been that much more difficult.

The British Church Missionary Society, a voluntary Anglican organization with 600 missionaries in 23 countries, recently commissioned two agencies to prepare a report on its work.

They found that in Africa the missionary was seen as "someone who is clogging up the process" of fostering unnecessary culture from both the East and West.

They concluded: "The missionary knows he is welcome only as long as he is essential and must always be working himself out of a job."

A spokesman for the CMS said they now put the accent on service and being attuned to the needs of the society they were working in.

"We are still in the conversion business but we do not consider ourselves in opposition to other faiths, although certain things such as witchcraft must always be an anathema to us," he added.

More Help Advocated For Black Coalition

KITCHENER (CP) — The governing body of the Canadian Council of Churches urged its members Thursday to increase financial support for the National Black Coalition in Canada.

However, Most Rev. Edward Scott, Anglican primate, said the churches were free to "opt out" of the support if they wished.

In a resolution to the council's central committee, he called on the council to "continue and increase the financial support for a further three years."

The committee, which wound up its three-day annual meeting, passed the resolution unanimously.

A spokesman for the coalition, Dr. L. R. Sealey of Halifax, said the vote "crystallizes the intentions of the churches to deal with the real issues."

The committee also urged greater co-operation between the council and the Canadian Catholic Conference.

"We are constantly concerned with our structure, not just now but in the future," said Most Rev. Ralph Latimer of the Anglican Church. "And who can think of the future of the council without having the Roman Catholic Church represented is unconceived."

Dr. Sealey asked that a resolution on the crisis in education be broadened to include concern for minority groups.

He also said he is considering making a presentation to the National Library Association seeking removal of Little Black Sambo from their libraries.

"This is an old story which binged on the days of slavery and at a time when the black child was considered in a different vein. It has nothing to do with the black child of today but it causes white children to think of him in such an environment."

He said Mark Twain's Huckleberry Finn, which chronicles the adventures of a white boy and a black servant boy, should also be kept out of elementary schools.

The Canadian Council of Churches represents most of the major Protestant bodies in Canada.

Want Voice In Choice Of Bishops

TORONTO (CP) — Priests and laity should participate in the choice of their local bishop, English-speaking Catholic priests of Canada resolved Thursday at their annual meeting.

The resolution by the National Federation of Senate of Priests does not say whether participation would be by consultation or by actual election.

Bishops now are usually designated by Rome with varying degrees of consultation with bishops of the country.

Canadian bishops previously made a similar proposal to Rome.

Most Rev. Thomas McCarthy, Bishop of St. Catharines, attending the federation meeting, was asked what happened to the proposal.

"It was sent to Rome. Period."

The priests also passed a resolution that priests lead a discussion of abortion through professional groups and associations of parents and pastoral councils.

The federation said abortion can never be an alternative in responsible parenthood.

The federation also resolved that bishops and priests lead a further study of the theology of celibacy.

Woman Elected Chief

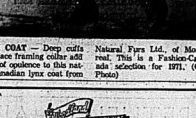
NORWAY HOUSE, Man. (CP) — The Norway House Indian band at the northern tip of Lake Winnipeg has broken with tradition and elected a woman as chief.

Chief Jean Folster defeated three men who were also seeking the position and in doing so became the first woman chief in Manitoba history.

When a reporter from the weekly Manitoba Indian News asked her what it was like being the first woman chief she replied: "I feel scared, but it is also a great feeling and I am honored to be the first woman chief elected in Manitoba."

The Norway House band is the third largest in Manitoba and is scattered along the banks of the Nelson River about 350 miles north of Winnipeg where the river and Lake Winnipeg join.

The 49-year-old chief has been active in community affairs for a number of years and has been welfare administrator for the band of 1,600 people since 1967.



In an interview shortly after becoming chief she said child neglect and alcoholism were a major concern with her. Chief Folster said there was some child neglect on the reserve as a result of drinking bouts.

She said an empty school on the reserve could be refurbished and used as a home for children whose parents had either neglected or abandoned them.

"We could get a couple to look after the place and the children would live there until a good home is found or until the parents have mended their ways."

The Trials and Joys of French Housewife on Shopping Spree

By BEVERLEY BRAHIC

MARSEILLE (CP) — A proper French housewife goes shopping once, and often twice, a day.

Horrors, you say: once a week is bad enough.

It was also a daily necessity until relatively recently with the appearance of ready-sliced, cellophane-packaged bread, frozen dinners and refrigerators—all of which are still regarded with a slightly jaundiced eye, if I can judge by the people I know.

Where else does the butcher—knife poised over a series of lamb chops—spend half an hour in ardent discussion with each customer and then point out that "if that's all the money you have this morning, you'd better hang onto it and pay for the meat another time."

I once made the mistake of trying to buy a roast of beef on Sunday morning. In my neighborhood, it's mainly the husbands who do the shopping on Sunday, and the time I reached the head of the line at the butcher shop, it was too late to cook the roast.

The morning of de Gaulle's funeral, the local women, a few men attracted by the noise, and the butcher—gesticulating with a knife in one hand and a leg of lamb in the other—re-fought the Battle of France, re-liberated Paris and re-repatriated the French Algerians.

But the favorite subject of my butcher, not surprisingly, is the high quality of his meat and the low quality meat of most other butchers' shops.

The first time I ordered a leg of lamb, he noticed my accent, and inquired, somewhat fearfully, if I intended to cook the lamb "in the English manner"—he meant boiled.

He looked relieved when I said no, then proceeded to tell me all often do with his customers, to advise me on the best method to cook the meat—herbs to use, the temperature and timing.

Buying fruit and vegetables is just as agreeable. The man behind says to, no, take his head of lettuce, it is prettier, the woman in front has a recipe for tomato sauce, and the salesgirl has recipes for everything and never tries to slip a mouldy orange or a bruised peach into my basket. At the creamerie — where you buy milk, butter, cheese and the various canned goods which find their way onto French shelves—the merchant is a stout and dowdy matron who has lived in the neighborhood for 63 years and knows the skeletons in her custom-ers' cupboards better than they do themselves.

Discretion is not one of her virtues, and with each familiar to her store she likes to discuss the amount of money Marlene So-and-So spent on cheese this morning, the only subject she never discusses is herself.

Like many shopkeepers she has a chair in a corner for old folks and pregnant women, but this chair is hastily removed to the back room at the sight of her most faithful customer — an old woman who makes the rounds of the shops twice a day to catch up on the gossip, but who smells so bad she scares all the other customers away.

With supermarket-shopping centres springing up on the outskirts of the cities of southern France it is a surprise and perhaps a vanishing pleasure to penetrate the crooked old streets of the same cities and discover the chaos of an open - air market.

In the morning the Marseille fish market spreads along the old harbor in front of the fishing boats, and the fish are scooped alive out of the boats and onto the tables. Don't question the freshness of the fish; for the fisherwoman may launch into a colorful tirade of insults—an occasion to draw a crowd if her display hasn't done so.

Arles, on Saturday morning, is one of the last markets in southern France where one can still see the huge blue canvas umbrellas of Camargue's shepherds and sheep's collar bells, and, in Carpentras, east of Avignon, on market day, in addition to glaring red displays of farm machines, there is a hawker of glassware who never fails to gather a crowd of suspicious peasants.

"It's plastic," shouted one, from the outskirts of the crowd, when the vendor seemed to be exaggerating the wonders of his wares.

"Plastic!" cried the vendor, offended. And, picking up a few of his glasses, he shattered them on the pavement at his feet.

"Alors, c'est du plastique?" he called, triumphant.

Nautical Motifs Top New Trend

PARIS (Reuter) — Middy tops, bell-bottom trousers, sailor collars, sailor berets and nautical motifs emerged as the top new trend when 800 French and international ready-to-wear designers showed their latest collections in Paris.

Similar trends could be seen among the high-priced specialty firms displaying their wares at the show.

It all contrasted markedly with the army look of the past season.

Almost every mass production manufacturer showing clothes at the display produced some version of the nautical look in combinations of red, white and blue, blazing with brass buttons decorated with anchor motifs.

Sailor collars edged with contrasting stripes and bands turned up on almost everything from middy tops to formal evening gowns.

Pants had eight-button yoke fronts and flared below the knees into wide bell-bottoms in true naval tradition. Hats and trimmings seemed to have been inspired by the fleets of France, Britain and the United States.

Other trends include the Yves Saint Laurent influence evolved in blazers and pleated skirts, 1930s-style "dandy" suits, and "little girl" dresses highlighting the return of the mini and micro skirts to replace hot pants.

Pre-Second World War Hollywood styles with slinky bare-back vamp dresses for formal wear are also coming back.

Long-fitted blazers, often made of cotton velvet or pin-wale corduroy, were teamed to pleated skirts or worn over pleated, printed silk shirt-dresses.

Wide-shouldered velvet blazers also show up strongly in "Georges Sand" suits, comprising flared trousers and soft silk shirts, with wide ascot ties or floppy bows beneath the collars.

"Little girl" dresses abounded with mini and micro lengths often over matching bloomers, styled yokes, smocking and starched white collars above big pussycat bow ties.

"Little women" themes were also in evidence in stylized versions of 19th-century romantic, ruffled and flounced Victorian dresses and the taffeta "Proust" gowns that made headlines in Saint Laurent's last collection.

CONTOURS OF A COUNTRY'S CULTURE

"Culture, like acquainting ourselves with the best that has been known and said in the world."
— Matthew Arnold (1822-1888).

The coming of Christmas, celebrating the birth of Our Lord, brings a joyous season, as well as a reminder concerning birthdays, and the gracious ways of honoring them.

Amongst our friends and relatives, since a birthday denotes the fact that one is not getting any younger, is where tact is paramount, and was nicely demonstrated, last week, when a Miami attorney received from his wife and children, on his 40th birthday, a plaque which read: "To us you'll always be 39."

How, then, does a country honor its sons and daughters, who have contributed to their country's development, by bringing order out of chaos, paving the way for civilization and culture? Its people are grateful, knowing full well as Henry James has expressed it: "It takes a great deal of history to make a little tradition, a great deal of taste to make a little art." Each and all important aspects of a society.

One gesture Governments have chosen is the issuance of commemorative stamps. Bearers of communication with people within as well as outside a country, such stamps are instant reproducers of a country's cultural contours; of its historical and proud past, its heroes, artists, and great events.

Civilization "in the making is exciting" in which artists and authors play a part, and an interesting example of 1971 gratitude is Ireland's issuance of a 6½ pence multicolored stamp. It reproduces in miniature Jack B. Yeats' watercolor An Island Store. This illustration, by the way, was one of 12 watercolors he did as illustrations for The Aran Islands, by J. M. Synge, whose birthdate also was 1871.

Jack Yeats was born in London, August 18, 1871. His brother was William Butler Yeats, the famed Irish poet. Jack Yeats died in Dublin, March 28, 1957.

On the other hand, John Millington Synge lived a short life. Born April 16, 1871 during his brief 37 years (he died March 24, 1909), his dramatist literary legacy, among other, plays, included The Playboy of the Western World, and essays on Galway Bay Islanders in the Aran Islands where Irish is still spoken. Synge was, in turn a musician, a literary critic and a playwright.

To mark his birth centenary, Ireland issued a 4-pence multicolored stamp based on a 1907 stencil portrait by Jac? Yeats. Yeats.

Postal departments of many governments are ready and waiting by October to issue their Christmas stamps. Whatever themes are varied and interesting: Australia features the Three Wise Men of the Christmas Story. Canterbury Cathedral provides the basis for the designs of three Christmas stamps, for Britain, which depict in miniature three stained glass window panels from the Cathedral.

This year Canada's Teent Christmas stamp depicts the snowflake — an emblem of an important natural element that plays a major part in shaping the lives of our people and country — and its beneficent wish for a "white Christmas".

"Second Glance does not appear in December, but may we take this opportunity to wish all our readers a Merry Christmas, and we shall look forward to greeting you in the New Year."—V.R.G.

Successful Living

One Should Make Room for Accumulated Wisdom

By DORIS CLARK

"The aged are very much a part of the community and are going to become a greater part of the community if for no other reason than weight of numbers. In my contact with them I am surprised at their sensitivity to changes. By no means are they all wedded to the past.

"I hope that through the efforts of all of us we can insure that the aged are not sacrificed to the immediate demands of a youth-centred society. We must emphasize the need for a change in attitude towards the aged in order to build an acceptance of the process of aging and of the aged as an integral part of community life.

"The greatest unmet need of the aged is neither physical nor financial. It is what I would call emotional security; and includes the need to be loved, to be recognized, to have something useful to do and a chance to express themselves. In other times this was the way of family life, but in our time it is not." — Duncan W. Rogers, Deputy Minister, Department of Public Welfare, Province of Alberta.

As Mr. Rogers implies, with an extra quarter century of healthy years added to the life span, growing older ought to mean learning more, taking better advantage of recreation time, refining and polishing our personality, and making a successful hobby of getting along with people. Not to mention the tremendous things which can be achieved by the possessors of the accumulated wisdom of the years!

Dear Doris: I smoked for 30 years. Then my 12-year-old grandson (whom I am training) one day said, "Grandma, can I smoke?"

Well, that stopped me. I miss the habit but not the smoking-if you know what I mean. I have held out now for over a month and I guess I can keep it up. — Grandmother.

Dear Grandmother: Take a bow! Once in a while it suddenly strikes us that our example means something serious to the youngsters who admire us.

• • •

For many people the habit of reaching for a cigarette, lighting it and smoking it is more compelling psychologically than the actual flavor and enjoyment of the smoke.

Doesn't this mean that one of the tricks is to have something else to reach for — like an apple or a stick of chewing gum or maybe a miniature box of raisins? If we were infants we could suck our thumb and get a little oral satisfaction that way. But there are limits!

If still have copies of the leaflet "Why Smoke?" available for 25 cents and a large, stamped, self-addressed envelope. It is packed with tricky dodges for would-be quitters.)

Dear Doris: I went to country school in the States: we had a language book called Mother Tongue 1 and 11: In it were many poems, proverts, etc. I dearly loved them and would like to get a copy of Mother Tongue No. 1. If you have any idea where I could look I would be — Ever Grateful

Dear Grateful: Perhaps dear old Mother Tongue is just collecting dust on some old-timer's bookshelf — some American who responded earlier on to the Call of the North!

Meanwhile, explore the book finders who make a business of finding the unfindable. Embosoming you some addresses.

Leaflets mentioned by Doris are available to readers for 20 cents and a large seven-cent stamped, self-addressed envelope. If you have not received a leaflet requested, it may be that you have neglected to include the necessary seven-cent stamp.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Can an 'in-law' be neutral in disputes?

IN CLEAR-CUT CASES, MAYBE; but in disputes that can go either way, a mother-in-law or father-in-law is almost sure to side with her or his own son or daughter. If a mother-in-law, say, admits this, perhaps she can be more neutral than she realizes. Sometimes, however, when a mother-in-law tries to over-compensate for her natural attitude, she will begin to feel guilty about her "bias" in such a fight.

Are today's teeners really independent?

NO, in spite of the current vogue for each youngster to feel free to do his "own thing." Many teenagers just go along with the crowd, not because they want to, but because to do otherwise would make them "different." They all want to act independently of their parents and the "Establishment," but only as "independently" as they are allowed according to the guidelines and dictates that are laid down firmly by their contemporaries.

Does a 'grouch' enjoy being a grouch?

NO, not a real grouch. He is too busy looking for something to vent his venom on to get any enjoyment out of a grouchy mood. A "phony" grouch, though, could possibly relish the reaction of others to his continual expressions of irritation. Such a person believes he cannot win the positive respect he craves so he settles for being known as someone who can always bellyache about something.

Ann Landers

Teener Wants to Boycott Longhairs

Dear Ann Landers: I am a Cleveland high school girl, back in class after a groovy trip out of town, and already it's awful. The boys are so sloppy it's a crime. They don't even smell clean. I am sick of uncombed, straggly hair, moustaches, sideburns, bare feet and clothes that are so "casual" they look like rejects from a rag bag.

The other night I had a date with a nice guy. He went to kiss me goodnight and I got a mouthful of hair. It was disgusting. I told him not to kiss me again until he got rid of the moustache and trimmed off about a foot of that wild mane. The following Monday he came up to me in school to show me. Exhibit A, as he called it. He had shaved off his moustache and his hair was neatly shaped and several inches shorter. He looked terrific. I could barely believe it.

I'll bet if the girls in this country would boycott guys with dirty, tangled hair, filthy jeans, raunchy sweat shirts and bare feet, we could get this whole country cleaned up again. Will you print the suggestion? Thank you.—Ohio Tees

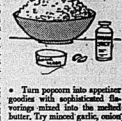
Dear Tees: Beautiful. But, what about the girls with long, dirty hair, bare feet and raunchy sweat shirts—and no bras, yet —how about someone boycotting them?

Dear Ann Landers: Several working girls have this same problem, so when you help me you will be helping others.

I share an apartment with a girl I'll call Marge. We got along fine until she began to date this loafer. I should tell you that most of the furniture in this place is mine—and it's very good stuff. Marge and this unemployed lout take over the living room every night, laughing and talking, playing music, and rolling around on my good couch. I can't get to sleep until he leaves and this has cut into my rest considerably.

The grocery bill is higher now, of course, and since this guy came into the picture no snack is safe, no soft drink, or hard drink, or home cigarette. After he leaves it's as if a herd of locusts had descended on the place.

I don't want to be petty or cheap, and I do like Marge a lot, but this boyfriend of hers is too much. What can I do?—Ontario Dead End



Dear Ontario: Since I do not know some important facts—such as who moved in with whom—I can't be of much help. This I can tell you, however: The arrangement is not working and someone has got to move out. Next time, set up better rules for roommates. Get it in writing—and make a more astute selection.

Dear Ann Landers: Please give me a third party's view in regard to borrowing tools. As a person who is sick of having to go ask neighbors for my lawn mower, shovel, rake, garden hose, flashlight, wheelbarrow, lawn sprinkler, hedge shears, pliers, garage ladder—just name it and they've borrowed it — I need your advice. I might also add that most of the borrowed tools a somehow get rusted, broken, worn out, and "misplaced." I've even had people deny that they had borrowed the tools and that was the end of it.

Is it mean, unneighborly or selfish to say, "No—I am sorry, I do not lend out my equipment." What do you say, Ann? —Paducah Headache

Dear P. Head: In light of the fact that you've had some bad experiences with your neighbors, I believe you would be justified in saying no, particularly to those with whom you've had the bad experiences.

Dietitian Finds Career Challenging

HALIFAX (CP) Dietitians, unlike nurses, are not the subject of romance novels, but dietitian Ruth Ann Mulrooney still finds her career exciting and challenging.

Blue-eyed and vivacious, Miss Mulrooney teaches and coordinates the dietetic internship program at two Halifax hospitals.

She also does dietetic consultation, a field she became interested in through the weight-reduction organization known as TOPS — for Take Off Pounds Sensibly.

As a consultant, she helps doctors in their referral to patients on nutrition and weight-reduction programs.

Miss Mulrooney predicts the practice of dietetic consultation is bound to increase in the future. Doctors, she says, acquire only a nodding acquaintance with nutrition in medical schools.

She spent seven years acquiring her knowledge of nutrition. After obtaining her bachelor of science degree at University of Ottawa, she interned for a year at the Royal Victoria Hospital in Montreal.

After that, she took her master's degree in nutrition at the University of Wisconsin and spent her summers at the Massachusetts General Hospital to gain practical experience.

Miss Mulrooney says she can see many different fields opening for trained dietitians.

The course at the hospitals here is divided between the areas of food service, including management and preparation of food, and the application of the science of nutrition to sick patients.

Murder Suspects Seize Plane

They also allowed a bus to come within 100 yards of the plane so that the passengers could disembark.

Airline officials had said the three-engine plane carried a crew of six and 43 passengers in addition to the hijackers. The passengers included actor Dustin Hoffman, TWA said.

A fuel truck also was obtained from McDill, because the plane landed beyond the range of an underground fuelling system at the airport.

Before takeoff, tower officials said, the crew of the airliner made inquiries about the weather to Havana.

Airline officials said the three-engine Boeing 727 carried a crew of six and 36 passengers in addition to the hijackers.

Witnesses in Albuquerque told police the three men arrived in a tow truck they had commandeered and drove up to the plane.

The witnesses said the men ran aboard the plane and one placed a gun against the head of a stewardess and ordered her to close the door.

A TWA spokesman said the aircraft was surrounded by police vehicles, but the captain, J. B., McGhee, asked that the vehicles be removed so he could take off.

Police in Albuquerque said descriptions of the three hijackers fit those given for three men charged in district court warrants with murder in the death of a state trooper, Robert Rosenbloom.

The trooper was shot to death west of Albuquerque on Nov. 8 after stopping a car that contained three men.

Police said they obtained the warrants on the basis of fingerprints that were found on the car the trooper had stopped and were checked through FBI files.

Named in the warrants were Michael R. Finney, 20, of San Francisco and Berkeley, Calif.; Ralph L. Goodwin, 24, of Berkeley, and Charles Hill, 21, for whom a home town was not given.

Additional Space Said Still Needed

White workmen proceed with construction of a two-storey administration building at Belleville General Hospital, space requirements indicate the new building may not be adequate.

At the Friday morning board of governors meeting, hospital administrator Philip Rickard said an additional, third storey should be considered by the board.

Board member Alderman Ben Corke suggested an extra level be completed on the new building. He said this storey could be an uncompleted shell, with roof and walls available for future expansion.

"This would be cheaper," the administrator added.

The administration building is scheduled for completion in June of 1972.

The board agreed an estimate of price for the additional level is to be made.

Santa Visits Trenton

TRENTON (Staff) — Trenton merchants today have the welcome mat out for Santa Claus scheduled to arrive at Centennial Park on the town's eastern limits at 1:30 p.m.

But the duty forecaster at nearby CFB reports that the weatherman will not be off operating and predicts wet snow commencing at noon turning into a light drizzle by the time of Santa's arrival.

Children and parents will not be disappointed, however, because the parade held in conjunction with Santa's visit this year will be longer, more colorful and noisier than ever before, according to chamber of commerce officials. There will be 21 floats, nine bands and eight majorette groups participating.

The parade will commence at Centennial Park proceeding along Dundas Street and over the old bridge to the downtown section and Queen Street is detoured in front of St. Peter's School.

Hawaii Five O Healthy TV Program

NEW YORK (AP) — Starting as a sickly infant, CBS's Hawaii Five-O has grown into healthy maturity. This series was almost cancelled after its first season, but now, four years old, the Jack Lord action show must be counted as a solid hit—it was in fourth place in the most recent Nielsen ratings.

The secret of the show's appeal is its setting and the typical backgrounds of the 50th state. Against these big, waving palms, blue sea and big waves, they play"cops and robbers of the most traditional TV style.

Lord invests his role with a sort of bared-teeth intensity and restrained violence that give essentially threadbare situations some special excitement.

As a series, the program's fortunes rise and dip slightly from week to week, depending on the allure of its toughest competition, ABC's Movie of the Week.

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "John Ford can bring out in actors as many curves and heights as a actor. Tuesday night and his performances was applauded by a stellar audience.

Among those saluting him were two veteran actors who worked for Ford—John Wayne and James Stewart—and one who hasn't—Reagan.

"One of my great regrets is that I was never directed by John Ford," said Reagan, who officiated at the showing of Directed by John Ford. The film is a documentary directed by Peter Bogdanovich, the hottest new director around because of his two current films, "The Last Picture Show. The Ford film, which has appeared in New York and San Francisco film festivals, was sponsored by the American Film Institute.

The 76-year-old Ford, considered by most critics the greatest director in American films and the only one to win four Academy Awards, rarely appears in public, especially since a stroke this last year. But Ford came to the showing, walking with the aid of a cane.

Directed by John Ford, which is designed for showings to film students, features reminisences by Wayne, Stewart and Henry Fonda, plus an interview with Ford.

Hours Reduced

Previously, visitors were allowed until 8 p.m., but this proved disturbing to the babies and young children. Except for the discretion of the nurse in charge, visitors will be required to leave at 7 p.m.

At the same time, children under 12 will not be permitted to visit the floor at any time.

Hastings Holds Warden's Banquet

Fewer speeches and more entertainment is the new trend for the annual Hastings county warden's banquet.

Such was the order of procedure at the Royal Canadian Legion Hall on Pinnacle Street Friday night when Warden Kenneth G. Smith of Elzevir township was host to more than 300 county councillors and their wives, along with other invited guests.

Formal proceedings were kept to a "minimum consisting of the warden's address of welcome, recognition of past wardens and a toast to the guests.

County Clerk - Administrator Carl Bateman was chairman for the evening's program.

William C. West of Stirling who headed county council back in 1936, was the oldest warden attending the banquet. Warden Smith and Mrs. Smith received a set of matched luggage from members of county council — as well other gifts from family members and friends.

An hour of professional entertainment from Toronto rounded out the evening's program.

Gump Keeps Minnesota At Head of NHL Pack

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the main reasons Minnesota North Stars are on top of the National Hockey League's West Division standings is veteran goaltender Gump Worsley.

The 43-year-old goaltender, who claims to be the second-oldest player active in the NHL, displayed all the style of a rookie Friday as the North Stars edged California Golden Seals 2- in the NHL's only game.

The win moved the North Stars into sole possession of first place in the West Division, two points ahead of Chicago Black Hawks, who have 31 points.

In tonight's action, the North Stars visit Los Angeles Kings, Chicago meets the Maple Leafs in Toronto, Montreal Canadiens play host to Pittsburgh Penguins, Buffalo Sabres are at Vancouver Canucks, New York Rangers invade Detroit to play the Red Wings and St. Louis Blues are at home to Boston Bruins.

Montreal travels to Detroit Sunday., Toronto visits Chicago, Philadelp Flyers play host to the Rangers and the Sabres visit the Golden SEALS.

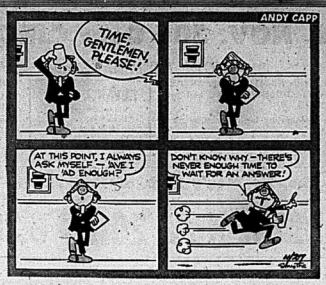
"I am not the old man," Worsley said during training camp last fall. "Maybe in seniority, but (Toronto's) Jacques Plante is a month older than I am."

In Oakland Friday Worsley didn't act his age, kicking out all but one of the 35 shots the Seals drove his way.

The Seals, showing a bit more respectability than last season when they sank to the bottom of the West Division, held the surging North Stars to scoreless first-period tie.

But J-P. Parise banged in a rebound late in the second period to give the North Stars the lead, then Murray Oliver connected on his own rebound about three minutes later with what proved to be to the winner.

But Wayne Carleton scored his fourth goal of the season to spoil Worsley's bid for his fourth shutout.



Further proof that Worsley and Cesare Maniago are the key to Minnesota's success is that the North Stars, with Chicago, have the lowest goal-against total in the NHL.—30

In training camp, Worsley gave a slight hint that this season may be his last.

"I'm still playing it year by year because when you sign a one-year contract you play one year at a time," he said at the time. "Maybe this will be my last year, we'll just have to wait and see."

Clark, Carr Help Bullets

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A national television audience watched Bob Lanier pour in a career-high 40 points but there's little doubt his Baltimore Bullets teammates were just about as happy with the 30 Austin Carr scored.

Clark's output, plus 26 by Jack Marin, led the Bullets to a 118-108 victory over Atlanta Hawks Friday and, several hours later, Baltimore bounded into first place in the National Basketball Association's Central Division as the Carr-led Cleveland Cavaliers whipped Cincinnati Royals 128-114.

In Friday night's other NBA games, New York Knicks won their sixth in a row and closed within a game of Atlantic Division-leading Boston Celtics with a 104-89 triumph, Milwaukee Bucks ripped Portland Trailblazers 130-105, Chicago Bulls clobbered Golden State Warriors 121-89 and Los Angeles Lakers beat Detroit Pistons 133-113.

In American Basketball Association play, Dallas beat New York Nets 108-101, Indiana topped Denver 118-96, Utah turned back Carolina 124-115 and the Floridians edged Memphis 108-104.

The victories by Baltimore and Cleveland squeezed even more the already terrific-tight Central Division with the Bullets leading the Royals by half a game, the Cavs by 2½ and the Hawks by three—and not one of the clubs has a winning record. Baltimore's mark is 9-12.

The Lakers continued to win with their 13th straight as Wilt Chamberlain scored 31 points and had 31 rebounds and Jerry West tallied 25 points and had 18 assists. The Pistons'

Knudson Trails Leader

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. (AP) — Toronto's George Knudson tapped in four 20-foot putts Friday to close with 66, the best round of the day, and a 140 total after two rounds of the $110,000 Heritage Golf Classic.

But Knudson's hot putting still left him two strokes back of the leader, Mac McLendon, who had a 67 Friday for a 36-hole total of 138 at the par-71, 6,655-yard Harbour Town course.

Bob Lunn stroked a 68 for 139, one back of McLendon in the chase for the $22,000 first prize.

Hale Irwin followed the trio with 141 after his 73. Arnold Palmer, 71, Rod Curl, 72, Frank Beard, 68, and Gay Brewer, 69, were bunched together with 143s.

Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg, the only other Canadian entered, shot his second consecutive 78 for a 36-hole total of 156, not enough to make the cut of 152.

McLendon got off to a speakling start and held it. The four-year veteran of the tour birdied the first hole, parred the second, scored an eagle two on the third when he holed a 12-yard sand wedge and birdied the fourth.

"When you get off to a start like that on a course like this, it's difficult not to play conservatively," McLendon said. "I felt real proud of myself."

McLendon has won only $17,002 this season and ranks out of the first 100 money winners.

Calgary Coach

Duncan Stresses Basics

VANCOUVER (CP) — Coach Jim Duncan says he is a football fundamentalist who does not like the "him-to-you-to-me sort of play."

But Friday he had his Calgary Stampeders throwing a little razzle-dazzle into their practice routine at Empire Stadium.

Only play was a pass from quarterback Jerry Keeling to fullback Hugh McKinnis, who then made a left-handed toss down the field.

Another was a pass to halfback Jessie Mims who started to run around the end before turning and firing the ball back to Keeling.

Duncan avoided saying whether the plays would be in the plans for Sunday's Grey Cup game against Toronto Argonauts or whether they were just something to worry the opposition.

McKinnis has thrown the ball before, Duncan said, and that play could just be a "secret weapon."

The Stampeders practised in pouring rain Friday and Duncan said after three days on the artificial turf they are prepared.

"We need to get going to the game now. They're ready to play."

Quarterback Keeling said the team's running game is in fine shape but the constant rainy weather has made it "hard to get the passing game down."

After the first two practices the club seemed to have only one ball that wasn't waterlogged and after 15 minutes it became soaked also.

One of the players said making a pass was "like throwing a basketball."

And the receivers were letting receptions slip through their fingers.

Keeling said that regardless of the weather he will be able to set up for passes better than last year on the slippery Toronto field where Calgary lost 23-10 to Montreal in the Grey Cup.

He is the kind of quarterback who throws not only with his arms and shoulder but likes to get a little spring out of his legs during delivery.

The slippery Toronto gridiron "hurt me a lot . . . I just couldn't handle it."

Argo Veteran Anxious

VANCOUVER (CP) — Danny Nykoluk sounds almost as though he has misgivings about coming out of retirement to help Toronto Argonauts in their bid for the Grey Cup.

The Argos meet Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League championship here Sunday with Nykoluk back at the offensive tackle spot from which he retired at the end of the 1970 season.

The game is 1:30 p.m. PST (4:30 p.m. EST) on the artificial turf at Empire Stadium. A crowd of 34,484 fans is expected, including Governor-General Roland Michener.

The game will be televised across the country on both the CBC and CTV networks and CBC radio will carry play-by-play commentary on its national, international and armed services networks.

The 37-year-old Nykoluk, a sales representative for a lumber company, was coaxed out of retirement by coach Cal Murphy when rookie John Trainor suffered a knee injury late in the season.

Nukoluk heeded Cahill's call for help, played the last game of the regular schedule and the two Eastern Football Conference final playoff games against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

Now he is in his first Grey Cup game over 16 seasons with Argos. But the prospect of fulfilling one of his life-long ambitions by helping win the cup isn't enough to overcome the pressures Nykoluk feels.

"I was pretty well set before this came up," Nykoluk said of the recall from Cahill.

"I have my job, I had a little radio show after the football games and I was coaching the line up at York University.

"I had enough to do and I had no thought of coming back to the game. But then Leo calls me up and he says he needs me and he thinks I can help the team.

"Well, I had all those other things going for me, but I figured if the coach is in trouble, I'll see if I can help out."

Rosewall World Champion

DALLA (AP) — Ken Rosewall, a 37-year-old Australian, prevailed in two crucial tie breaker situations Friday to defeat his favored fellow-countryman, Rod Laver, and capture the $50,000 World Championship of Tennis, the largest purse in the sports' history.

Rosewall won 6-4, 1-6, 7-6, 7-6 in the final before about 7,000 spectators.

It was a stunning defeat for the 23-year-old Laver, who had whipped Rosewall eight of the last nine times they had met.

Rosewall won the best-of-12-points tie-breaker in the third set, 7-3.

In the fourth set, with the games tied 6-6, he won the tie-breaker 7-4.

Laver, who has made more than $1 million playing professional tennis, capured the $30,000 second-place money.

We improve with age.

We like to think of ourselves as the Chateau Lafite-Rothschild of the automotive world.
We keep getting better every year.
Since 1952, we've improved our little car over 2,300 times.
Last year we gave it a more powerful engine and nearly twice the luggage space it had before.
This year we added 29 more improvements.
We found a way to keep engine noise down.
We found a way to make it run better in cold weather.
And we found a way to make it run even smoother in cold, hot or whatever weather you have in mind.
And so it goes on.
Since '52, we've made over a thousand body and chassis improvements.
Since '30, we've made over a thousand engine and transmission improvements.
And the reason for all this progress?
Since '52, we've spent absolutely no time making silly styling changes.
What you see, once again, is what you get.

Hornets Unleash Stinging Attack In 9-1 Senior Win Over Quintes

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Staff

Watching last night's OHA Senior 'A' hockey game was very much like banging your head against a cement wall. It felt good, when you stopped.

To turn a long, sad story into a short sad story — The Belleville Quintes played very sadly. The Galt Hornets played very well. The score was 9-1 in Galt's favor. It was a pretty fair indication of the play.

Certainly, you can't fault a team for losing to the first place Hornets. They have a low Hockey team. However, as the Quintes proved on the 24th of October, 1971, Galt can be had. On that date they landed the Hornets a 5-2 loss. Last night they handed them the puck and two gift points in the league standings.

An almost total lack of physical punishment by the home team allowed the potent Galt offence to frenchied with disastrous results. The visitors pumped a total of 45 shots at a belaguered Steve Rexe and third period replacement Ron Jury.

At the other end of the rink Sonny Pennington was called on only 24 times as the Galt netminder lowered his league leading average to a stingy 2.32 goals per game.

Rexe did a creditable job filling in at Ralph Plane's spot after the Quintes captain, along with Steve Hunt of Galt, had collected 10 minutes in penalties for a third period bout. Lineomen moved in quickly to prevent the pair from squaring off, but Plane did manage to land a looping left hand as the pair exchanged pleasantries over the official's shoulders. They received high sticking minor, fighting majors and misconducts for their efforts.

Steve Rexe left the game after being struck in the chest with a shot during Galt's seventh scoring play with Jury taking over for the final 12 minutes and 36 seconds. Neither netminder appeared exceptionally sharp, although both were forced to carry a heavy work load.

Bruce Reier and Bill Hway each came up with a hat trick performance for Galt, which lead 1-0 after one period and 5-0 after 40 minutes of play. Other scorers for the Hornets included Skeeter Teal, a standout performer all night, George Weston and Moe Geland.

Dave Jones, playing his second game on defence and Mike Rexe during his brief third period stint gave possibly the best performances for the home team.

The Quintes get a chance to improve upon their Friday efforts when they take on the Kingston Aces in an 8 p.m. bout tonight at the Belleville Memorial Arena. Kingston, which trails Belleville by two points will be attempting to avenge Tuesday's 4-1 loss to the Quintes.

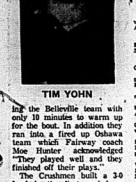
Fending For Himself

Belleville goalie Steve Rexe prepares to fend off Galt's Moe Galand in last night's OHA Senior A hockey game at the Memorial Arena, while teammate Greg Marchen moves in to provide some support. Rexe gained plenty of experience turning aside Hornet shots as he and substitute Ron Jury combined for a total of 36 saves. Despite their efforts, Galt still managed to skate off with a lopsided 9-1 win over the Quinters.



Hot Crashmen Club Cold Fairways

The Oshawa Crushmen were hot. The Belleville Fairways weren't even warmed up and the cold fact was that Oshawa administered a 9-3 pasting in their Eastern Ontario Junior B visitors.

The Fairways bus arrived in Oshawa at 7.40 for the scheduled 8 p.m. game, leaving Belleville at 4 p.m.

Sirko and John Thaler, while Belleville could manage only one shot on net for the entire 20 minutes.

The Fairways did liven up somewhat in the final period but Oshawa goalie Lou Moore, ing the Belleville team with only 18 minutes to warm up for the bout. In addition they ran into a fired up Oshawa team which Fairway coach Moe Hunter acknowledged "They played well and they finished off their play."

TIM YOHN

The Crushmen built a 3-0 lead in the first period on goals by Chris Bone, Vic Tim Yohn counted Belleville's only goal in that period cashing in a rebound from Bill Woodward and Jeff Howard.

One bright light for the losers was right winger Dave Smith. "Dave played one heckuva' game for us. He was going both ways all night," lauded Hunter.

Bob Moore, called up from the Blake Kerr Imperial midgets for backup strength replaced starting goalie Bob Harrison at 7.31 of the first period, allowing the last two Oshawa goals. "Bob was good enough to make the trip with us, so with the score like it was I wanted to give him some work." explained the Belleville coach of his goalie switch. The Fairway's other netminder, Bill Cormier, is expected to be out of action for another week with a bruised ankle.

The next game for the Fairways will be Tuesday night when they travel to Kingston to meet the Frontenacs.

49'ers Get Their Chance

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

San Francisco 49'ers have a chance Sunday to regain first place in the National Conference West while the Washington Redskins must regain their momentum in the East to have a shot at the playoffs.

The 49ers, who visit New York Jets—and may run into Joe Namath—moved into a tie with Los Angeles Rams for the divisional lead Thursday, when the Rams fell to Dallas Cowboys 28-21.

And with their victory, the Cowboys opened a one-game lead over the faltering Skins, who face Philadelphia Eagles Sunday and have won only one of five games since capturing their first five outings of the season.

Sunday's other National Football League games have Baltimore Colts against Oakland Raiders, Atlanta Falcons against Minnesota Vikings, New Orleans Saints against Green Bay Packers at Milwaukee, Denver Broncos against Pittsburgh Steelers, Cleveland Browns against Houston Oilers, New England Patriots against Buffalo Bills, St. Louis Cardinals against New York Giants, San Diego Chargers against Cincinnati Bengals and, in Monday night's nationally televised game, Chicago Bears against Miami Dolphins.

The Raiders' margin over Kansas City in the American Conference West widened to a full game as the Chiefs bowed 32-21 to Detroit Lions in the other Thanksgiving Day clash.

Can't Meet Demand

HAMILTON (CP) — Sewing schools can't keep pace with the demand for instruction in the Hamilton area, Clifford Howell of the local adult education department said the city board of education's adult program is operating 36 classes in dressmaking and related sewing activities. To tal enrolment is 1,265 and "we have to turn people away," Howell says.

Indian Lawyer Called Chretien's Mouthpiece

CALGARY (CP) — Indian leader Harold Cardinal said yesterday William Wuttunee is a mouthpiece for Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien and has been used to back on his own people to discredit the Indian Association of Alberta and Canadian Indians.

Mr. Cardinal, president of the Alberta association, was replying to charges by Mr. Wuttunee, an Indian, that federal funds were being "fawned" on Indian leaders and are not going to the right places.

"Some Indian executives are using these funds to exploit their own people while living high themselves," Mr. Wuttunee, a Calgary lawyer, said Friday in an interview.

Mr. Wuttunee has written a book titled Ruffled Feathers which criticizes Indian reliance on the reservation system, promoted treaties and "the feather fakery of the Red Power advocates."

Mr. Cardinal said he has proof that Mr. Wuttunee was paid $300 a day in 1969 by the federal government "to help in the fight against the government's white paper on Indian affairs . . . said Mr. Wuttunee.

Mr. Cardinal, who returned from Ottawa Friday, said in that city earlier in the day that Mr. Wuttunee's figures about his income are "out of whack."

He said the salary figure is correct but he doesn't receive $12,000 for expenses. Any travel expenses or other money received from organizations he speaks to were given to the association.

Mr. Cardinal had been in Ottawa as a witness in hearings by the Commons Indian affairs committee investigating recent Indian student boycotts in northeastern Alberta.

Ulster Gunmen Kill 3

LONDONDERRY (AP) — Guerrilla gunmen killed three persons and bombed and burned buildings at 11 different places in Northern Ireland today in what appeared to be a major terrorist offensive.

A British soldier was shot dead by a sniper in the Roman Catholic Falls Road area of Belfast as he was preparing to search the area for terrorists.

Two civilians, one of them an officer, were killed in a burst of sub-machine-gun fire at the Kilfennan checkpoint near Newry on the main Belfast-Dublin road.

In Londonderry, British troops battled a mob of looters after a bomb blast set the doors and windows of a downtown store.

For half an hour the crowd buried rocks and bottles at soldiers trying to push them back into Bogside, Londonderry's Catholic quarter.

Army and police sources said the new offensive was believed the work of a new, third terrorist wing, which in turn is more extremist than the new official wing.

All three IRA factions want to wrest Northern Ireland from British control and unite it with the Irish Republic to the south.

The Londonderry bomb was one of six which hit the city during the night. An earlier bombing was in Belfast, Northern Ireland's capital, wrecked by a police station, wounding 13 persons.

The extent of the bombing brought speculation that the IRA has brought in reinforcements to press its fight for an end to Ireland's partition.

China Critical Of Soviet Call For Arms Talks

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — China has clashed with the Soviet Union for the second time in the UN and wound up alongside the U.S. in rejecting a Kremlin call for a world disarmament conference.

The future of the conference is so uncertain that when the 131-country General Assembly finished debate on it Friday night, no immediate agreement was reached on when to vote on the proposal.

Chinese Ambassador Chirenjen H. Phillips asked that the voting be postponed to permit consultations toward a new resolution that would forward the issue to the assembly's fall 1972 session. Soviet delegate Chiao Kuan-hua, following up his earlier proposal that the resolution not be put to the vote, said that he was, China would not participate in it.

Despite this, Soviet Ambassador Jacob A. Malik announced acceptance of some suggestions for amendment of the resolution and expressed hope that it would be "supported and approved by the General Assembly."

Making his final speech for the resolution, Malik said anybody who claimed it was not clear was China had done Wednesday—"is trying to delay or complicate the convening of the conference."

Sharp Recalls Luddites

Quebec's Violence Likened To England's Labor Revolts

TORONTO (CP) — Finance Minister Mitchell Sharp, decrying the violence that erupted in Quebec last year, said Friday night those outbursts are comparable to labor disorders in old England in the last century.

He referred specifically to the Luddites, rioting workers who played cottage weavers in the English Midlands, who destroyed their displacement at the order of things by wrecking spinning and weaving machines.

"It is reasonable to assume that in their day the Luddites represented a real fear of change, the extreme element that always appears at times of uncertainty and disruption of accepted ideas," Mr. Sharp said.

Mr. Sharp was opening a series of speeches and seminars on the relationship between Canada and Quebec.

"I suggest to you that much of the violence that now so deeply troubles Western society is caused by new bands of Luddites, again an extreme element that betrays a basic malaise in our society."

He said the violence in Quebec over the last decade, culminating in the October crisis year with kidnappings and the murder of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte is not basically separatist.

"It is an extreme distortion of an essential dissatisfaction with the terms of our life, felt for good reasons, more deeply in Quebec than in other parts of Canada."

At the same time, he said, violence must be controlled "with the use of reasonable force if necessary" and both the Federal government and the Province of Liberation du Quebec "nothing more nor less than criminal."

However, Mr. Sharp also said that without Quebec "there is no Canada.

"What would be left would not be Canada. Would it be Canada without the Gulf of St.-Lawrence, without Montreal, without most of its French-speaking population?"

TV Networks Warned About Commercials Aimed at Children

A Commons debate on children's advertising was timed to coincide with the advent of the commercial Christmas season and hard-sell toy advertising.

James A. McGrath (PC—St. John's East), terming commercials "sadly misleading," said of the effect on children:

"Is it any wonder they grow up deeply suspicious of a society that lies for profit?"

Meanwhile, the massive tax-change bill continued to make slow progress in the House and elected members and Senators wondered whether they will be home for Christmas.

Party House leaders Monday will try to negotiate a method of handling the bill, which already has taken up 36 days of debating time.

However, the highlight of the day was the debate on Mr. McGrath's public bill, which would put children's advertising under regulation of Broadcasting Act.

The Newfoundland MP, a father of six and his party's consumer affairs critic, recommended a full parliamentary investigation into the field, followed by stiff legislation.

Children were being subjected to persuasive commercials that invited them to eat gobs like candy, or to eat sugary foods as if diet was a mere caprice.

Gordon Allen (PC—Parry Sound-Muskoka) added breakfast cereals that had little or no nutritional value to the list.

And Grace MacInnis (NDP—Vancouver-Kingsway) said voluntary codes of ethics adopted by the networks are too vague to relied upon.

Mr. McGraw suggested that Oct. 13 code of ethics adopted by the Canadian Association of Broadcasters should be incorporated into law, thus eliminating any temptation to put profit before conscience.

He recalled that Consumer Affairs Minister Ron Basford, who is critical about voluntary codes, had warned that the network would be watched closely to insure compliance with their stated ethics.

The bill was talked out without a vote.

Liberals Lloyd Francis (Ottawa West) and Maurice Foster (Algoma) agreed commercials often exaggerate.

Mr. Francis, father of three, said consumer complaints to federal officials reach a peak just before Christmas.

The complaints specified advertising's exaggeration of the dimensions of toys, the speed at which they run, and their accessories.

Nevertheless, Mr. Francis said, advertising is a fact of life and "it would be unwise to try to insulate a child from it completely."

Mr. Foster said restrictions on advertising could mean cancellations of children's TV shows.

The one-hour debate was the highlight of a day in which the Commons also approved in more of the 333 sections of the government's tax-change bill.

However, only 85 sections have been approved so far, with the Jan. 1 target for passage approaching and the more substantial and controversial parts have made little headway.

The government is negotiating with the opposition on a Conservative offer to help speed passage by Jan. 1 if the measures they regard as controversial are left over until next year.

This would mean passage of popular parts of the bill—tax reductions and increased exemptions—and a layover of more substantial parts, such as taxation of capital gains.

New Democrats and Social Credit, who have other bones to pick with the bill, have been reserved about the Conservative proposal.

And the government, by eyeing it warily, its position would weaken if the popular sections were passed and those the Conservatives oppose held over.

Party House leaders are expected to discuss the issue Monday when Government House Leader Allan MacEachen returns from his riding.

The move to split the bill was promoted by Marcel Lambert (PC—Edmonton West), who argued that even some government MPs don't understand some provisions.

The Senate would want to make amendments and couldn't be expected to handle the bill on Christmas eve.

And some provincial premiers and finance ministers wanted passage held off, he said.

The 10 sections approved Friday were the first to get assent in nine days, but for the most part they were routine, simply maintaining the present law on taxation of insurance companies, banks and railways.

What the Stars Say

By CONSTELLA

Aries (March 21-April 19). Partners seem to want no part of either advice or assistance. Forcing them to accept either will only lead to greater animosity. Leave 'em alone.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). As much as you hate to rush into things, a sudden emergency will demand quick, decisive steps. Refusing to act is about the worst way of meeting the challenge.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). If partners don't take to your first response, be ready to give them another set of answers right away. Your ability to figure out exactly what they want to hear is an asset.

Cancer (June 22-July 22). There'll be one issue today that you'll refuse to haggle about, surprising kin by coming straight to the point. If they don't particularly care for your viewpoint, that's just too bad.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 23). Leave well enough alone by not going into detail about aims and objectives of a private nature. Friends are quite pleased with your goals, but they'll turn thumbs down on your methods.

Virgo (Aug. 24-Sept. 22). Having some "mad money" tucked away can be your ticket to freedom when a social engagement turns into a bore. If you leave with the crowd, you'll probably return alone.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22). You'll put a quick end to the myth of the co-operative Libran by raising objections to anything lover ones propose. Quit the kid stuff and stop giving everyone a hard time.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21). Your first reaction to a family dilemma this afternoon is to point the finger of blame at your mate. Tracing events back, though, will prove you started the whole thing.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). Friends who cancel visits the minute something better comes along are best dropped quickly. They've only been dropping by when nothing else is going on.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). The price paid for having the last word in an argument may be a permanent split with a friend. Try to leave an opening for some sort of reconciliation.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). You can miss out on some high fun this afternoon if you haven't gotten the day's duties out of the way. Friends won't be able to stall until you're ready to go.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20). Cash, valuables should be protected from sudden losses. Light-fingered strangers aren't the only type to watch out for—your own carelessness is a factor, too.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY—Now comes a year to reap exactly what you've sown in your life up to now. Any selfish flaws in character had best be conquered by May to avoid a personal defeat. Be more loving.

Aries (March 21-April 19). Though praise and power help to convince you that you've gained a lot of ground, it's usually only money that really impresses. Raises are very possible.

Taurus (April 20-May 20). You can be flattered today when someone asks your opinion on a matter of taste or beauty. You have an excellent eye for choosing what will be in good taste.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). Your small pile of savings is slowly but surely growing. Don't bother to wonder what you'll finally spend it on — something fancy will catch your eye.

Cancer (June 22 - July 22). Your days would be so much better if partners were always in the loving, uncritical mood that strikes them now. Tell dear ones how much prettier they look when they smile.

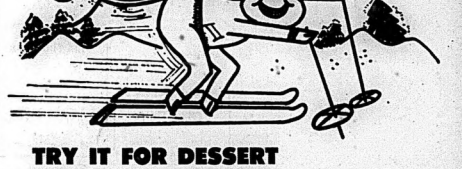
Leo (July 23-Aug. 22). There's much to be said for spending your hours at a job you really enjoy. Not only does time fly, but clear and creative ideas can earn you surprise honors.

Virgo (Aug. 23 - Sept. 22). Though a bit of glamor and excitement is always nice in small doses, Virgos generally prefer the old-fashioned hand-holding type of romance. Passionate flings are too hard to take.

Libra (Sept. 23 - Oct. 22). Like a jewel in a fine setting, you not only need to look your best, but your surroundings must mirror your image. Home quarters can be due now for fixing up.

Scorpio (Oct. 23 - Nov. 21). You'll attract more support with your words than criticism today. Partners have lately been too jumpy for your fault-finding, so look hard for something to praise them for.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21). You may be the first one to find an easy solution to meeting all the bills and expenses of the holiday season. Overtime with extra pay, or moonlighting appears as an answer.



Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19). It looks like it'll be much easier this year for you to sincerely join in the festive spirit of the season. Those who love you make a big point of showing their affection.

Aquarius (Jan. 20 - Feb. 18). While many may be picking up the pieces afte ra romantic fiasco, there may be a new face on the social scene to help you forget. Companionship's better than love for now.

Pisces (Feb. 19 - March 20). There's every reason to feel thankful that you're able to regain anything that was lost through careless circumstances earlier this month. You can even surpass your earlier position.

TODAY'S BIRTHDAY — Don't be so smug about avoiding a brush with disaster this fall. Unless many of your one-sided attitudes are changed, the same partnership confrontations will be reenacted next spring.

Dacca Is Calm Though Troops Poised Nearby

DACCA, East Pakistan (AP) — Military commanders say 80,000 Indian troops are poised on the borders of East Pakistan, but the people of this steamy Ganges provincial capital seem unperturbed.

A few slit trenches have been dug in the soft earth sidewalks as precautions against air attack. Some shops have taped windows.

Pakistan Airlines has begun painting its planes camouflage colors. But one plane took off Friday with the front half camouflaged and the rear end the usual green and white.

The army has sandbagged anti-aircraft positions on rooftops near the airport. Rolls of barbed wire and oil drums block the road to the heavily-defended military headquarters.

A one-day curfew has been lifted and no blackout precautions have been taken since a trial run earlier in the week.

The city is lit up at night but the streets are deserted except for army patrols.

But beneath the outward calm, undercurrents of fear were noticeable.

"There's going to be a bloodbath in the next two weeks," said a veteran diplomat. "I'd get out if I were you."

Most of the estimated 300 foreigners still remaining in Dacca have one fear; that the airport will be shut by enemy shelling and planes will no longer fly out. Roads to the port of Chittagong, and the Indian borders are virtually impassable.

The rebel Mukti Bahini, who the army says number 30,000, have blown almost all bridges. The roads are mined as well.

"You're safe if you stick to the Pukka roads," Brig. G.M. B. Siddiqui, army chief of staff, said. "Of course, there are risks."

A Pukka road is one that is paved and there are not many of those.

Americans Swarming To Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Immigration to Canada is running 17 per cent behind 1970 figures although trend-bucking Americans continue to arrive in record numbers.

Nine-month statistics released from the United States compared with 9,060 from England, usually the leading source of immigrants.

In the July-September quarter, almost 7,000 Americans entered Canada as landed immigrants, more than double the number from England.

Meanwhile, over-all nine-month figures list 94,005 arrivals compared with 113,232 in the same period of 1970. The total for last year was 147,713 but it appears unlikely to pass 125,000 this year — which would be the lowest annual total since 1961 when Canada was pulling out of a recession.

Southeast Asia Lands Desire Neutrality

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (Reuter) — The five member states of the Association of Southeast Asian Nations signed today an agreement on peace and neutrality but fell short of declaring the region a zone of peace and neutrality.

But today's declaration merely affirms: "The neutralization of Southeast Asia is a desirable objective and that we should explore ways and means of bringing about its realization."

It added: "Indonesia, Malaysia, the Philippines, Singapore and Thailand are determined to exert initially necessary efforts to secure the recognition of, and respect for, Southeast Asia as a zone of peace, freedom and neutrality, free from any form or manner of interference by outside powers."

Rose Convicted Of Kidnapping

MONTREAL (CP) — The trial of Paul Rose for the October, 1970 kidnapping of former Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte ended Friday in a guilty verdict and protests of irregularities.

Mr. Justice Fernand Legault of Court of Queen's Bench set sentencing for next Tuesday after the 12-man jury returned from 3½ hours of deliberation with a verdict. Maximum sentence on the kidnap charge is life imprisonment.

The case went to the jurors without a defence case or summation from Rose, barred from the courtroom for more than a week for his outburst and failure to rise when Mr. Justice Legault entered the chambers.

The Judge's refusal to allow Rose, who conducted his own defence back into court to present his case would be the strongest of 25 grounds for an appeal to be launched "as soon as possible," Rose's legal adviser, Jean-Serve Masse said after the verdict was announced.

"That trial was the largest collection of illegalities I have ever seen," Mr. Masse told reporters outside the courtroom.

Opening lead—six of spades.

Here is an example of the unusual lengths to which one can go to stop the dangerous opponent from taking the lead.

Assume you're declarer and West leads a trump. If you follow the line of least resistance, you draw two rounds trumps, lead the ten of diamonds and finesse. East wins with the king, returns the jack of clubs, and when the dust has lifted you are down one.

But now let's suppose you decide at the start to take every possible precaution to prevent East from taking the lead and firing a club back through your king. If so, you win the trump lead in dummy, return a low heart and, after East follows low, play the nine

As expected, West wins and, let's say, returns a diamond. In line with your plan to avoid East, the dangerous opponent, you go up with the ace, play a heart to the king, and enter dummy with a trump.

With both opponents following suit, the contract is now a certainty. You cash the ace of hearts, discarding your last diamond, and lead the queen from dummy, not caring much where the monarch is located.

You plan to discard a club if East follows low on the diamond — and this play assures you of ten tricks, whether or not West has the king.

And if East covers the queen with the king, which he may well do in the actual case, you are equally sure of the outcome. You ruff, cross to dummy with a trump, and discard two clubs on the ♥ J 9 of diamonds. You not only make the contract, but also an overtrick—all as a result of the exceptional care you exercised at trick two to stop East from taking the lead.

Rectocele Makes Emptying Of Bowel Very Difficult

By G.C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have hoped someone would ask about rectocele, but I haven't seen it discussed. Should I be on some kind of diet? Does an operation give any relief?—Mrs. W.C.K.

True, there are more inquiries about cystocele (SIS-toh-seal) but rectocele is a rather prevalent problem, too.

Cystocele is a sagging of the urinary bladder—it tends to sag toward or into the vaginal canal as a result of stretching and weakening of the fibrous tissues which support the bladder and hold it in place.

The result of cystocele is a tendency of the urine to "puddle," rather than emptying completely, and that in turn is an invitation for bladder infections to start. The solution, instead of merely combatting infection with drugs, is to move the bladder back into proper position surgically, so it will stay up completely.

A similar, and sometimes companion, condition is rectocele, with the wall of the rectum bulging forward. It is possible to have either condition or both. Tissue damage resulting from childbirth is the common cause for both of them.

With rectocele, the consequence is difficulty in complete emptying of bowel material, and a person may mistakenly think that the trouble is "constipation" or "colitis."

Diet will not correct the condition, cannot strengthen or tighten the weakened supporting tissues, but surgery can.

So far as diet is concerned, the one thing to keep in mind is to have sufficient bulk to avoid hard stool or impaction of material in the area. Adequate fruit and vegetables will help provide bulk, but bulk-producers also are readily available to keep the stool soft.

Just as with cystocele, surgery to repair the loosened supportive tissues is the permanent way of correcting rectocele.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Have recently purchased a juicer and would like to know if one bag of carrots a day is too much. (Makes about a glass.) Have had no effects in 10 days.—Mrs. M.G.T.

I'm not much convinced that juices will perform the miracles some folks claim for them. I doubt if you need (or can stand a good use of) that much carrot juice. If in time, your skin starts to have a yellowish tinge, it will be a warning that you've been getting too much. On the other hand, I don't see any special danger if you insist on drinking it for the time being.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am allergic to penicillin and sulfa. Should I wear or carry some sort of tag? If so, where can it be obtained.

Also, I have read that pinworms occasionally invade the female sex organs. If so, what would the symptoms be?—M.R.

First question: It would be wise, if, for example, you were knocked unconscious in an accident, how else would anyone know you were sensitive to these frequently-used drugs? Medic Alert is a non-profit group handling such tags; you also can find them in some jewelry or other stores. Medic Alert's address is merely Turlock, Calif. 95380.

Second question: It's possible, particularly in little girls. Itching and a discharge are the main symptoms, but they can be from entirely different causes, of course. If there is any suspicion of pinworms, that can be readily confirmed.

Boots Formed to Feet, Comfortable, Safe

Technology and sophistication are becoming the bywords of life and one sport that they are having a great impact on is skiing.

Wooden skis and leather boots are being rapidly replaced by plastic goods that "stand the wear and tear and retain their good looks longer," says Dale Hall, manager of Leslie's Ski Den. "Ski enthusiasts are becoming perfectionists in both the way they ski and the way they look."

Manufacturers realizing the shift in attitudes toward appearance, have designed the total look in ski fashion. Now available are color co-ordinated clothes and skis with matching patterns on the ski and jacket.

The big change has been the extensive use of polyurethane in ski equipment. This space-age plastic can resemble any material from the suppleness of leather to the hardness of wood.

Humanic, a company with a well known name in the ski industry, has in the past four years built ski boots with this material, and doing so has "revolutionized the ski boot industry".

Available in several colors, the boot is wrapped in a guard-shell of polyurethane.

"The highlight of this boot is not in the outside appearance, but in the foam-filled inner bladder," said Mr. Hall. "The boot, when sold, is moulded exactly to the shape of the customer's foot, ensuring a perfect fit."

The operation to foam the boots, takes about five minutes, and in this time a special compound is pressure-forced into the back of the boot and fills all the spaces around the customer's feet.

"The customer, standing on a special rack, assumes a correct ski position, and will feel a temperature rise as the chemical reaction takes place as the liquid turns to low consistency rubber," said Mr. Hall.

When the rubber is in the boot, a plug is screwed into the hole and the customer remains still for four minutes while the rubber completely sets.

"These boots are the greatest boon to come along in a long time for people with irregular feet," said Mr. Hall. "When the bladder in the boot is filled, it will form around bumps in the feet and make a perfectly comfortable fit."

The boots retail for about $110 for the lowest line and price can go up and up until you are spending $185 for the top of the line.

"With the fit, the skier should have perfect control over his skis and with the reduction of foot movement in the boot, there is more protection from sprained ankles," said Mr. Hall.

Snowmobiles Raise Land Use Questions

The advent of the snowmobile is raising new problems in deciding who should be using Ontario's public recreation lands, say planners at the department of lands and forests.

The department's parks and recreation areas branch has approved 85 provincial parks to snowmobilers this winter, and is looking for other ways to accommodate the sport, but planner Reine Reine says the department is also becoming aware of a conflict between snowmobiles and other winter use of parks.

The other uses, Mr. Irvine said, may include hiking, snowshoeing, cross-country skiing, overnight camping, or even bird-watching. But he said planning for those uses is hampered by a lack of information about them. Because most provincial parks are not staffed in winter, he said, the department has no way of knowing how many people are using parks for those non-mechanized activities.

"We really have little idea what lands recreationists use outside our existing summer park operations," Mr. Irvine said.

Mr. Irvine said the department recognizes the need for research to establish the demand for recreation space for non-mechanized use, but has not yet established a feasible method of gathering the research

In many cases, he said, no one knew that hikers, cross-country skiers and snowshoeing enthusiasts were using parks in winter until the snowmobile came. The first indication came, he said, from the number of complaints about noise, speed, or careless operation of the machines.

Planners, on the other hand, do have some information about the snowmobilers, Mr. Irvine said.

They know that there are more than 200,000 snowmobiles registered in Ontario, that the number is growing at a steady rate, and that 60 per cent of those snowmobiles are registered to residents of southern Ontario — people who usually do not have enough property of their own to test their machines and no ready access to nearby private or crown land for snowmobiling.

John Featherston, director of operations in the parks branch and the man who has worked directly on the development of facilities for snowmobilers, says those figures indicate there will probably be a growing pressure on the province to provide areas for snowmobiling.

This season, he says, the department will provide about 200 miles of marked trails and about 700 miles of unplowed park roads for snowmobiling in provincial parks.

Outside parks, the department last year opened about 200 miles of cross-country snowmobile trails on crown lands, Mr. Featherston says cross-country trails, more attractive to snowmobilers because they have more freedom to roam off the beaten track, will probably be increased by about 200 miles this season.

"But I don't think we will ever be able to accommodate all snowmobilers in all use areas," he said.

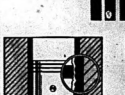
The cost of providing facilities for snowmobiles is a factor in the department's decisions also, Mr. Featherston said.

Park land in southern Ontario now costs about $1,000 an acre, he added. Within that land, a snowmobile trail costs about $500 a mile to develop and another $50 a mile to maintain each year.

Here the conflict between the snowmobiler, and the skier, hiker or snowshoe enthusiast becomes evident, he said.

A winter traveller operating under his own power may take a whole weekend to cover a 25-mile trail, Mr. Featherston said. The snowmobiler, however will cover the trail in a few hours and be back looking for somewhere else to go.

Mr. Featherston says the only answer is for snowmobilers to seek out, more privately-owned land where they may be allowed to enjoy their machines. He says he would like to see more commercial snowmobile parks operating near provincial parks, where families could enjoy the wilderness park on foot and have their snowmobiling fun away from the park area.



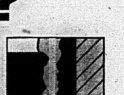
But, Mrs. Irvine said, the department can not encourage land owners, particularly in the valuable agricultural areas of southern and south-western Ontario, to open their lands to snowmobiling unless it can also tell them about the potential effect on the land and vegetation.

"And we just don't have the research to be able to tell them the potential damage the snowmobile might cause," he said.

Mr. Irvine says the whole question of planning for provincial parks is at a "turning point". Planners are turning away from Ontario's traditional concept of the park as a pure conservation area, and beginning to tackle the problem of providing recreation space for the growing urban population, most of which is centred in southern Ontario, far from most of the remaining open land in the province.

And the quarter of a million snowmobiles, more than half of them owned by residents of the urban south, will be a major factor in designing a year - round recreation system for Ontario, he says.

Polar organic ingredients?



1. When magnified thousands of times, you'll see that all metal surfaces have microscopic peaks and valleys.

2. High pressures create flash temperatures, heating metals and destroying regular oils.

3. Molecular attraction between the hot, bare metals causes them to seize. They weld together and tear. This is friction, the major cause of wear.

4. Bardahl's lubricants contain a unique Polarized formula of tough molecules which coat metals, neutralize friction, heat, wear.

Why Bardahl's "Magic Touch" lubrication works like no other oil

The high R.P.M.'s in your snowmobile engine cause friction and a great deal of heat, and heat causes engine wear. Bardahl's exclusive "secret formula" of polar organic ingredients reduces this friction and the extreme pressures generated by heat and high R.P.M.'s.

Bardahl's world famous "Magic Touch" polarization creates a tough lubricating film, or layer of molecules, which literally plates itself to the metal surfaces of the vital moving parts within your engine. This tough film cannot be squeezed out by extreme pressures, nor burned off by extreme temperatures which destroy ordinary oils. In effect, Bardahl VBA ensures a sustaining "stick-to-it-ive-ness" that no other snowmobile oil achieves.

And the lean 40:1 gas oil mix pioneered by Bardahl several years ago, gives your engine faster, surer, cold weather starts, greatly reduced spark plug fouling, and a more complete burn of both fuel and harmful carbon deposits.

For your convenience, Bardahl Snowmobile Oil is available in easy pouring, tear top, one shot 20 oz. cans, exactly right for your five gallon mixing tank, or in the familiar green plastic bottle. Buy it by the case.

Snowmobilers' Code of Ethics Proposed

Safety officials in Canada and the United States have proposed to respective governments a snowmobile code of ethics.

The safety committee is comprised of representatives of the federal and provincial departments of lands and forests, the United States Forest Service, Bureau of Outdoor Recreation and the United States Forest Service.

The code of ethics designed to encourage safe use of snowmobiles says:

I will be a good sportsman. I recognize that people judge all snowmobile owners by my actions. I will use my influence with other snowmobile owners to promote sportsmanlike conduct.

I will not litter trails or camping areas. I will not pollute streams or lakes.

I will not damage living trees, shrubs or other natural features.

I will respect other people's property and rights.

I will lend a helping hand when I see someone in distress.

I will make myself and my vehicle available to assist search and rescue parties.

I will not interfere with or harass hikers, skiers, snowshoers, ice fishermen, or other winter sportsmen. I will respect their rights to enjoy our recreation facilities.

I will know and obey all federal state and local rules regulating the operation of snowmobiles in areas where I use my vehicle. I will inform public officials when using public lands.

I will not harass wildlife. I will avoid areas posted for the protection or feeding of wildlife.

I will stay on marked trails or marked roads open to snowmobiles. I will avoid country travel unless specifically authorized.

It Pays to Prepare Yourself for Skiing

With the snow coming down, outdoorsy types are looking up to the slopes, waiting to get their first action on the skis they bought on sale during the summer.

"It's these beginners who think they are Jean-Claude Killy that break onto the slopes first and come off first with a broken ankle," said a spokesman for the YMCA.

For this reason, the YMCA and Leslie's Ski Den have started a ski-fitness program to prepare the novice to the expert for the rigors of the slopes.

The course has entered its second week but organizers invite anyone to attend the classes. The five week course costs $5.

"The biggest reason for injuries on the slopes is because our bodies aren't used to the tremendous strain put on them by the sport," said Dale Hall manager of the Ski Den. "By doing the right kind of exercises, we can prepare ourselves."

At Wednesday night's meeting (meetings are held each Wednesday night) Mr. Hall, loaded with equipment from the Ski Den, lectured the group on safety devices and spent much time on the importance of having the correct binding.

"If you fall at 35 miles an hour, you don't want a pair of five-foot skis tagging along," he said. "The safety bindings will eject your feet from the skis when undue stress is placed upon them, reducing the chances of sprains and breaks."

Mr. Hall also spent much time explaining. "The equipment must be matched to the proficiency of the skier."

This is the first phase of a total preparation program designed by the Cleveland Hall team.

After the five weeks, assuming there will be enough snow, the class will be taking to the slopes to be briefed on technique. Again classes will be flexible to the level of the skier.

The Y is negotiating with three ski clubs in the area, to determine which will best suit the needs of the group.

"We want to have a good slope, but also want to keep the price down so classes are accessible to all intersted," said Mr. Cleveland.

Always Check Ice Conditions

The Ontario Safety League urgently warns snowmobilers who have been using trails over ice-covered lakes not to take them for granted. Check ice conditions and depth frequently, in fact, every time you go out from now on is advisable. At the first sign of ice honeycombing or reducing in depth, forget about lake travel and stay with land trails. Rivers are especially dangerous as currents build up quickly and ice can become dangerously thin overnight.

Each body of water has its own danger areas. Only those who have seen "freeze-up" and "break-up" have an intimate and thorough knowledge of these insidious hazards. If you don't know don't take a chance.

Clubs Can Improve Image with Public

Formation of snowmobile clubs can effectively promote the cause of safety and build the public image of the sport says the International Snowmobile Industry Association.

Clubs can work with government and municipal authorities for the development of authorized trails, camp sites, and control of areas, says the association.

Three preliminary steps can be used to plan a snowmobile club.

● Talk to fellow snowmobile owners about forming a local club. Get their opinions and ideas. The dealers can give you the names of snowmobile owners in the area. Be sure almost all are contacted personally, by telephone or letter.

● Especially try to secure the support of key persons in the area, who are well known and who have the respect and confidence of the community.

● When you have secured the interest and support of a nucleus of persons of good standing in the community who are willing to take an active part in the development of a local club, get them all together for an informal planning meeting.

The association says at the formal planning meeting discussions should centre on the objectives of the club.

Some of the objectives include promotion of greater interest in safe use of snowmobiles, improvement of the public image of snowmobile users by educating and encouraging users in the proper, considerate, and courteous use of snowmobiles, and the promotion of organized snowmobile trips, rallies and competitions.

Once a club is formed the executive and members can plan activities on a year-round basis.

Ideas suggested by the association for the winter months include snowmobile trips for an afternoon outing or a weekend, picnics and cook-outs with cooking contests staged by the men, dual club events, ice fishing derbys, rallies and races.

Off-season events to keep club enthusiasm high include summer cook-outs, and pre-season clinics.

INCREASES SAFETY

"Tilt bed" trailers can be easily equipped with an inexpensive winch mechanism to afford maximum safety in loading. Simple as it may seem, never "drive" your snowmobile onto a tilt-bed trailer. Many serious accidents have resulted from driving "up and over" a trailer into the trunk of a car or the tailgate of a station wagon or pick-up truck.

RALLIES AND RACES

These are the most elaborate functions a club can stage. Great fun if planned for maximum participation of all sizes and types of snowmobiles. And good money raisers, too. And the club can have an annual all-round driver club trophy.

Options Add to Safety and Enjoyment

Safety officials warn that extra parts and equipment are necessary for safe and enjoyable snowmobile trips.

An extra drive-belt should be carried like a spare tire, plus spark plugs with the necessary tools for installation. This is basic equipment for even casual snowmobiling within ready reach of outside assistance. But for distant safaris in remote areas, the list is much longer.

Included on the list for longer trips are:

- a pair of snowshoes or skis for each passenger. This is just as necessary as life-jackets in a boat if stranded miles from the nearest snow-ploughed road.
- emergency fuel supply.
- light-weight block and tackle with 50 feet of ¾ inch nylon rope. This could mean the difference between abandoning your machine or continuing your trek if badly struck.
- topographical map of area to be travelled and compass.
- hand-axe, hunting knife, waterproof container of matches and a small pan or kettle.
- dehydrated emergency rations and some tea bags. Black tea is more energizing than coffee for most people. Always keep these in reserve for an emergency.
- a compact first aid kit.
- a small-sized, waterproof tarpaulin and space-type survival blanket.

ONE DRIVER — ONE PASSENGER

Snowmobiles are engineered and designed to carry one driver and one passenger. Overcrowding can cause safety hazards through dangling arms and legs. When ferrying tots, always position them in front of the driver so that you can keep your eye on them. And, never loan your machine to a stranger "for a quick spin". You could be responsible for his inexperience or recklessness!

Ice Conditions Critical to Snowmobilers

"Freeze-up" and "break-up" are the two times when ice takes its greatest toll. "Freeze-up" is with us, and the Ontario Safety League warns snowmobilers to use every caution before venturing out on freshly frozen lakes or rivers.

These cautions should include checking the thickness of the ice and obtaining information from knowledgeable, local authorities on areas which may be dangerous due to the fast currents or other causes. Remember, there is the weight of the machine as well as that of the passengers which can easily mount up to 500 or 600 pounds.

RESPECT OPEN SAPCES

Frozen lakes and rivers often afford wide open space for snowmobiling long before the first snowfall . . . but special skills and techniques must be learned through long experience before higher than slow throttle settings can be used. A 40 mph spin or cross-ways slide can spell disaster if you hit rough ice or even the smallest obstacle. Never "stunt" on ice covered surfaces!

Add to this the stress of a fast moving vehicle carrying this weight over an uneven surface resulting, at times in twice the weight of the machine and passengers being exerted downward — over half a ton.

Taking all this into consideration, safety officials claim that six inches of ice is the minimum for safe snowmobiling on frozen surfaces. And just because there is six inches of ice within a few feet of the shore, do not take it for granted there is the same thickness out in the middle of the lake or river. In fact, there may be only sufficient ice to cover the water.

The Ontario Safety League repeats, get local advice before using the ice-covered surfaces of lakes and rivers for snowmobiling.

Roadways Take Toll Of Riders

Statistics point out some vital facts about snowmobiles and their handling characteristics, says the Ontario Safety League.

Snowmobiles are designed to travel on snow, but not on the hard-packed and icy surfaces frequently found on heavily-travelled roadways. Under these conditions a snowmobile is difficult or control, hard to stop or steer, a death-trap for the operator and a menace to motor vehicle traffic.

Safety officials strongly advise snowmobilers to avoid public thoroughfares heavily travelled by motor vehicles even if their use is legalized. Night travel on roadways is especially dangerous. Approximately half of the accidents on public thoroughfares happened during hours of darkness. One precaution which will help to reduce these hazards is staying on the right shoulder, off the travelled portion, so that your snowmobile is travelling with the flow of motor vehicle traffic and your lights will not distract motorists.

Snowmobilers are reminded that Ontario regulations require chauffeur's licence to legally operate a snowmobile on any public thoroughfare — even to cross it.

List Tells Where Snowmobiles Welcome

A directory available from district offices of the department of lands and forests tells snowmobilers where they are welcome in Ontario's provincial parks.

The directory, prepared by John Featherston, operations rector in the parks and recreation areas branch, list some 85 provincial parks where snowmobiling is permitted on marked trails or unplowed park roads.

Mr. Featherston says his department has also developed about 400 miles of cross-country snowmobile trails on crown lands outside provincial parks where some machine enthusiasts may roam off the beaten track. Most of those cross-country preserves are concentrated in the eastern portion of Central Ontario.

Mr. Featherston said the information for the directory was gathered through staff at the department's 21 district offices in the province. He said his office in Toronto received many enquiries about snowmobiling locations — an indication, he said the directory will be greeted with interest.

Mr. Featherson said the information contained in the directory will also be supplied directthrough regular department news releases, in an attempt to help residents and visitors do their snowmobiling where it is welcome.

James Keenan, director of the parks and recreation areas branch, said the department is snowmobilers to protect areas of provincial park: where vegetation is fragile. He said that is why the department asks snowmobilers to stay within marked trails.

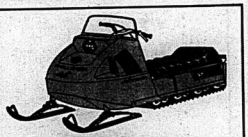
Knowledge Big Asset

Knowing how you machine operates under different weather conditions can reduce the possibility of a mishap, say safety officials of the International Snowmobile Industry Association.

Officials say a snowmobile performs one way on snow, another way on ice and yet another way when it is sleeting. Altitudes make a big difference also. A snowmobile even performs one way on the north side of a mountain and another way on the south side.

The Snowmobile Industry Association says operators should realize these differences exist and learn to change their driving habits.

Dealers are the key link in the effort for safer more responsible snowmobiling. He must tell the customer how the machine operates under each of the changing conditions in weather, they say.



As the dealer places the snowmobile in the operator's control this gives him some very special responsibilities. A dealer must assume that every new customer is a novice. This means help until the customer acquires the necessary experience.

Editorial Opinion

The word is "snowmobile" not "roadmobile". The Ontario Safety League, who are convinced that snowmobiles should be restricted to snow and not permitted on roads used by motor vehicle traffic, quotes from an editorial in the Nov. 4 edition of the Globe and Mail. This is their comment on a recent statement by Transportation and Communications Minister Charles MacNaughton regarding snowmobile accidents last winter in Ontario:

"He (Mr. MacNaughton) warns that unless people show more responsibility in the use of snowmobiles a sharp increase in the number of people killed and injured can be expected. He finds that the main causes of accidents last winter in which 38 were killed and 598 injured were: Snowmobilers riding on the wrong side of the road, colliding with parked cars, failing to obey stop signs and other road warnings, and lack of knowledge of the machines' capabilities and limitations.

To anyone (save, perhaps, a member of the Ontario Government) a glance over the list of causes would instantly and compellingly suggest one remedy: get the snowmobiles off the roads. Then they would not be driven on the wrong side of the road, collide with parked cars, fail to obey stop signs."

Eight Points for Fun

Safety officials offer the following eight points for a more enjoyable snowmobile season:

- Join a club. For this you must have proper insurance and you use your machine in an organized fashion in the company of skilled and experienced operators.
- Use common sense.
- Have the proper gear. Light, warm clothing. A helmet should be mandatory.

Failure to Obey Regulations Found Cause of Most Accidents

Failure to obey the motorized snow vehicle laws in the province was the principle cause of serious accidents last year says Transportation and Communications Minister Charles McNaughton.

"Files of my department show the majority of snowmobile mishaps could have been avoided. The principal cause of death and injury was, to put it bluntly, the irresponsibility of people who violated the laws set out for their protection. Fortunately, thousands of snowmobilers choose to observe them," said the minister.

Mr. McNaughton, in a special statement for this snowmobile edition, said, "Now that we are entering another winter, I would like to impress upon our growing population of snowmobilers the necessity for safety and skill in operating these recreational vehicles.

"During the embryonic years of this sport, we have witnessed a distressing escalation of fatalities and injuries in snowmobile accidents in Ontario — 38 killed and 598 injured last year.

"To put these statistics in context, I should point out two things. First, the number of registered motorized snow vehicles in the province rose to 157,000 last year — 40 per cent more than the previous year. Second, new legislation required full registration of all snowmobile collisions, both on and off the highway, for the first time last winter. But, despite these qualifications, the statistics are cold comfort indeed.

"We find that most people involved in snowmobile collisions are the authors of their own misfortune. They drive on the wrong side of the road. They collide with parked motor vehicles. They fail to obey stop signs and other road warnings. They drive too fast for surface conditions. They are not familiar with the capabilities and limitations of their machines to manoeuvre and stop.

"In view of the rapidly expanding popularity of this young sport, the statistics of last winter could be a foreboding spectre for the winter ahead unless more people accept greater personal responsibility for their own safety and that of others.

"A comprehensive pamphlet spelling out the laws covering the operation of motorized snow vehicles and providing safety tips is available, on request, at department offices throughout Ontario. I urge all snowmobilers — both the novice and the experienced — to familiarize themselves with this information before the season begins.

"I also strongly urge anyone who intends to try this sport for the first time to contact a local snowmobile club for basic instructions on how to handle these powerful machines. Department offices also will help to provide information on such clubs and courses. Taking these precautions would help to ensure that this season, snowmobiling can be enjoyed with a higher degree of personal safety."

Auditorium Is Packed For Safety Presentation

Speaking to a packed Bleecker Auditorium Wednesday, a snow machine representative from Toronto said, "the sport, as others, is inherently unsafe, but you take the machine and the condition that is safest to you".

The public meeting, held to reacquaint outdoor enthusiasts with legal and safety regulations governing the use of snow machines, drew a crowd of more than 300.

Speaking to the group were the Ontario Provincial Police, the city police, St. John Ambulance and representatives of snowmobile manufacturers.

"The snow machine," said a sales representative, "is going through an evolution. Through stricter legislation on safety devices, we are building better machines.

"As far as standards of production are concerned, the producer is being put in his place, and rightfully so," he said.

Particular interest was shown by the public in the various braking systems available in snow machines.

One man talking with a salesman claimed, "the brakes on most machines aren't worth a damn." The salesman replied, "I can't make any comment on that."

Constable Brian Turner, representing the OPP talked to the gathering, explaining the legislation pertaining to the snow machine.

"Unless more voluntary restraint is exercised by the owner, stricter legislation will have to be passed to completely govern the use of the machine," he said.

The constable gave as an example, "if care is not taken on the highways by snowmachines, they will be banned from the roadways altogether.

"A highway," he said, "was any strip of land designed for the passage of public vehicles."

"Much of the legislation seems unrealistic but it means that better machines will be produced," said a salesman.

Some safety factors that are being built into machines this year are emergency stop buttons located on the handlebars, fuel tanks mounted at the rear, dual headlights and caliper disc brakes.

One particular improvement has been the seat.

Hairline fractures have resulted to the spine because the seat was too soft and allowed the rider to bottom on the supporting board when going over rough ground.

"Seats should be comfortable but firm and under no condition should the rider be able to touch the supporting board by sitting or kneeling," said a salesman.

Films were shown during the evening, which was sponsored by Bill Vaughan Marine, showing what to do in an emergency.

"The snow machine has become a thing to social climb with," said a sales representative. "It has become a very cliquey type of sport."

"The thing to remember about the machine is that it was designed as a transportation thing and not recreation," he said. "If used properly, it can be a safe pastime."

Trudeau and Nixon Meet Next Month

PM Is Granted Talks Request

WASHINGTON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau and President Nixon will meet in Washington in late December during a marathon session of summitry by the Nixon administration.

In all, Nixon will have talks with five Western and Asian leaders of countries hurt by U.S. economic policies, particularly the 10-per-cent U.S. import levy.

Strong pressures have built up in Ottawa in the wake of recent American protectionism and future moves in Congress to expand it.

Revised estimates in Ottawa say that 40,000 jobs could be lost in Canada if the U.S. import surcharge is on the books for a year.

The warning to the Americans is that Canada will be exporting jobs—not goods—if the Nixon administration continues its protectionist course.

Peter Roberts, Prime Minister Trudeau's press secretary, said in Ottawa Sunday night that the exact date of the meeting should be announced in the next day or two.

While the prime minister will discuss both international and bilateral issues with Nixon, the main emphasis of the talks will be on Canadian-American relations, now at a low point.

Nixon returned to Washington Sunday night after a four-day stay at the Western White House in San Clemente, Calif., and a presidential spokesman said Prime Minister Trudeau would come to Washington, but he did not give a date for the visit except to say it would be toward the end of next month.

When arrangements for his unprecedented burst of jet diplomacy are complete, Nixon plans to disclose by Wednesday when his trip to Peking will take place and perhaps supply some of the other details which have been closely held as state secrets so far.

The White House announced Sunday that Nixon will meet West German Chancellor Willy Brandt at the president's Florida home in Key Biscayne Dec. 28 and 29, for talks on international problems and U.S.-German relations.

Earlier, the White House disclosed Nixon plans to hold talks with French President Georges Pompidou in the Azores Dec. 13 and 14, with British Prime Minister Edward Heath in Bermuda Dec. 20 and 21, and Japanese Premier Eisaku Sato in San Clemente Jan. 6 and 7.

In the last month, Prime Minister Trudeau resisted persistent pressure from the Opposition in the House of Commons who advocated that he take Canada's position directly to Nixon.

Last Oct. 12, the prime minister suggested Nixon didn't seem to be interested in Canada at the moment.

While there have been no public suggestions that the U.S. position towards Canada has become any more sympathetic since then, one of Prime Ministers

Nixon To See Allies

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon's forthcoming summit session with five Allied leaders will feature a heavy dose of economic talk about curing international trade and monetary ills.

Advance signals include a newly-reported administration willingness to get down to real negotiations now about ending its 10-per-cent added levy on dutiable imports. And Nixon is taking aim No. 1 moneyman, Treasury Secretary John B. Connally, for the talks.

The White House's general billing for Nixon's visits with French, British, Japanese, West German and Canadian chiefs during the next few weeks is consultation before the presidential trips to Peking and Moscow.

But the Western allies already know about the U.S. gesture toward the Soviet Union through NATO and lower-level diplomacy. On the Peking trip, nobody really knows just what new light it will shed until Nixon gets there.

Shock waves still are spreading, however, from Nixon's Aug. 15 emergency steps to reverse the U.S. balance-of-payments deficit by suspending the dollar's convertibility into gold and imposing a 10-per-cent surtax on imports.

Some U.S. officials say a tough line was needed at the start to convince foreigners that Washington meant business. The time now has come to modify negotiating demands, they say, before other countries develop new trading patterns that could harden into permanent barriers.

Death Trap for Two

Foxboro Accident Kills Two Madoc Residents

By COLIN BRUCE
Staff Reporter

Foxboro bypass has claimed two more lives.

At 2:15 a.m. Saturday, where Foxboro main street meets Highway 14 at the Moira River bend, two cars collided.

One was driven by James Edward Henry, 57, of RR2, Madoc. He was dead on arrival at Belleville General Hospital.

Sheila Henry, 20, one of seven passengers in the Henry vehicle died later Saturday evening in Kingston General Hospital. She had sustained head injuries and a fractured neck.

In critical condition in the Kingston General Hospital, is Rose Henry, mother of the family involved in the incident. She suffered head and chest injuries.

The Henry children, Jamie 15, Brenda, 9, Dennis, 11, and Mrs. Sharon Parsons, Toronto, suffered minor injuries and were treated and released from Belleville General Hospital.

Eleanor, 14, another of the children, received facial lacerations and injuries to the right arm and back. She was admitted.

The Henry family had been travelling from their home to Belleville to visit a son, Andrew, who had been admitted to the hospital some days earlier as a result of a motor vehicle accident.

Driver of the other car was Marvin C. Reide, 33, of 74 Main Street, Foxboro.

A spokesman for the Ontario Provincial Police, investigating the accident, said "the Reide vehicle, proceeding north on Highway 14, struck the Henry vehicle after veering off the soft shoulder of the roadway."

Mr. Reide was treated and released from hospital with bruises.

Charges laid against Mr. Reide include impaired driving and possessing liquor in a place other than his residence.

Other charges are pending, say the OPP.

Damage to the two vehicles has been estimated at $3,500.

Waffle's Foes Are Organizing

HAMILTON (CP) — Some Hamilton-area members of the Ontario New Democratic Party are taking steps to crush the party's Waffle movement.

The Hamilton Mountain NDP riding association, is spearheading the attack, backed by Ian Deans, NDP member of the Ontario legislature for Wentworth.

The association is formulating a motion for the party's March council meeting that would allow individual members of the Waffle to stay in the party but would stop them from setting up a structured organization within it.

Premier Wasfi Tell Jordan Premier Slain

AMMAN, Jordan (AP) — More turmoil was predicted today for Jordan following the assassination in Cairo of Premier Wasfi Tell by vengeful Palestinian Arabs.

Tell, unrelenting 51-year-old opponent of the Palestinian guerrillas, was shot Sunday at the entrance to the Sheraton Hotel in Cairo, Jordan's foreign minister, Abdullah Salah, was grazed in the leg, and an Egyptian security officer and one of the gunman also was wounded.

Egyptian authorities arrested four Palestinians with Syrian passports and said three of them admitted shooting Tell.

Egypt's Middle East news agency said one of the three, Mamdu Thalifa, told interrogators the assassination plan was formulated in Beirut by the Black September organization, a movement formed to avenge the guerrillas killed in the Jordanian army's crackdown in September, 1970.

Stable Money Sought At Ten-nation Parley

ROME (CP) — Finance Ministers from 10 leading non-Communist countries, meeting amid dire threats of a possible trade war, appear determined this week to hammice out new supports for an unsteady international monetary and trade system.

The ministers, including Canada's Edgar Benson, open a two-day conference Tuesday in their third attempt to settle problems raised by Washington's Aug. 15 decision imposing a 10-per-cent surcharge on dutiable imports and suspending the dollar's gold convertibility.

Few officials or observers expect any final solutions to emerge from the discussions but there appears to be some optimism that progress here may lead to an agreement over the next few months, a goal that eluded the ministers at earlier meetings in London and Washington.

Many believe no full settlement will be reached until sometime after a series of bilateral meetings set for next month between President Nixon and Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau, West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, French President Pompidou and British Prime Minister Edward Heath.

Meanwhile, a number of countries, including Canada, increase pressure on the U.S. to lift the surcharge as quickly as possible.

Heart Patients Avoid Grey Cup Excitement They Turn on Radio, Learn They Won $100,000

WINNIPEG (CP) — Ernest and Pearl Smith didn't follow the Grey Cup game until the dying minutes—in time to learn Mrs. Smith had won the top $100,000 prize in the Manitoba sweepstake.

"We've both had heart attacks before, so we didn't watch the game on television," said Mr. Smith, 79, of Winnipeg, a retired department store manager.

"We didn't even have the radio on until the last two minutes of the game."

His wife Pearl, 74, who held the top ticket on Calgary Stampeders, turned down the offer of a free trip to Vancouver to watch the game.

After a heart attack in June, he felt the excitement in the Empire Stadium stands would be too much for her.

India-Pakistan Clashes Swell

NEW DELHI (CP) — Bitter fighting raged between Indian and Pakistani forces along the embattled East Pakistan border today with both sides admitting a general escalation of the conflict.

An Indian government spokesman said fighting was continuing near the strategic border town of Balurghat where Indian troops knocked out three Pakistani tanks Saturday, making a total of 17 in the last week.

He also accused Pakistan of shelling numerous points across the border.

Pakistan charged India with launching another big offensive on four fronts around the border but India admitted only one crossing by its forces.

A Pakistani army spokesman in Dacca reported Sunday that heavy fighting was raging on East Pakistan's western border near Jessore, in the east near Comilla, in the north at Sylhet and in the north at Dinajpur.

The Indians said they moved into East Pakistan in a "fresh defensive action" after renewed shelling Saturday and Sunday of Indian border regions around Balurghat, the district headquarters of West Dinajpur district.

High Steppers in Santa's Parade

First prize for the best majorette corps in the annual Santa Claus parade at Trenton on Saturday went to Gail Chapman's Jolly Buccaneers of Belleville, shown swinging off the No. 2 Highway bridge at the head of the procession. Bigger crowds than ever turned out in the drizzle to watch the parade.

Hundreds Watch Trenton Parade

TRENTON (Staff) — Santa Claus' annual visit on Saturday attracted more people than in other years in spite of dreary skies accompanied by a drizzle of rain.

Crowds that lined the parade route from Centennial Park through the downtown business section provided an enthusiastic reception for the large assortment of floats, bands and majorette corps in the colorful half - mile - long procession.

Two Belleville based entries in the parade were awarded prizes in the different categories, the Shrine Club of Belleville was judged the best out-of-town float and placed third in the selection of the best over-all entry. The award for the best majorette corps went to Gail Chapman's senior girls of Belleville.

Judged the best over-all entry was the replica of Cinderella's horse drawn carriage and her magic slipper designed by employees of the public works department of Trenton. Second prize in this category went to the Kinsmen Club of Trenton, also winners of the best service club judging.

Other prize-winners were Marmora Lions Band, school, senior school entry and Canadian Flight Equipment, best industrial entry.

Residents of Belleville and area will get the opportunity to see the prize-winning entries from Trenton when they appear in the Belleville Santa Claus parade this coming Saturday. Santa's visit to Trenton each year is sponsored by the local merchants as a high priority project of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

Tyendinaga Mohawks Make Proposals

Although they are opposed to the provision of the White Paper on Indian Affairs, leaders of the Tyendinaga band here think it was "a good thing".

"It woke the Indians up to the fact that they had to do something or be turned over to the provinces" said Chief Earl Hill today.

Chief Hill, the four band councillors and the Tyendinaga welfare administrator attended the meeting of the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians in Brantford Saturday when they presented Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien with a position paper in opposition to the government's White Paper.

The White Paper, released in 1969, advocated abolition of the Department of Indian Affairs and the integration of Indians and whites.

With the phasing out of the Indian affairs department, Indians would come under provincial control. And this the Indians of Tyendinaga and five other bands in the Association is determined to avoid.

"Under the province, we would start paying taxes. If we were paying taxes anyone could buy reserve land and the reserves would dissolve," said Chief Hill.

The association, representing 20,000 Ontario Indians, urged that Section 87 of the Act be maintained, subject to amendment of some offensive sections.

Some parts of the association's position paper, while true in general of Indians across Canada, do not apply to their entirety to Tyendinagas.

The drop - out rate of 94 per cent for Indian secondary school students is not true here, where Indians remain in school longer than in other places.

"But our drop - out rate is still considerably higher than the non - Indians," said Chief Hill.

The reason, he said, was that Indian students attending Belleville high schools "never had anybody to turn to".

The situation changed this year with the appointment of Barbara Claus, Grade 7 teacher on the reserve, as Indian liaison officer at Moira Secondary School.

As well as acting in an advisory capacity to Indian students, Mr. Claus will organize a non - credit interest course in Mohawk for Indian and non - Indian students, and eventually will teach an Indian credit course. All these programs were advocated.

Contract Let For Elevators

Belleville General Hospital has awarded a contract for the installation of two additional elevators at the hospital to the firm of Harold E. Stark.

The tender, for $207,555 calls for relocation of a westmost kitchen now above the site required for the new lifts. These must be operable by spring.

A Plug for Belleville

In Trenton's annual Santa Claus parade Saturday, it was evident Trenton and Belleville co-operates in ventures which promote goodwill in the whole Quinte area. A good example was the above entry with sign advertising Belleville's big promotion of Santa's visit to the city this coming Saturday. In Trenton's parade there were 21 floats, riderbands and eight majorette corps to delight the many children and parents who lined the procession route.

Computer Not Problem Says UIC Spokesman

A Belleville computer is likely to be the target of talk tomorrow as a disgruntled group of parliamentarians meets with Labor Minister Bryce Mackasey in Ottawa.

However, indicate federal officials in the know, the computer may not be the centre of blame in the issue — delays in processing unemployment insurance claims.

Apparently, MPs there days are receiving more and more complaints from constituents about delays.

Tomorrow's meeting is the result of a lengthy campaign by Wallace Nesbitt, MP Oxford, who has been repeatedly complaining in the Commons on the way many unemployment insurance claims are being handled.

About 12 MPs will meet with UIC officials and Mr. Mackasey to discuss the problem.

A UIC spokesmen in Belleville — where the computer causes the insurance cheques — said the meeting will try to ascertain "if there are any ways the service can be improved".

Mr. Nesbitt has been fairly blunt on what the problem is:

"In my view, the problem is a straight administrative one — and part of it has been brought on by the policy of closing down many small- ir UIC offices and handling the work through a computer in Belleville. I think it's difficult to programe the computer for the type of information that is required in the processing of claims."

The computer has been at work since 1969 when the UIC opened its Belleville regional office to serve Ontario.

The office is the central administrative link for 16 district offices throughout the province. The Belleville area is served out of Kingston.

The UIC Belleville spokesman refused to comment on the shutdown of local offices and computer centralization. However, he defended the computer against Mr. Nesbitt's charges.

"As far as the computer not being able to program the information — this isn't correct," he said. "It's no jam-up. It's new procedures.

The UIC now operates under new legislation inaugurated last June which "involves many complicated regulations and procedures."

Among the more crucial changes is an extended waiting period before claims are paid out. Before the June legislation an unemployed person made a claim after one week.

Now, a claimant receives a report card and he must fill out and return at the end of two weeks. During that time he receives no UIC benefits. At the end of that two-week period, a second-card is received which must be filed in another two weeks. It is on this second report card that claims are paid.

The UIC spokesman admitted it might therefore take up to one month before a claim-ant begins receiving benefits.

The claims are processed through the district offices then forwarded to the Belleville regional headquarters — and its computer.

The machine works — producing up to 200,000 cheques every two weeks during the peak of winter unemployment, estimates the official.

Mr. Grills says the problem is taking "a lot of time" to straighten out on behalf of complaining constituents.

In one day last weekend, he received five complaints at home. He expected more awaited him at his Ottawa office.

"It seems to be taking quite a bit of time to process the claims," said Mr. Grills. "They seem slow in moving and I think they're bogged down."

However, Mr. Grills added he was reluctant to criticize the office. Also he has known cases where claimants don't retrieve their report cards when they should.

Yet, delays in receiving benefits create another problem for lower tiers of government, Mr. Grills fears. People out of work—and funds—will apply for local welfare, he says. Once disbursed it is difficult to recover such funds.

Mr. Nesbitt also says when he and other MPs go to district offices with such complaints, they receive fast and courteous service- from the staffs.

But the Oxford MP said it should not be necessary for an MP to take this action if the administrative operations of the commission were efficiently run.

PM Will See Nixon

"It's just that the time is ripe," he said. "Talks take place when it is most propitious."

The Washington Post said Saturday the Nixon administration now appears "more willing than it was just a few weeks ago to lift the controversial 10-per-cent import surcharge" imposed Aug. 15.

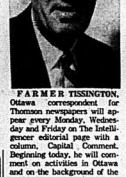
A front-page story by Hobart Rowen, the paper's highly regarded business editor, said officials at home and abroad that the surcharge "would trigger a world-wide recession has modified the administration's position."

Prime Minister Trudeau's proposed journey to Washington means he will have been there twice since he became prime minister in 1968.

He visited Nixon in the first year of his Liberal government.

Nixon has been invited to Ottawa, and Roberts said plans are still being made for that trip.

Officials said Trudeau would be the last Western leader to hold a summit with the president in the current series and that State Secretary William Rogers would brief other allies at the NATO ministerial meeting in Brussels in December on Nixon's visits to Peking and the Soviet Union before next May.



The White House has stressed the main emphasis of the summits will be on the president's initiatives for a peaceful settlement of differences with China and the Soviet Union.

But diplomatic sources note that all the meetings are with leaders of countries most severely affected by measures taken by Nixon to force an upward revaluation of foreign currencies and cut imports to the United States.

Deputy Secretary John Connally due to attend all five sessions, observers believe international monetary and economic problems and foreign policies of Nixon's new financial policies will receive the highest priority.

Officials told reporters aboard the presidential jet returning to Washington that Nixon would tell the allied leaders that he would not abandon commitments, treaties or relationships with them in his search for accommodations with China and the Soviet Union.

"Our position is that we are not going to sacrifice allied unity for a relaxation of tensions," one White House official said.

FARMER TISSINGTON, Ottawa correspondent for Thomson newspapers will appear every Monday, Wednesday and Friday on The Intelligencer editorial page with a column, Capital Comment. Beginning today, he will comment on activities in Ottawa and on the background of the workings of the federal government. Mr. Tissington is a former editor of western Canada and Ontario newspapers and his last is editor of The Oshawa Times.

$1,300 Damage In Collision

TWEED (Special) — A two car collision at the intersection of Jamieson and Victoria streets in this village resulted in $1,300 damage this morning.

"BELLY BUTTON" OR UMBILICAL HERNIA
Navel, or belly button hernia, is not unusual in babies and usually it corrects itself in a few months to a year. It is the only kind of hernia which can be self-correcting. The Doctor sometimes just tapes a coin, or a smaller flat object over the hernia.
In grandmother's time, every baby usually wore a belly band for this purpose, but now medical opinion has discarded this therapy as having little value. Infrequently, surgery may be required for a navel hernia but the operation is simple. Your physician will tell you if one is necessary.

Nine-year-old Swims $204 Worth

Angela Coughlan beware Belleville will soon have a swimmer ready to challenge you.

The threat to Canada's Olympic star may be a bit premature but nine - year - old David Wilton looks like a sure winner. At least that's the prediction following his performance this weekend at the Belleville Family YMCA's Swimathon.

Swimming for $4.08 a lap, David completed the maximum 50 lengths Saturday to accumulate a total of $204. The youngest competitor to accomplish the distance, he was also the second highest individual pledge earner.

The fourth annual contest netted $3,000 for the Y, the money will go toward the replacement of program equipment and to improve the club's financial position. A total of 112 swimmers took part in the three-day affair which concluded Sunday after 19 and one-half hours of pool time.

Biggest individual contributor was Y president Dr. Douglas Horne who brought in close to $900 for his 50 laps.

He also took the worst dunking of the weekend when exuberant club members tossed him in the pool during the opening ceremony Saturday morning — before he'd put on his trunks. Mayor J. Russell Scott, who managed to escape the festivities dry, was thought to have had a hand in that episode.

Also helping out were the Exhibition Nuts from CJBQ. The radio station's band of aquatic wonders floundered their way around the pool, taking pledges over the phone while Dick Lovering broadcast live from the building.

David, his red eyes half closed and his small frame somewhat wearied, still had energy left to present Dr. Horne with his three completed pledge cards.

The half-mile plus jaunt was more than the youngster had expected to complete. He told his mother before he went to the pool that he thought he could swim five lengths.

A grade four pupil at Harry J. Clarke School, David spent a week combing the East Hill in search of potential dinors.

Never one to have a fear of water, he has been swimming since he was two and began at the YMCA last year.

Now his only problem is to collect the money owing, but for a boy with his energy, that should be like water off a duck's back.

Water Weary

David Wilton gets a boost from CJBQ's Lee Jaunzel and YMCA president Dr. Douglas Horne Saturday after completing 50 laps at the Y's annual Swimathlon. The youngster, who celebrated his ninth birthday last week, earned more than $200 in pledges. A total of 112 swimmers competed over the weekend, netting $3,600 for various YMCA projects.

Centennial Students Chip in for Needy

Students at Centennial Secondary School have given the Christmas Sharing Program a big boost this week.

They have taken on the task of providing Christmas baskets for 45 families in Belleville.

Sharing their Christmas with others has become a tradition at Centennial. Two years ago the students packed and delivered 32 Christmas baskets.

This year, with a larger enrolment, they have been on 45 as a start, and will try for more if necessary.

The school has 44 classrooms, and each one has been assigned a family. The 45th basket will be packed by the staff.

A collection will be taken up in each home room to pay for the turkeys. The Student Council will pick up the tab for any classroom that doesn't raise the full sum necessary. The other contents of the baskets will come in the form of donations from students with drives planned during the next three weeks for tinned goods and other food and toys for the baskets.

Senior students, who have access to family cars, will deliver the baskets.

The names of the families, with ages and sex of the children, were released yesterday by the Project's chairman Mrs. Selma Bachnek to Dennis Fralick and Chris Fulton of Centennial's Student Council.

The families to receive baskets have all consented to having their names released to donor groups.

The Christmas-Sharing Program, operated from United Community Services on John St., is a project of the Central Volunteer Bureau.

More than 200 city families are registered with the project for Christmas assistance. The sharing project acts as a central clearing house to pel donors, either individuals or groups, in touch with the families needing assistance at Christmas time.

The baskets, costing about $25 for a family of six, are designed to assure every family of a festive holiday dinner.

In the Swing

Everyone is smiling as the Greek Folk Dancing Group of Toronto whirls through a rousing native dance. The ensemble is performing a 19th century number handed down from the mountain town of Beralis. The entertainment Saturday night at Centennial Secondary School was part of weekend long festivities conducted by Belleville's Greek community.

Visitor Helps Himself to Wallet

When a visitor called on Mr. and Mrs. Henry DeMark of 75 North Front Street shortly before midnight Saturday, the couple were asleep.

The visitor made himself at home after slipping the front door latch.

Mr. DeMark's pants, containing $8 in cash, several credit cards . . . total value, $35, were taken. The unwelcome guest then attempted to make off with the family truck.

However, a tree got in the way, and as the awakened Mr. DeMark came on the scene, the thief fled, leaving his truck rammed up against a tree.

Police Raid Apartment

Armed with search warrants, city police officers raided apartments at 303½ Front Street, at 1.30 a.m. Sunday.

Three arrests were made.

James Allan Thurston, 19, was arrested for suspension of his parole. He was returned to Kingston Penitentiary.

In the second apartment raided by officers, David Joseph Daley, 17, and Petra Susanna Arnold, 19, were arrested and a quantity of material seized.

They are to be summonsed under the Narcotics Control Act.

Shotgun Stolen

The weapon has been valued at $125.

County Council Stays as Is

For the first time in many years and possibly for the first time in the history of the county, there will be no new faces next year in Hastings county council.

Normally there are anywhere from five to six new council members each year as sitting reeves retire or are defeated at the polls.

But this year due to municipal councils being elected for two-year terms to coincide with school board elections, the only municipality to have a contest will be Deseronto where staggered elections are held each year.

However, Reeve George Lyons has been returned by acclamation so will again sit on county council.

The December meeting of county council — a two day session — is scheduled for December 8 - 9.

During the session aspirants for the position of 1972 county warden are expected to make their announcements and also make their initial pitch for support at the January session.

Reeve Acclaimed, Vote for Council

Reeve George Lyons has received an acclamation for another term of office, but electors in the town of Deseronto will go to the polls Monday, Dec. 6 to choose a mayor, public utilities commissioner and four council members.

Incumbent James W. Sharpe and former councillor Mrs. Dorothy McCullough will fight it out for the mayor's office, while Frank Topping and Adrian McCormick will seek the one UC seat.

Six aspirants will contest for the four council seats. They are Edgar Gordanier, Percy Brooks, Peter Simpson, John Mitchell, Fletcher Vick and James McVicker.

How Was It Before?

What did the nuts of this world do before the jet age? Or before Fidel Castro gained power in Cuba, thus providing a haven for crazy mixed-up individuals from our so-called free, democratic society?

Did such individuals do themselves in, or fetch up in the luney bin? Now that we have the delights of far-off places to an extent never before known, courtesy of the airlines, do these people consider hijacking a sort of last fling and at the same time an opportunity to knock the rest of society for their own missed chances in life, hangups, disappointments or whatever?

It would be interesting to know just how such people vented their problems in the past. Not much use hijacking an elephant or a horse and camping, for it would not get one very far, although let's not forget such illustrious examples as Marco Polo on up to the eccentric Earl of Bristol who was very familiar with the capitals of Europe. However, they likely managed their far-flung journeys without such pests as the latter-day hijacker.

We are also getting a little tired of reading all that guff that tends to glamorize these people unnecessarily: such as the information that hijacker A was very courteous (albeit touting sticks of dynamite), or that hijacker B was cool and well-dressed and promised he would not blow the plane to bits if everyone behaved. And so on ad nauseam.

Recent episodes such as the Air Canada jet being twice forced to land in Great Falls, Montana, and the Seattle-Reno flight the other day seem to suggest that hijackers are spreading their wings somewhat. If readers will pardon the pun. No longer is Havana the exclusively in destination; now it can be Shangri-la . . . or somewhere. As often as not it is some stop en route, after the hijacker has been hit on the head or persuaded to give up his mad plan, or has parachuted into the wild blue yonder.

Bennett's Canada–U.S. Free Trade Idea Falls Flat

By FARMER TISSINGTON

OTTAWA — Proposals of British Columbia's Premier Bennett for the establishment of Canada-United States' common market or free trade area have not met with much appreciation here, or across the country.

Mr. Bennett may be serious about his suggestion. It is difficult to be simply "flying a kite" to test the reaction to his rather novel suggestion. If he is serious, he would appear to be making his proposal largely from the political-view of a British Columbian, without taking into full consideration the effects of such an arrangement on other parts of Canada.

To test the reaction of another Columbian, I talked to Bruce Howard, the member of Parliament for Okanagan-Boundary. Mr. Howard has been touted in some circles as the next provincial cabinet minister from B.C. if public work minister Arthur Laing retires. He also is in an advantageous position to discuss matters of trade and industry as he has served for more than a year as the parliamentary secretary to Industry, Trade and Commerce Minister Jean-Luc Pepin.

Mr. Howard is not enamored of the Bennett baby. He points out that the average tariff on Canadian goods entering the United States only is "fifty percent. He is not, of course, taking into account the temporary 10-per-cent surcharge levied earlier this year by President Nixon. At the moment, newsprint and lumber, the U.S. market free of tariff and, commencing Jan. 1, under the next phase of the Kennedy Round of international tariff agreements, lumber and apples also will have free access to the big southern market.

The point Mr. Howard makes is that for a number of major Canadian and B.C. exports, the U.S. market is either open, or shortly will be, and for other items, the tariff barrier is not so steep as to totally prevent successful Canadian competition with U.S. products.

Mr. Howard thinks Mr. Bennett may be drawing an analogy between the European Common Market and his proposed Canada-U.S. free trade area. But he doesn't think this is a valid comparison, because the Canadian situation is vastly different from that of Europe.

In the European case, there are six countries involved, rising to seven when Britain enters and eventually up to nine other nations join later. They are more or less comparable in size and economic strength. But over here, the U.S. is more than 10, 15 and 20 times larger, economically than Canada, and only the two countries are involved.

"With a Canada-U.S. common market here we would be little need for United States firms to maintain branch plants in Canada," Mr. Howard suggests. "They could supply the total North American market from the plants already operating there. We have had one example of a free trade situation in the Canada-U.S. auto pact and Canada felt it was vital in that instance to write safeguards into the pact to ensure our companies were guaranteed a fair amount of the total production."

Mr. Howard was one of the Canadians who went to Washington recently for a meeting with U.S. Senators and Congressmen to discuss the economic difficulties between the two countries. He said he came away from those meetings with some feeling of hopelessness. While many of the U.S. people were very friendly and sympathetic to the Canadian plight, many of them obviously are of the opinion that a free trade area is inevitable at some time in the future.

"It would mean they would swallow us up and what many of them seem to be looking for is easier access to our raw materials, natural resources and energy supplies," Mr. Howard suggests.

The European Common Market countries have an arrangement whereby there is a free exchange of labor between member nations. Such a deal in North America would mean that Canada would be swallowed by many of the U.S. social problems.

He makes a good point when he says that while everyone thinks of the United States as having the highest standard of living in the world, that country has its own regional disparities, with any areas being much poorer than the living industrial and farming regions.

"Under a common market plan, Canada would probably reconsider and long before developed areas, with a much lower standard of living," the B.C. MP warns. "In addition, all of our anti-dumping legislation and protection would go by the board. The seasonal food products from the south would saturate our markets long before our own produce was ready for harvest."

And finally, Mr. Howard believes a Canada-U.S. market would inevitably result in the more powerful country objecting to Canada on fiscal and monetary matters and on the policy the North American common market would adopt in setting tariffs against other countries and trading blocs in the world.

Apartments Issue

Are Citizens' Needs Being Neglected?

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

I think Mr. Kenneth Peoples should be congratulated for his very fine letter in your paper the other evening. To me it speaks for practically every home owner in the City of Belleville. We want our elected officials to protect our interests.

I think one of the most concerned officials in this connection is Mrs. Jean Smith who has shown by her actions that she is seriously trying to carry out the wishes of the citizens. Why is not all the council so concerned with the citizens' desires? After all these city officials were elected by the citizens to act in their best interests in all matters pertaining to the City of Belleville. I'm sure we will remember this when election time comes around.

Incidentally, let us also ignore the so - called "consultants". Most of the time (and council meeting records will bear this out) we spend huge sums for work performed by consultants and 75 per cent of the time their recommendations are ignored. We who live in this city know far better what is needed in the city than some outsiders. Let our local, knowledgeable people do the consulting and planning and let us put the consultants' fees to better use in our budget.

HOME OWNER

EDITOR'S NOTE: Home Owner's dissatisfaction with council and with our past editorial comment, and his references to the "best interests" of citizens, are couched in very general terms and members of Council may answer for themselves if they wish. For our part, editorial comment reflects many and varied interests, certainly not just business. This was not the first time moreover that we expressed dissatisfaction with apartment construction mixed in with existing, traditional housing. Nor was it the first time we had drawn attention to the costly factor if by any constituent every time some major project is contemplated.

Travel Series

Romain Wilhelmsens's film on Bolivia in the Kiwanis travel series was a fascinating presentation that depicted a little-known and arid land. The country gets fewer visitors, he said than any country in the hemisphere.

Accurately termed Bolivian Adventure, the film's second half was devoted to an extended journey by motor car overland into the interior, contacts with army posts and missionaries to an ancient fortress just across the frontier in Brazil and wrapped in legend; and a meeting with a man now aged 90 who lives under guard in a compound, one of the "rubber barons" who allegedly was responsible for the death of thousands of peasant workers many years ago when rubber was a key economic factor in the region.

There was a meeting with a German friend, a respected aide of Field-Marshal Rommel in the last war, now living in Bolivia, a very clean-cut looking man with the keen eyes of an adventurer, and there was the Italian who had been in the country only a couple of years but was doing very well marketing animal skins and furs.

But perhaps the biggest surprise was La Paz, the world's highest capital, some two miles up in the Andes. Here was the typical architecture of a Spanish-American city and a colorful menage of people: well-groomed young officer cadets of the army, handsome and exquisitely-attired young women (Mr. Wilhelmsen said the fashions of Europe are often tried out in such countries before coming our way) and everywhere the Indians in their own colorful attire at the market place and in city streets.

Ever seen a Latin American revolution? Bolivia has had almost a government a year for its more than 100 years' history as a nation. Mr. Wilhelmsen found himself in the middle of preparations for one and here too was an exciting look at the marshalling of popular armed support for a general who subsequently seized power.

It was a glimpse of a land and part of a sub-continent steeped in legend and adventure and much of it still unexplored. Outside Centennial, where the film was shown, stood Mr. Wilhelmsen's travelling bus, with its Michigan plates. It was far from the steaming, mosquito-ridden jungles of South America but symbolic too in its own way of that other adventurous undertaking: travelling Ontario's highways in winter to fulfill film commitments.

Vandalism At Shrine Of Peace

Editor,
The Intelligencer,

Vandals desecrated the Peace Pagoda Shrine at the Lester B. Pearson Peace Park in Tweed between when the park was closed on Oct. 1 and last week.

Inverted three-forked crosses were smeared on the shrine below the inscription from Isaiah 2:4, "and they shall beat their swords into plowshares and their nation shall not lift up sword against nations, neither shall they learn war any more".

The matter is being reported to the Provincial Police at Madoc in the hope that the sacrilege of a dedicated peace shrine will not be repeated.

PRISCILLA CADWELL

Premier Davis Faces Climate of Change

By DON O'HEARN
Queen's Park Bureau of
The Intelligencer

It is time to ask some questions about Premier William Davis (that's long for "Bill") Davis.

Mr. Davis is now in the initial stage of his era of power.

It is a distinctly new era for Ontario. Mr. Davis takes over, the major brushes of the province are different and more complex than any to date.

His problems are not those of George Drew, whose big job was to find the resources and the bodies to nourish the bursting economy after the war.

Nor those of Leslie Frost, whose biggest task was to continue providing the physical resources for expansion while at the same time containing the economy from running away.

Nor those of John Robarts, who had to cope with the advent of big expansion in social services and particularly to see that this did not take as big a bite it would infect the still healthy and growing economy. No, compared to these problems of today these are relatively superficial.

For today we are at the hinge of great and deep change.

We have a society which is moving towards different values in conduct and attitudes, a style of life which is responding to the affluent society with more leisure time, more mobility, and what were in other days the luxuries and a striving for more equality.

And an economy which if not yet actually in the throes of a change which through changes in world trading patterns requires immediate first aid, and which appears will probably not ever again be able to provide the jobs for adequate employment to the communities under the style of working life we have known.

These are great, grave and confounding problems.

Davis has landed as leader on our scene at a time of profound perplexity if not actual crisis.

How well he handles it.

As of now, of course, we really do not know and cannot know.

Experience in the field of government and politics most often the decisive factor for the man. Leaders tend to grow with the demands of office. In advance we can only measure a man by his quality, and that in general terms.

With Premier Davis—we are particularly in the dark. For in his public part there has been little of crisis, little call for decisions based on any real criteria. The bulk of our knowledge is that a province as big as the eight years as minister of education, and these were years of the most tremendous in which those task was to expand, to meet a growth in education which the public demanded and for which the money was available. There was little evidence in these years of his capacity to cope with problems of stress.

However, there are certain obvious qualities which will be important in the leadership of the province at this most important time in its growth. And we can ask ourselves about these and premier as we know him, and make what perhaps might expect from him.

What about motivation?

The problems of today, particularly those of the economy, require positive strong leadership.

The questions of trade patterns and of unemployment are such that is growing so efficient it is destructive to employment, are major questions. There is no experience to refer back to and find tested for solutions. Absolutely fresh thought is required.

In the imagination there? Mr. Davis has showna spirit for innovation. Examples were his introduction of community colleges and educational television in the province, and education in those he was following the lead of other jurisdictions.

Along with this innovative spirit he might also have imaginative capacity. But as of now we don't know. Then there could be imaginative potential in his cabinet. But he has taken the future to show if it actually is there. For now we can only say that there has not been much evidence of it.

There absolutely must be a curtailment of government spending today. If the proposition of the public office going to government increases our whole society could be serious trouble.

Davis realizes this. But does he have the courage and strength of conviction that is required for the courage that will be demanded to cut down? The premier is an innate politician. As such will he be able to follow the hard line and the many, turn-downs that the policy we need will require?

Again in the field of courage will he dare face up to and risk offense to the established interests of business?

Will he, for instance, have the required boldness to add government housing lots at cost rather than market price, thereby knocking down land prices our greatest inflationary factor, but which offend many business interests and perhaps frightening the whole business 'community'?

Will he have the further boldness to squarely face big labor and drive the community of the voice in labor-management affairs that has been required.

Will he if necessary, and there seems a chance it may be, tell those that demand ever higher wage increases, and perhaps for a time all increases, must be curtailed.

These are a few pertinent questions. Davis is now on test. From the few it is readily evident it is going to take quite a man to give leadership the government it will urgently need in the years ahead.

India's Industrial Hub Now at Crucial Crossroads

CALCUTTA (Reuter) — The turbulent Indian state of West Bengal, for many years the hub of India's industry, is at a crucial crossroads.

Either its economy, now in tatters, begins to pick up again or the state heads for a dramatic explosion of social tensions.

This is the opinion of many well-placed people in West Bengal's business and political life and of Western diplomats in the state capital, Calcutta.

But by West Bengal standards this judgment amounts to heady optimism. Six months ago few people would have given decaying, often hideous Calcutta and its poverty-stricken hinterland any chance of worthwhile survival.

In addition to all the state's existing problems, a threat to any predictions looms implicit in the buildup of troops and recent clashes between India and Pakistan—an outgrowth of the deep crisis in East Pakistan.

But the mood and prospects here have shown at least some change, summed up by a Calcutta financial journalist who said: "The mood in private business circles has shown a marked step forward from pessimism to caution."

The reason for the change is a sudden concentration of thought and effort on West Bengal's problems by the central government in New Delhi.

A deluge of seven million East Pakistani refugees into the state clearly prodded New Delhi into faster and more dramatic action.

The refugees flowed across the border after Pakistan's political crisis erupted into violence.

The refugee problem contributed largely to the collapse last June of an anti-Marxist coalition government in West Bengal which had come to power three months earlier.

The New Delhi government, by now fully aroused to the dangers for India as a whole of a depressed and unstable West Bengal, stepped in and imposed president's rule.

This was the third time in four years that central rule had been imposed.

Since June there have been definite signs that the government is determined to achieve its two-fold task of restoring law and order and reviving the economy.

Success or failure will rest on several factors, including the extent of aid to the state administration from the central government, the performance of key men responsible for the state — and the refugees.

Support from New Delhi has been shown by the despatch of half of India's feared para-military Central Reserve Police to West Bengal and by the allocation of $200 million to the newly established Calcutta Municipal Development Authority to help rebuild the city.

In a series of sweeps, reinforced police have imprisoned about 10,000 alleged extremists under new laws permitting imprisonment without trial.

Mrs. Gandhi has appointed a central government minister to have special responsibility for West Bengal. This is an unprecedented development in relations between the Central government and any of the Indian

The minister is Siddartha Shankar Ray, a Calcutta-born Bengali who also holds the central government portfolio of education, social welfare and culture. He has passed the main burden of that job to his deputy.

Ray seems so far to have concentrated on efforts to cope with the refugee problem and to re-invigorate the Congress party in West Bengal.

He has left moves to revive the economy and administration to the new West Bengal governor, Anthony Dias, who since his appointment in August has launched a frontal assault on inefficiency and corruption in the state administration.

Dias is a 61-year-old Christian in charge of a state made up almost wholly of a Hindu majority and a large Moslem minority.

The central government has set up an all-India Industrial Redevelopment Corp. with its headquarters in Calcutta and permission to concentrate at first on West Bengal. The IRC offers managerial advice and financial aid to industry.

By September, the IRC, which started functioning in July, had received requests for help from more than 100 West Bengal firms, 60 of which had already closed down.

By early October, aid was sanctioned for 16, including a major industrial unit, the National Iron and Steel Co. which had closed down in 1969 but reopened again.

Despite optimism generated by such developments, everybody admits that plans for West Bengal cannot succeed unless the refugees go back.

D. P. Ghosh, chairman of the IRC, commented: "I feel more and more optimistic that we are moving towards better days, but that is dependent on the refugees going back."

WHA Honors Junior Volunteers at Tea

By SUSAN KORAH
Women's Reporter

They came from Belleville and surrounding areas, attractive young girls on the threshold of womanhood. Long-haired and "mod" in their choice of styles, they may be described as average teenagers in some respects, yet their year's record of service to the Belleville General Hospital is not "average" for two reasons. First, because they received no reward except the friendship and gratitude of the patients and second, because it was a voluntary sacrifice of so much of their time.

To honor these junior volunteers and their mentors, the Women's Hospital Auxiliary of the Belleville General Hospital held a mother and daughter tea on Sunday afternoon at Ritzhaupt Hall in the hospital. As a token of recognition for her services, each junior volunteer received a Hospital Auxiliary Association Junior Volunteer pin for the first 50 hours of volunteer work she had done. For each additional 50 hours each girl received a gold bar designating the total number of hours.

Those who received bars in addition to their pins and already earned were Rosemary Reilly (200 hours) and Janet McCabe (150 hours).

Receiving both pins and bars were Sandra Hatfield (125 hours), Beverley Shugg (115¾ hours), Wanda Symons (111¼ hours), Marcia Pollacsek (105¾ hours) Beth Shorey (105 hours), Catherine Sullivan (100 hours), Dawn Lott (100 hours) and Sharon Lummiss (100 hours).

Recipients of pins were June Bennett, Cindy Clarke, Elaine Hodges, Leslie Morton, Linda Noakes, Sue Pinder, Liz Sprinkle, Brenda Symons, Nancy Wiggett and Barbara Wooding.

The awards were presented by Mrs. J. E. Nelles, president of the WHA. Earlier, John Kunetsky, hospital assistant administrator conveyed greetings and thanks to the junior volunteers on behalf of the Board of Directors of the hospital. He commented that it was refreshing in these days, when there is so much criticism of public apathy, to find young people voluntarily getting involved in service projects.

Mr. Kunetsky continued that volunteer programs are of mutual benefit to the volunteers and to those who received help under these programs. He said that for young people it is an opportunity to develop social consciousness, to learn about the interdependence of groups of people and to assess their suitability for various professions.

He pointed out that the recipients of voluntary services too have much to be thankful for. He stressed that the hospital had every intention of rendering the best possible service to the patients but the administration was limited by lack of finance and an insufficient number of personnel trained in specialized care. But the hospital services are supplemented by the junior volunteers and the WHA he said, "and for this reason the Hospital Board was grateful to the girls and to their parents who help and encourage them. He concluded by thanking the WHA for organizing the junior volunteer program.

Mrs. J. B. Durrant, chairman of the volunteer services welcomed the gathering. Mrs. Marianne Adams, a member of the nursing staff, gave a message of greeting and appreciation to the junior volunteers on behalf of the nursing staff. She stressed the importance of members of the nursing staff to answer the girls' questions regarding various aspects of the profession. A few words of welcome and congratulation were also offered by Mrs. J. E. Nelles who said she hoped that some of the volunteers will eventually decide on a career in the hospital.

Guests were received at the door by Mrs. A. Twigg, Mrs. F. Stokmans and Miss Laura Hartt.

Tea, punch and a variety of cakes and sandwiches were enjoyed by the girls and their mothers who took this opportunity to meet members of the WHA who were hostesses, and to discuss the volunteer program with them. Mrs. J. Kunetsky and Mrs. F. Stokmans poured tea.

In an interview with The Intelligencer after the awards presentation, Mrs. J. B. Durrant, chairman of the volunteer services who interviews prospective junior volunteers and co-ordinates their time schedules, said most of the girls go to the hospital after school and assist with the supervision of children in the paediatric ward.

In summer they take turns to relieve the senior volunteers of their hospital library duties. In May each year, the chairman writes to the principals of the high schools informing them that girls be tween 16 and 19 are eligible for the program. Most girls, she said come on their own initiative. Mrs. Durrant is assisted by Mrs. F. Stokmans, supervisor of the paediatric playroom volunteers and Mrs. A. J. Twigg, convener of the paediatric playroom volunteers.

Mrs. Durrant pointed out that any girl interested in the program is welcome to contact any of the afore-mentioned volunteers.

Sense of Achievement

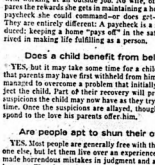
Senior Citizens Discuss Housing Project

The regular twice - monthly meeting of Tweed Senior Citizens' Club was held in St. James' Anglican Church, Wednesday, November 24 at 2 p.m. with 60 members in attendance. Club no. 399, has a membership as of now, of 136, and has the largest membership of any club of senior citizens with the exception of Belleville, in this area.

Business was attended to as usual, after the meeting was opened by the president, Mr. Albert McTaggart, who opened with prayer.

The senior housing project was discussed and it was stated that the units had already been put up for tenders, at the present time the tenders will be for 20 units, although the approval was granted for 30 such units. Ten will be added later if that is needed. It was also stated the federal government will pay 90 per cent grant toward this housing and the provincial government will pay the remaining ten per cent. Then the upkeep and general expenses may be able to look after itself with the rentals coming in after it is built and the residents established. This, of course, remains to be seen and tried out.

Readings were given by the following members; Albert McTaggart, Hazel Albert, Charles Perritt and Mrs. Willard McTaggart. Mrs. Francis Cournoyea, also a member had recently written of her homeland, England, for a poem which she wished to receive the words of. She wrote to the Children Road School, at Peckham, London, England, and after two newspapers working on the project, and contacting some millions of people through the medium of the press, the poem and a letter finally arrived entitled "The Two Church Builders". They came from an 83 year old woman in Dulwich, England. Mrs. Cournoyea read the woman's letter and the poem in its entirety at the senior citizens' meeting, which was a joy to all who heard it.



The members of the club will be holding a bake sale, on Friday, November 26 from 2 p.m. in the basement of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Tweed, and in conjunction with the sale there will be a collection of bazaar items for sale also.

There will be one more meeting prior to Christmas. It will be held on December 8, in the same location and at the usual time. At this meeting the guest speaker will be Mr. Bram Humphries of Belleville, and also in attendance at the next meeting will be Mr. Rollins, of the Tweed branch of the Bank of Montreal. The members enjoyed games of bingo and cards, and the meeting was concluded with a delicious light lunch, served by the committee in charge.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Is housework less rewarding than a job?

ONLY to the wife who erroneously compares keeping house with working at an outside job. No wife, of course, really compares the rewards she gets in maintaining a home with the regular paycheck she could command—or does get—from an employer. They are entirely different: A paycheck is a salary for work produced; keeping a home "pays off" in the satisfaction that is derived in making life fulfilling as a person.

Does a child benefit from belated love?

YES, but it may take some time for a child to accept the love that parents may have first withheld from him. Perhaps they have managed to overcome a problem that initially forced them to reject the child. Part of their recovery will prepare them for any suspicions the child may now have as they try to make up for lost time. Once the suspicions are allayed, though, the child will respond to the love his parents offer him.

Are people apt to shun their own advice?

YES. Most people are generally free with their advice for someone else, but let them live one as experience in which they had made horrendous mistakes in judgment and action, and see what happens. They know they were wrong, they know they should be grateful that they have another chance; but dorned if they don't find themselves making the same mistakes—and make no mistake about it, they know they are making those same mistakes.

Nurses Switch To Three-day Work Week

WINNIPEG (CP) — A group of nurses in Winnipeg General Hospital, who followed the lead of workers at the Imperial Oil Ltd. refinery in suburban East St. Paul, have switched to a three-day work week and says "We never want to go back to working the other way."

On the heels of the refinery experiment, the group of nurses decided to ask the hospital's administration if they could try a modified three-day work week.

Late in April the experiment was launched on an eight-week trial basis among nine nurses and three nurses' aides in a 36-bed ward on the hospital's fourth floor. It still is in force.

The nurses who originated the idea say they like it and want to see it continued. In the words of one of them, Diane Samdesky:

"Our nursing care has improved, we're able to spend more time with patients."

Another nurse, Susan Hay, said: "We never want to go back to working the other way."

The nurses work six 12-hour shifts and one eight - hour shift in a two-week period. The system is set up so no nurse works more than four days without time off.

Ann Landers' Sound of Snoring Varied as Speaking

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the girl who said her father's snoring was music to her ears because when she heard him snore she knew he was safe at home and his presence always gave her security.

I am surprised you didn't go into a little more detail on your answer. You should have told the girl that not all snoring is offensive—and that her father's snoring must have had a pleasant sound. I have been married four times so I'm something of an authority on the subject. And, to keep this letter completely honest, I confess I've heard some snoring between marriages, too.

From a wealth of experience I can tell you the sound of snoring can be as varied as speaking voices. My first husband had a truly melodic snore—it sort of ran up and down the scale. I loved it. My second husband's snore was a snore with a whistle in it. It drove me crazy. (I think that's why I divorced him.) Husband number three didn't snore but talked all night—which was worse. That marriage lasted three months. My present husband has a soft, pleasant snore, sort of like a cat purring. It doesn't bother me at all.

I have asked all my husbands if I snore and they said yes but only one disliked my snoring. So I think that perhaps whether snoring bothers a mate is in some way related to one's feelings about that person generally. Am I right?—Tallahassee

Dear Tal: You are right indeed. The whole story is in your second to the last sentence.

Dear Ann Landers: Am I losing my mind? Here are the facts: My husband is impossible. Yes, I pretend to love him. He is cheating on me left and right, yet I pretend everything is just fine. He is a lousy father. I pretend not to notice. He says cruel and insulting things to me in the presence of family and friends. I pretend not to hear. To be perfectly honest, I hate him.

I work but I cannot support myself and our two children on my salary. Must I spend the rest of my life pretending—with a man who turns me off the minute he steps into the house? It is impossible to talk to him. He knows everything. Also, he is a terrific liar. Am I crazy to go on like this? Even the children are aware that he is not like other fathers. What do you suggest?—Lady MacBeth In Lexington

Dear Lady: I suggest you separate from this man before you end up at the Funny Farm. See a lawyer and ask him to outline a husband's legal responsibilities, then perhaps you'll be less frightened.

Dear Ann Landers: Friday, one of the regular members of our bridge club was sick so I invited a substitute.

Just as I was serving the dessert the substitute shrieked: "My God, a rat!" She pointed to the baseboard and got up on her chair yelling: "I'm going to faint." It was no rat, Ann, it was a tiny mouse. I was stunned and humiliated. That incident spoiled my day. My husband says she is nuts and to forget it. Do you think she intentionally tried to embarrass me?—Unstrung In Upper Mich.

Dear Un: The woman probably has a pathological fear of mice and, weel mousies, of bananas. Forget it. Even the best of housekeepers has a wee mouse now and then.

Mother in Dilemma Over 'Grampa's' Advances

BY DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: We trusted this man, my mother remarried, and he helped out with our farm. But one day "Grampa" had one of my teen-age girls alone with him and he didn't act like a Grampa at all. He kissed her and embraced her- she tried to fight him off with words but was very scared. He asked her not to tell her mother, but she came home crying, and finally told me what had happened.

Now we avoid him, but it hurts my mother as she misses seeing the children.

What makes some men do things like that? We are scared to leave our girls there now and yet, what about Grandma, who loves them?

Mother In a Dilemma

Dear Mother: There are aging men who manifest an increased sex drive in unexpected shows of affection. I doubt if Grampa would ever harm your girls physically nor would he want to. Yet there are times when he is finding himself a bit difficult to control.

Could you arrange for visits to be paid when other adults are present? You don't want to lose contact with Grandmother.

Help the girls to understand that Grampa is not "all bad" but that they ought to pull away from him if he tries to become affectionate.

• • •

Dear Doris: I sent a wedding gift to a good girl friend and never received a thank you. Actually, I left it with her aunt as I was unable to attend the wedding and didn't know where to send it.

I wrote and asked if she'd received it, but no reply. Should I write again? — Ignored.

Dear Ignored: She has done the unforgivable — failed to acknowledge a gift. Yet she probably intends to — and that is just not good enough.

Life is long and you don't want to lose a good friend. Even if it is her fault. Write again: enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and say you are worried about the gift; that you chose it with care and would hate to think it got lost or broken before it got to her.

Make your letter newsy and friendly and assume the best. And ask for the briefest of notes to put your mind at rest.

• • •

Confidential to Nellie: I can not think of a reason in the world why games suitable for seniors — and many of those for juniors — would not make for hilarious fun for the members of your multiple sclerosis group.

So much of our disability is a thing of the spirit. When we read about workers who function amazingly in the absence of legs or arms or other physical equipment, we realize that the willingness to try things is the important thing.

The pessimist dwells on what he has lost; the optimist rejoices in what he has-left and makes the most of it. I'm sending you my leaflet "Party Games and Refreshments", "Tips in Organizing Friendship Clubs," and our list "Skits and Gmes for Groups of All Ages." Let's hear how you make out.

Canned Tuna Is Economical Addition

By ALICE DENHOFF

A wonderful way to bring the goodness of fresh vegetables to your table is in company with canned tuna in the fine form of gourmet dishes. Economical canned tuna in vegetable oil is one of your best buys in main dish foods. It is rich in important vitamins and minerals and in complete protein. Please do try:

TUNA KALE CASSEROLE

1 pound fresh kale
2 hard-cooked eggs
2 (6½ or 7 ounce) cans tuna in vegetable oil
3 tablespoons flour
½ teaspoon salt
1½ cups milk
½ cup shredded Swiss cheese
½ cup light cream
Dash pepper

Cook kale in ¼ inch boiling, salted water until tender; drain well. Cut through kale with scissors several times.

Sieve egg yolks for garnish. Chop egg whites; add to kale.

Transfer kale to 4 individual buttered casseroles.

Drain tuna; reserving 2 tablespoons tuna oil in saucepan. Blend flour and salt into oil. Gradually add milk and cook over low heat, stirring constantly until mixture thickens and comes to a boil. Add cheese, cream and pepper. Stir until cheese is melted. Stir in tuna.

Pour creamed tuna mixture over kale. Bake in 325 degree oven 15 minutes or until bubbly. Garnish with egg yolks. Serves 4.

For a quick dish, you can substitute 1 can cream of celery soup undiluted for the cheese sauce. Mix soup with last 3 ingredients. Instead of fresh Kale use 2 packages frozen cooked kale or spinach in ¼-quart baking dish. Arrange drained tuna on tcp of vegetable, pour sauce over tuna and bake as directed above.

For another delectable main course dish, there is:

TUNA VIENNESE

½ cup water
4 cups chopped cabbage
1 (6½ or 7 ounce) can tuna in vegetable oil
1 can (11 ounces) Cheddar cheese soup
½ cup milk
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon caraway seeds
2 tablespoons butter or margarine, melted
¼ cup fine dry bread crumbs

Bring water to boil in medium saucepan. Add chopped cabbage. Cover and cook 1 minute, or until wilted; drain.

Arrange half the cabbage in bottom of 1½-quart casserole; top with tuna, then cover with remaining cabbage.

Blend next 4 ingredients; pour over casserole.

Combine butter with bread crumbs; sprinkle over casserole.

Bake in 325 degree oven 30 minutes or until casserole is bubbly. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

"EXPRESS" TUNA DINNER

2 (6½ or 7 ounce) cans tuna in vegetable oil
1 (6 ounce) can sliced mushrooms
1½ cups cooked broccoli
1 can condensed Cheddar cheese soup
¼ teaspoon Tobasco

Combine all ingredients in a 1-quart casserole. Bake in 400 degree oven 25 to 30 minutes, or until heated through. Serves 4.

Spreading the Idea

Secret Pact on Defence Costs Hinted

OTTAWA (CP) — Is there a secret agreement between the United States and Canada that could force Canada to lose its $500-million surplus under the U.S.-Canada defence production sharing agreement?

Former prime minister John Diefenbaker and Conservative defence critic Michael Forrestall, member for Dartmouth-Halifax East, tried to get the answer in the Commons Friday, with no success.

Defence Minister Donald MacDonald told them to ask Trade Minister Jean-Luc Pepin, who was absent from the House.

Outside the Commons, officials in the trade department and the U.S. embassy refused to divulge any information.

Under the defence production sharing agreement, Canada has accumulated a $500.5-million surplus in military hardware sales since the arrangement took effect in 1958.

But suspicions have been raised that a memorandum signed by the Canadian and U.S. governments in June, 1963, called for a "rough balance" of trade under the pact.

The Canadian trade department will not even say whether such a memorandum was signed, much less reveal its contents.

U.S. sources were no more forthcoming. They suggested it merely made explicit a tacit arrangement dating back to 1959.

The question could be crucial because Washington has been pressing—as part of its push to stem its balance of payments deficit—for changes in the agreement as well as other U.S.-Canada trading arrangements.

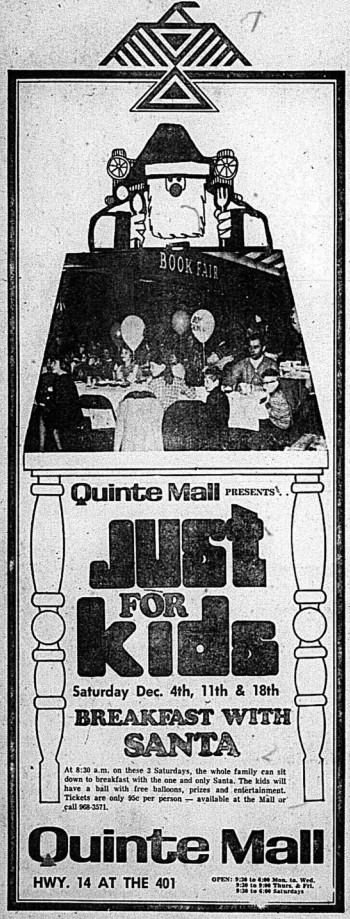
A written agreement to keep the sales under the agreement in balance could strengthen Washington's bargaining hand, putting that Canadian surplus in jeopardy.

Mr. Macdonald said several days ago that he is being pressed by the U.S. government and aircraft manufactures to buy a U.S. replacement for the Argus anti-submarine airplane. About 30 replacements would be needed, at a cost of about $200 million.

In one blow that would nearly wipe out the Canadian production surplus, although U.S. makers say much of the planes would be built in Canada.

The 1959 agreement, signed by the Diefenbaker government, was intended to give Canadian industries equal access with their U.S. competitors to defence contracts related to continental defence.

Parents Should Help Set School Objectives



SUDBURY (CP) — The involvement of parents, teachers and students in the setting and assessing of school goals and objectives was advocated Saturday by an Ottawa school official.

Doug Lawless, director of the Ottawa board of education, said in a speech here that the autonomy of the principal will be threatened unless the public knows that the school has clear-cut objectives and a built-in system of assessment.

Speaking at the final session of a conference of the Ontario School Trustes' Council, Mr. Lawless said autonomy only has meaning when it implies freedom to do something and that something should be constructive and in line with certain convictions and goals.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, MONDAY, NOVEMBER 29, 1971

Perry Chittick raises his arms for what he felt was a Belleville goal in Saturday's OHA Senior A bout with Kingston. Officials ruled it no goal however, but Chittick did count once in the 4-3 over Kingston. Belleville win. Mike Lovett is stretched across the Kingston crease while Ken Reid dumps winger Ray Johnston.

McConnell Earns Weekend Split

The Belleville Quintes split their OHA Senior A action this weekend, defeating Kingston 4-3 Saturday night but dropping a 6-3 Sunday verdict in Woodstock.

Wayne McConnell showed the scoring touch that made him Belleville's top marksman last season by rapping in three scores in Saturday's win over the Aces.

That right winger counted twice in just over a minute during the third frame to bring the Quintes back from a 3-2 deficit.

McConnell squared matters at 3:10 of the third when his long shot eluded a disgruntled Mike Lovett. His game winner came at 14.17 after Ken Reid of Aces had been banished for hooking. A drive from the blue line provided McConnell with his hat trick effort and the Quintes with their second win of the week over Kingston.

Belleville coach Gene Poirier was pleased to see McConnell approaching the form that made him a 22 goal scorer last season, but was unhappy over the less than relaxed physical effort by the Quintes. The home team received only two penalties throughout the game while Kingston was fingered three times.

Three goals in the final period assured Woodstock of their 6-3 victory over Belleville Sunday as the Royals gained sole possession of fifth place in the league standings.

The winners held a significant territorial margin directing 46 shots at Steve Reze, while Woodstock's Art Fraser was only called up on 26 times.

Al Ferguson tallied for Belleville in the first period, while Lorne O'Donnell and Paul Perras counted in the final frame. Ferguson added an assist on Perras' marker while George Gadsen picked up a pair of helpers.

The Quintes drew five of the game's eight penalties.

Harris Thumps Argos

VANCOUVER (CP) — Wayne Harris, called "Thumper" because of his crunching tackles from his middle linebacker position, recovered most of the plaudits following the Calgary Stampeders' 14-11 win over Toronto Argonauts in Sunday's Grey Cup.

"Wayne Harris is the greatest," said Stampeders' head coach Jim Duncan in the champagne-soaked Calgary dressing room.

"It was a defensive struggle; our whole defense played well, but Wayne is the greatest.

"He came out to cut off those sweeps and they didn't know where he was coming from."

Harris, named the game's most valuable player, previously had been named Canada's top lineman this year. He said the entire defensive team deserved the credit for the victory.

"The defensive ends, Craig Koiman and Dick Suderman, played a great game, they stopped Toronto's sweep and inside runs," said Harris.

Said Suderman was voted top Canadian in the game.

For Harris, the night was a lucrative one. He won a new car for his selection as the game's most valuable player, $1,500 for being named Canada's top lineman and the $1,000 which goes to each member of the winning team.

Suderman won an airline ticket for two to any destination CP Air flies.

Duncan, who has guided the Stampeders to the Grey Cup game in the last two years, with this year's win his first as head coach, said a fumbled punt, which led to Calgary's second touchdown, seemed to take the momentum from his club.

"We were playing the ball well to that point, but their defensive team really came on after that," he commented.

The punt was fumbled by Jim Sillye. Joe Vijuk picked up the ball for the Stampeders and pitched out to Roger Scales, who rumbled over for the touchdown.

"I told Jim not to charge the ball on punts," Duncan said. "I told him to back off and let the ball bounce if he had to charge it. It's all right now, though."

Sillye said the ball hit him on the shoulder pad and bounced away.

Stampeder defensive tackle Fred Jamora, who had a loose ball in his grasp but lost it with clear sailing for the goal line early in the game, said the wet conditions might have hampered him.

"I bent down to pick it up and it just sort of went squoosh, right through my hands," Jamora said. "It took a funny bounce after that and I just couldn't get it."

The Empire Stadium artificial turf, soggy after heavy rains, didn't hurt Argos' passing or the wet ball and his wet hands, said Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling.

Keeling, who threw an interception with less than two minutes remaining which gave the Argonauts first down on the Calgary 11-yard line, said he didn't throw a good pass on the play. Argonaut Dick Thornton intercepted the ball and returned it 54 yards.

"I was just going for the first down. But the ball was wet and I just didn't throw it like I wanted to," said the veteran quarterback. "I just couldn't throw very well. It's tough to get a grip on the ball when your hands are wet. You just can't seem to dry off."

Keeling praising Toronto's defensive team, said the Argonaut blitz was effective, especially in the second half.

Duncan singled out defensive tackle Jim Sillwagon for special mention.

"Sillwagon did more than anyone to dig our quarterback. He's so fast and so quick he forced our guards to go too wide."

On defence, "we knew we had to contain Theismann," Duncan said, "and we did a pretty good job."

Harris also agreed that containing Theismann was the key and said the defensive line had a big factor in keeping the rookie Toronto quarterback off-balance.

James said the defensive line had as good a game as they'd have had in any game this year.

"We knew we had to get to Theismann. We had to and we really kept the pressure on him."

Harris said he was "sort of looking" for Toronto running back Leon McQuay when Mc-Quay's fumble on the Calgary seven-yard line, recovered by Reggie Holmes of the Stamps, moved Argonauts' best chance of winning.

"He just slipped and fell, but we had him anyway," Harris said.

"The ball seemed to pop out when his arm hit the ground."

James said he knew how the Argonauts felt about the game.

Soggy Football

Scales Smiles Despite Loss

VANCOUVER (CP) — One man at least managed to crack a smile in the Toronto dressing room Sunday after the Argonauts suffered a 14-11 defeat at the hands of Calgary Stampeders in the Canadian Football League Grey Cup championship.

"Yep, that was my first touchdown ever," said guard Roger Scales, smiling as he recalled his third-quarter score that brought Toronto back from a 14-3 halftime deficit.

"That's just what we need to get us going," defensive back Marv Luster shouted at the time.

And indeed, the touchdown by the 27-year-old guard from Vernon, B.C., appeared to fire up the Argos.

The score came when Stampeder Jim Sillye fumbled an Argo punt on the Calgary 36-yard line. Toronto guard Joe Vijuk picked up the ball and tossed a lateral to Scales who had plenty of running room to the end zone.

The Toronto defence held Calgary on two sequences and quarterback Joe Theismann then brought the Argos back from their own 26 for a 37-yard field-goal attempt by Ivan Linterman.

But the kick went wide for a single point and from there on the Toronto offence couldn't seem to do anything right although their defence kept getting the ball back for them.

"I think our defence did more than to turn us around than my touchdown did," said Scales.

The biggest opportunity for Argonauts came when defensive back Dick Thornton intercepted a Jerry Keeling pass and ran it back to the Calgary 11 with less than two minutes remaining in the game.

On the next play, halfback Leon McQuay ran four yards. Theismann gave him the ball again for another run but the speedy back slipped on the rain-soaked artificial turf.

"Leon was trying to move the ball left so that we'd be in a position for a field goal," said guard coach Leo Cahill.

"He just slipped and dropped the ball."

The fumble was recovered by Calgary's Reg Holmes.

Still, Cahill would not point a finger at any player for having lost the game.

"I don't think after the game that they could all walk down the street with their heads high," the coach said.

"I told them they played as well as they could have and that with this team we could be back next year. I couldn't blame anybody. They all did a hell of a job.

"We made a couple of mistakes but those things can happen to anybody."

Theismann, the rookie quarterback from Notre Dame, also refused to admit to any faults by his team.

"I won't say they deserved to win it," Theismann said of the Stampeders, "because I think we deserved it just as much.

"But I will say they played a heck of a game. They have a great defence. But I want them to know we'll see them back in Hamilton next year."

Theismann was among the few Argo casualties but the only one the nose he suffered late in the second quarter did not prevent him from coming back for the second half.

"My eyes were watering from the blow on the nose so I asked the coaches to put Greg in until my eyes cleared and I was ready to go again in the second half."

Greg Barton, the temporary replacement in the last sequence of the second quarter, was brought back again for much of the fourth quarter.

"In all fairness to Joe I couldn't expect to start the game," said Barton who had shared the signal-calling with Theismann through most of the season until he suffered a broken finger in September.

Other injured Argos were tackle Jim Stillwagon who was again limping on the sore right knee that has been bothering him for the last four games.

Stillwagon played out the game and said later he expected the knee would heal with rest and that no operation would be required.

Linebacker Dick Aldridge said he re-injured his left leg which had been hit in the last Eastern Football Conference playoff game against Hamilton Tiger-Cats.

"It happened on the second play I was in on today and I felt I couldn't handle the job so they put Pete Martin in my place," said Aldridge. "Pete did a fine job but I was disappointed with myself."

Aldridge's disappointment was controlled, compared to that of Don Barbaro, president of the Argo fan club, who sat weeping in a corner of the dressing room.

But the players had reason to believe they had not lost their fans when Toronto Alderman Joe Piccinnini came into the dressing room and announced:

"I want all you guys to know that we're real proud of you and you're all invited to our party at the hotel tonight."

Meanwhile, halfback Harry Abofs claimed innocence on a last-minute play of his that gave Calgary the ball on the Toronto 48-yard line.

Abofs was back to receive the Calgary punt in the last minute of the game but he didn't manage to get under the ball and as it bounced, he kicked it out of bounds.

Stamps Champs

VANCUVER (CPO) — They'll be talking for a long time about the wild finish of the 1971 Grey Cup game, which Calgary Stampeders won 14-11 Sunday over Toronto Argonauts.

The victory and its 23-year span of frustration for Calgary. And it ended Toronto's proud boast of never having lost a cup game since the coolest became an east-west affair 20 years ago.

It took the Argonauts 19 years to win this berth in the national football playoff and it took three minutes and 16 seconds to break their hearts.

The clock read 3:10 and Toronto reef only a three - point field goal away from a tie when Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling saw Toronto defensive half Dick Thornton—who went both ways Sunday—intercept on his own 54.

Thornton raced down the right sideline and it was last-man Keeling who brought him down on the Calgary 11.

Toronto quarterback Joe Theismann, rookie from Notre Dame, sent fullback Leon McQuay to the seven. Then he sent McQuay sweeping left, hoping at least for a decent field-goal angle.

McQuay slipped on the rain-slick artificial turf and his left knee hit the ground as the ball flying loose. The officials said it was Reg Holmes who recovered, even though it as Fred Andrusky who fell on the loose ball on the Argonaut line.

Toronto held Calgary and Jim Furlong punted out to about the 45 yard line where receiver Harry Abofs kicked the ball out of bounds. Abofs said later the move was unintentional, that the ball hit his leg. The officials ruled that he had kicked it and purposely and awarded the ball to Calgary on the predominantly Calgary-partisan crowd of 34,584 cheered approval.

The Stampeders were running out the clock. Then, suddenly, there was a frantic scramble as halfback Rudy Linterman of Calgary, and defensive tackle Jim Sillwagon and linebacker Gene Mack of Toronto.

Calgary was penalized 15 yards for rough play and Linterman left the game. There was no indication from the officials to the public-address announcer reported that the Calgary had been ejected.

End Herm Harrison and halfback Jesse Mims scored Calgary touchdowns and both were converted by Larry Robinson.

Toronto's only touchdown came from offensive guard Roger Scales on Ivan McMillan's Argos' 19-year-old kicker. moved the other five points on a field goal, a convert and a single off a field goal attempt. He was short on a 42-yard try which could have made the difference.

It was the first Grey Cup football on artificial turf.

Harrison's touchdown at 7:17 of the first quarter opened the scoring. Keeling had moved the Stamps from mid-field to the Toronto 14. He threw incomplete as flanker Jim Hendrickson turned the wrong way. Then he fired in to Harrison in the end zone and Robinson was good on the convert.

At the second quarter opened, Theismann fired complete to tight end Mel Profit on a pass-and-run play that covered 25 yards to the Calgary 11. Profit had a second Theismann pass flip off his fingers and Thelismann threw to McMillan in the end zone, only to see Robinson knock the ball out of the halfback's hands.

MacMillan, with 1:22 gone to the quarter, was good on his 18-yard field goal try.

It was Linterman who set up the Mims touchdown. He leaped high for a Keeling pass and defensive halfback Tim Anderson slid right under Linterman while attempting the tackle. Linterman went from the Argos' 40 to the 24 before Anderson finally nailed him.

Mims ball popped loose but Calgary retained possession when officials ruled the whistle had blown.

Hugh McKinnis tried but lost a yard when his try Jim Corrigall's feeling failed and Mims, who found a wide hole when the Argos' defence trapped Sillwagon and Mims burbled six yards for the touchdown. Robinson's conversion was the last scoring play for Calgary, ahead 14-3 at the half-time break.

Toward the end of the first half, Theismann was rapped in the nose. He later told reporters that it was broken—and took himself out of the game but he could stop the eyes from watering.

Greg Barton, who had seen little regular-season action and none in the playoffs because of Theismann's hot start, was on hand, went in but couldn't move the Argos.

Then came MacMillan's abortive field goal attempt.

Theismann and Barton shared the quarterback duties from there on.

The Toronto touchdown came early in the third quarter and with explosive suddenness.

Stalled on the 42, Argos sent Zenon Andrusyshyn in to punt. Jim Sillye fumbled the catch and Joe Vijuk picked up the ball, he was to say Vijuk tossed the ball to offensive guard Scales who lugged 38 yards to the end zone surrounded by other members of the kicking squad.

With the score 14-10, Argos tried the only razzle-dazzle of the game when Theismann handed off to halfback Bill Symons who ran right, wheeled, and fired a pass back to the quarterback. It was incomplete.

Theismann moved the Argos in deep with passes to Thornton and flanker Jim Henderson but Toronto stalled on the Calgary 27 and MacMillan's wide field goal try went for a single to end the scoring.

It was a tough defensive battle, and when it was over, Calgary's middle linebacker—Wayne Harris—had been named the outstanding player of the game. The award to the top Canadian went to Jim Suderman, defensive line-mate of Harris.

Harris' prize, a new car, capped a lucrative week for the man who has made Western Conference all-star every one of the 11 years he has played in Canada. He won $1,500 when he was named the outstanding lineman in Canada three days before and another $2,000 as a member of the Grey Cup-winning team. The losing Argos got $1,000 each.

Suderman won a pair of flight tickets for anywhere in the world that the donating CP Air flies.

The official statistics showed that Toronto led Calgary 13-8 in first downs and 182-111 in yards passing. Calgary ruled the ground game, 103 to 66 yards. Toronto picked off three Keeling passes.

Theisman Top Passer

VANCOUVER (CP) — Joe Theismann, Toronto Argonauts' rookie quarterback, was the top passer in Sunday's Grey Cup game but he was also the least productive runner.

He hit on eight of 14 pass attempts to cover 189 yards and allowed no interceptions.

The scrambling quarterback also carried 10 times, mostly on option plays where he made a good yardage, but Calgary Stampeders' defensive line hauled him down in his backfield often enough to limit him a net loss of six yards on his rushing.

For Calgary, Jerry Keeling completed six of his 16 passes for 111 yards and one touchdown. He also threw three interceptions.

Keeling carried four times and gained nine yards.

Among the running backs, Calgary's Hugh McKinnis and Toronto's Leon McQuay each carried 12 times. McKinnis totalled 50 yards and McQuay 39.

Jesse Mims of Calgary made the ball 11 times, as did Bill Symons of Toronto. Mims picked up 37 yards and Symons 33.

Rudy Linterman was used most often as a receiver by Calgary, catching two tosses for 36 yards.

Herm Harrison, McKinnis, Gerry Shaw, and Don Henderson each took one.

Mike Eben was the favorite receiver on the Toronto squad with three receptions for 41 yards. McQuay and Mel Profit each pulled in two.

Defensive end Larry Brame of Toronto was credited with eight tackles and two assists, the best record of the game, and team-mate Marv Luster made seven.

Brame's counterpart on the Calgary team, Craig Koiman, made eight tackles but received no assists.

Jim Stillwagon of Toronto made five tackles, the same number as the Stampeders' Wayne Harris, John Helton, Tony Robinson and Dave Crabbe.

Harris, middle linebacker, was chosen the game's outstanding player and defensive end Dick Suderman, who made six tackles and put pressure on the Toronto quarterbacks, was selected the top Canadian.

Jim Sillye of Calgary was the top punt return man with 19 yards in seven runbacks; Al Rankin got 18 yards in four runs and Howard Starks five yards in two carries.

Harry Abofs of Toronto took six punts for 18 yards and Peter Paquette five for nine yards.

Jim Furlong punted 14 times for Calgary with an average of 38 yards while Zenon Andrusyshyn kicked 11 times for Toronto and averaged 42.4 yards.

Leon McQuay took one kickoff return for Toronto and gained 3 yards and Dave Raimey took two for 19 yards.

NFL Veterans Return

By THE ASSOCIATED RPRESS

Veterans Day arrived a bit late for National Football League quarterbacks this year. Three of the walking wounded, field generals returning from summer skirmishes that had put them out of commission, joined the autumn offensives Sunday.

Two of them won the battles but lost the wars. For the third, it was just the other way around.

Joe Namath, exploding on the scene in New York's Shea Stadium bombshells en route to a 258-yard aerial attack only to miss the mark in the last minute as the Jets bowed to a San Francisco 49ers 24-20.

And Bart Starr, cooly directing the Green Bay Packers' attack, watched as his troops committed tactical blunders that sent the Packers down to a 20-21 defeat at the hands of New Orleans Saints.

But Sonny Jurgensen, marching Washington into enemy territory, was backed out of action and could only watch as Billy Kilmer launched the orders that carried the Redskins to a 30-13 victory over Philadelphia Eagles.

In Sunday's other clashes, Baltimor Colts whipped Oakland Raiders 37-14, Cleveland Browns beat Houston Oilers 27-24, Denver Broncos defeated Pittsburgh Steelers 23-10, Cincinnati Bengals stomped San Diego Chargers 31-0, Minnesota Vikings smothered Atlanta Falcons 24-7, Buffalo Bills humbled New England Patriots 27-20 and St. Louis Cardinals swatted New York Giants 24-7.

In tonight's televised game, Chicago Bears invade Miami to face the American Conference East-leading Dolphins.

As 62,936 fans screamed their approval, Namath trotted in to replace Jets' starter Bob Davis, injured in the second quarter.

He proceeded to connect on 11 of 27 passes, including touchdowns of 57 and 29 yards to Rich Caster and a 22-yarder to Ed Bell. But with New York on San Francisco's 19 with only 7 seconds remaining, his pass to Bell was intercepted in the end zone by Johnny Fuller.

"I don't feel I played well ... I've got to improve my mental state because I didn't feel at ease," Namath said.

Vic Washington, former Ottawa Rough Rider, and John Brodie did most of the damage for the 49ers. Washington ran two yards for one touchdown and hauled in a 22-yard Brodie pass for another and the San Francisco quarterback scored the third from one yard out.

But it was Bruce Gossett's 25-yard second-quarter field goal that made the difference as the 49ers regained the National Conference West lead.

"You can't blame Starr. I thought he played quite well," Packers coach Dan Devine said. Starr hit on eight of 17 passes for 116 yards but four fumbles and two interceptions, one off rookie Scott Hunter who came on in the final period, gave the Saints the game.

They rode five field goals by Charlie Durkee, a Green Bay castoff, Doug Wyatt's 35-yard interception return for a touchdown and Jim Strong's one-yard scoring run to victory.

Jurgensen was sidelined in the second period when he was tackled and reinjured his left shoulder as he moved the Skins into position for the first of two Curt Knight field goals.

That brought on Kilmer, who hit Roy Jefferson with a 27-yard strike for their first touchdown ... but it was Mike Bass's 35-yard touchdown run with an interception that enabled them to turn back the Eagles and move back within a game of first-place Dallas in the NFC East.

"We took what they gave us," Sonny Unitas said after the Colts, moving within a game of the Dolphins, blanked Oakland for 52 minutes while Unitas directed three touchdown drives and Jim O'Brien booted three field goals.

The Raiders, whose AFC West lead over Kansas City was trimmed to half a game, gave Baltimore the ball six times on interceptions while the defense yielded 306 yards. Unitas' 4-yard run for two Colts touchdowns and George Blanda passed to Fred Biletnikoff for both Raider scores.

"We played a real touch game and the defence must get a major share of the credit," Cleveland coach Nick Skorich said after the Browns gained sole possession of first place in the AFC Central Division. They intercepted three Oilers passes and recovered two fumbles, the offence, Leroy Kelly ran for 107 yards and Bo Scott, another refugee from Ottawa, scored two touchdowns.

Floyd Little, whose fumble gave the Steelers their first touchdown, then made up for it by scoring two as the Broncos dropped Pittsburgh a game behind Cleveland.

The Belgans, two games back of the Browns, scored the first shutout in their four-history, limiting the Chargers' offence to 130 yards and pulling off four John Hadl passes. Fred Willis punched over from two and a three yards out for two Cincinnati touchdowns.

Clint Jones charged through the snow for one touchdown and Bill Brown ran for two more as the Vikings' running backs teamed for 240 yards rushing to bowl over the Falcons.

The Bills finally won a game after dropping their first 11 as Dennis Shaw combined with J. D. Hill on touchdown passes of 11 and 47 yards against the Patriots.

"You'd think we won the Super Bowl," Coach Harvey Johnson shouted above the bedlam in the dressing room.

The Giants gave up two interceptions and a fumble in the opening seven minutes of play and, the Cardinals converted them into a pair of touchdowns and a field goal to start their romp.

Hornets Buzzing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Galt Hornets buzzed through two weekend victories to pad their Ontario Hockey Association Senior A lead to 10 points over second-place Barrie Flyers.

After a 9-6 home-ice triumph over Owen Sound Crescents Saturday night, the Hornets travelled to Oakville where they whipped the Oaks 5-3 while the Flyers managed only a 3-3 tie against the Terriers in Orillia Saturday night.

In other Sunday games, the Terriers squeezed out a 1-0 overtime victory over the Aces in Kingston while Woodstock Athletics humbled Belleville Quintes 6-3 in Woodstock.

Pete Brennan was the big gun for Galt on Saturday as 2,200 fans watched him score three goals, including the winner. Skeeter Tebbutt added a pair while Pete Speyer, John Beechey, Ron Hergott and George Westfall scored the others.

Bob Tunstead paced Owen Sound with a pair of markers while Paul Donnn, Bill Abbott, Drew Haldane and Terry Keeling completed the Crescents' scoring.

Teal and Hergott carried most of the scoring load Sunday with two-goal efforts each while Dave Cressman fired the final Galt goal.

In Kingston, 1,019 fans went home disappointed as Doug Kelcher scored at 2:06 of the sudden-death overtime period to hand Aces their 11th loss in 17 games.

Detroit Dumps Rangers, Habs

By IAN MacLAREN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

It has been a long, unrewarding season for Detroit Red Wings, particularly veteran captain Alex Delvecchio and rookie notably the Detroit brass headed by general manager Ned Harkness.

So the weekend spot a breath of fresh air through Detroit Olympia as the Wings registered successive National Hockey League wins at the expense over New York Rangers and Montreal Canadiens.

The back-to-back victories over the East Division leaders 4-3 over Montreal Sunday and 3-1 over the Rangers—tightened up the top of the division standings and finally gave the Wings some breathing space at the lower end of the division.

ALEX DELVECCHIO

Elsewhere Sunday, the Rangers tripped Philadelphia Flyers 4-3, Chicago Black Hawks rocked Toronto Maple Leafs with three third period goals for a 4-1 win and California Golden Seals took third Baltimore Blades six times on interceptions while the defence yielded 306 yards. Unitas' 4-yard run for two Colts touchdowns and George Blanda passed to Fred Biletnikoff for both Raider scores.

Detroit's Alex Delvecchio, who had been through the good years and had in two decades of play with the Wings and who could quit this season rather than save his long years in a part-time role, is as much a part of the Detroit resurgence, temporary though it may be.

He assisted on the insurance goal by Guy Charron against New York then opened the first-period scoring against Montreal. It was followed up 23 seconds later by team-mate Bill Collins.

Jacques Lemaire halved the count at 10:13 of the second period. Al Karlander tallied the winner 29 seconds later and Mickey Redmond added insurance score at 15:51.

The Canadiens may have lost more than the game. Defenceman Guy Lapointe was struck on the face, near his right eye, by a Karlander shot in the first period. He was believed to have suffered a fractured bone.

Bryan Campbell, Chico Maki and Danny O'Shea triggered three goals in a span of just over five minutes of the third period at Chicago to settle their weekend contests with the Leafs.

The win kept the Hawks' unbeaten string at home, extending it to 11 games, including 10 victories. It was a fighting game with Toronto's Jim Harrison getting involved in two skirmishes.

He and Chicago defenceman Keith Magnuson were rewarded with double minors in the first period, then Harrison and Magnuson's partner Jerry Korab exchanged punches in the middle period.

Toronto's Rick Ley was sent off with a game misconduct when he disputed O'Shea's goal at 13:58 of the third period which followed by 58 second's Maki's fourteenth of the year.

Vic Hadfield, with two goals and an assist, paced the free-bounding Rangers at Philadelphia where the New Yorkers sought to have their first win Saturday setback at Detroit by shelling Flyer goalie Doug Favell with 39 shots.

The explosive Golden Seals got two goals each from Wayne Carleton and Bobby Sheehan en route to their win over Buffalo and padded their lead as the highest-scoring team in the West with 79 goals. New York tops the NHL with 103 goals.

NFL Veterans Return

By THE ASSOCIATED RPRESS

Veterans Day arrived a bit late for National Football League quarterbacks this year. Three of the walking wounded, field generals returning from summer skirmishes that had put them out of commission, joined the autumn offensives Sunday.

Two of them won the battles but lost the wars. For the third, it was just the other way around.

Joe Namath, exploding on the scene in New York's Shea Stadium bombshells en route to a 258-yard aerial attack only to miss the mark in the last minute as the Jets bowed to a San Francisco 49ers 24-20.

And Bart Starr, cooly directing the Green Bay Packers' attack, watched as his troops committed tactical blunders that sent the Packers down to a 20-21 defeat at the hands of New Orleans Saints.

But Sonny Jurgensen, marching Washington into enemy territory, was backed out of action and could only watch as Billy Kilmer launched the orders that carried the Redskins to a 30-13 victory over Philadelphia Eagles.

In Sunday's other clashes, Baltimor Colts whipped Oakland Raiders 37-14, Cleveland Browns beat Houston Oilers 27-24, Denver Broncos defeated Pittsburgh Steelers 23-10, Cincinnati Bengals stomped San Diego Chargers 31-0, Minnesota Vikings smothered Atlanta Falcons 24-7, Buffalo Bills humbled New England Patriots 27-20 and St. Louis Cardinals swatted New York Giants 24-7.

In tonight's televised game, Chicago Bears invade Miami to face the American Conference East-leading Dolphins.

As 62,936 fans screamed their approval, Namath trotted in to replace Jets' starter Bob Davis, injured in the second quarter.

He proceeded to connect on 11 of 27 passes, including touchdowns of 57 and 29 yards to Rich Caster and a 22-yarder to Ed Bell. But with New York on San Francisco's 19 with only 7 seconds remaining, his pass to Bell was intercepted in the end zone by Johnny Fuller.

"I don't feel I played well ... I've got to improve my mental state because I didn't feel at ease," Namath said.

Vic Washington, former Ottawa Rough Rider, and John Brodie did most of the damage for the 49ers. Washington ran two yards for one touchdown and hauled in a 22-yard Brodie pass for another and the San Francisco quarterback scored the third from one yard out.

But it was Bruce Gossett's 25-yard second-quarter field goal that made the difference as the 49ers regained the National Conference West lead.

"You can't blame Starr. I thought he played quite well," Packers coach Dan Devine said. Starr hit on eight of 17 passes for 116 yards but four fumbles and two interceptions, one off rookie Scott Hunter who came on in the final period, gave the Saints the game.

They rode five field goals by Charlie Durkee, a Green Bay castoff, Doug Wyatt's 35-yard interception return for a touchdown and Jim Strong's one-yard scoring run to victory.

Jurgensen was sidelined in the second period when he was tackled and reinjured his left shoulder as he moved the Skins into position for the first of two Curt Knight field goals.

That brought on Kilmer, who hit Roy Jefferson with a 27-yard strike for their first touchdown ... but it was Mike Bass's 35-yard touchdown run with an interception that enabled them to turn back the Eagles and move back within a game of first-place Dallas in the NFC East.

"We took what they gave us," Johnny Unitas said after the Colts, moving within a game of the Dolphins, blanked Oakland for 52 minutes while Unitas directed three touchdown drives and Jim O'Brien booted three field goals.

The Raiders, whose AFC West lead over Kansas City was trimmed to half a game, gave Baltimore the ball six times on interceptions while the defense yielded 306 yards. Unitas' 4-yard run for two Colts touchdowns and George Blanda passed to Fred Biletnikoff for both Raider scores.

"We played a real touch game and the defence must get a major share of the credit," Cleveland coach Nick Skorich said after the Browns gained sole possession of first place in the AFC Central Division. They intercepted three Oilers passes and recovered two fumbles, the offence, Leroy Kelly ran for 107 yards and Bo Scott, another refugee from Ottawa, scored two touchdowns.

Floyd Little, whose fumble gave the Steelers their first touchdown, then made up for it by scoring two as the Broncos dropped Pittsburgh a game behind Cleveland.

The Belgans, two games back of the Browns, scored the first shutout in their four-history, limiting the Chargers' offence to 130 yards and pulling off four John Hadl passes. Fred Willis punched over from two and a three yards out for two Cincinnati touchdowns.

Clint Jones charged through the snow for one touchdown and Bill Brown ran for two more as the Vikings' running backs teamed for 240 yards rushing to bowl over the Falcons.

The Bills finally won a game after dropping their first 11 as Dennis Shaw combined with J. D. Hill on touchdown passes of 11 and 47 yards against the Patriots.

"You'd think we won the Super Bowl," Coach Harvey Johnson shouted above the bedlam in the dressing room.

The Giants gave up two interceptions and a fumble in the opening seven minutes of play and, the Cardinals converted them into a pair of touchdowns and a field goal to start their romp.

Top Stars On Block

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Any major league team willing to spend $25,000 could have Tony Conigliaro or Clete Boyer today as baseball launched its winter meetings with a draft of minor league talent.

Conigliaro, the one-time American League slugger, and Boyer, one of the majors' top third basemen until exiled to Hawaii for personality problems, were the most glamorous names available for the relatively cheap asking price.

There were relief pitcher Dick Hall and catcher Clay Dalrymple of the American League champion Baltimore Orioles, for instance. And power hitting Danny Walton, a one-time minor league player of the year, too.

Joe Moeller, a long-time relief ace of Los Angeles Dodgers; Bill Zepp, who won nine games for the Minnesota Twins two years ago, and former Minnesota outfielder Brant Alyea were among some of the other well-known baseball names in the bunch.

While the 24 major league teams dipped into the minor grab bag to open business officially at this week-long affair, baseball was also back stage intrigue of possible big trades.

Among players reportedly dangled for trade bait were Sam McDowell, Cleveland lefthanded pitching ace; slugging third baseman Ron Santo and left-hander Ken Holtzman of Chicago Cubs; shortstop Mark Belanger; second baseman Dave Johnson and outfielders Frank Robinson and Paul Blair of Baltimore; outfielders Mickey Stanley of Detroit Tigers, and pitchers Fritz Peterson and Stan Bahnsen of New York Yankees.

Winnipeg Woman Big Grey Cup Winner

VANCOUVER (CP) — Apart from the prestige, the difference between winning and losing meant only $500 apiece to the players involved in Calgary's 14-11 Grey Cup football victory over Toronto on Sunday. But on the sweepstakes front, the difference was $75,000.

And Pearl Smith, an ailing 72-year-old Winnipeg woman who passed up a certain $62,500 to take a shot at the first-prize $100,000, collected the big bundle.

Second prize of $25,000 is the Manitoba government Grey Cup sweepstakes went to Larry Mabee, 25, an apprentice electrician in Winnipeg.

Maybee said after the game that he had talked to Mrs. Smith when their names were drawn as sweepstakes finalists, trying to convince her to split the $125,000 total prize regardless of which team won the game.

"I wanted us to go for a 50-50 deal, but she was undecided," Maybee said.

"I guess you could say I was disappointed $75,000 worth," Mabee said of the game, in which Toronto kicked a chance to win or tie in the dying minutes.

He said he'll put his sweep winnings into bonds, after paying off a $2,000 debt.

Mrs. Smith and her husband, a retired department store manager, were too ill to make the trip to Vancouver to watch the game. Her nephew, Frank Pierce of Coquitlam, B.C., filled in for the Smiths — on the edge of his box seat.

He said his aunt was "always quite lucky."

"I thought if she had a ticket on Calgary, she'd be sure to win, but I started to doubt my superstitions near the end of the game."

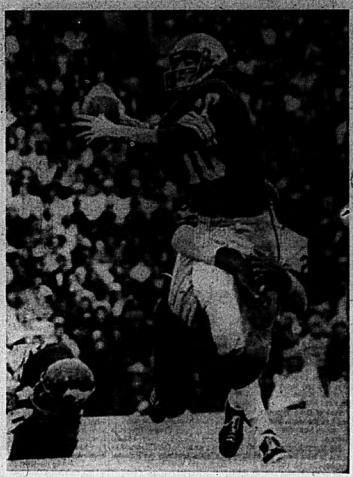
Pierce had good reason for doubt.

From the time the 34,584 spectators watched Governor-General Roland Michener perform the ceremonial kickoff until the closing few minutes of the game, Calgary's first Grey Cup victory since 1948 looked safe.

The score was always close, but Toronto's vaunted offence still hadn't scored a touchdown when Calgary quarterback Jerry Keeling lofted a long pass from deep in his own territory, intended for Hugh McKenzie. Dick Thornton of Toronto picked it off, ran the ball back to the Calgary 11-yard line, and suddenly Toronto was right back in the picture with less than three minutes to go and the score 14-11.

Leon McQuay carried to the Calgary seven, then swept wide to the left on the next play. If he made the seven yards, Toronto would be ahead; if he were stopped, Toronto would be set up for a game-tying field goal attempt.

But McQuay slipped on the water-soaked artificial turf, fumbled the ball as he fell, and Calgary recovered.



Toronto held, forcing Calgary to punt on third down, but receiver Harry Abofs kicked the ball out of bounds on the Toronto 50. Officials ruled the move was intentional, giving possession once again to Calgary.

That was it. The final score remained 14-11. Calgary players picked up $2,000 apiece, Toronto players $1,500; Mr. Mabee $25,000, and Mrs. Smith $100,000.

Off-Track Betting Discussed

TORONTO (CP) — The nuts and bolts of the Ontario government's plan to set up off-track betting will be discussed at two days of public hearings opening Wednesday.

A committee under the chairmanship of A. R. Dick, deputy attorney-general, will hear representations from interested parties on the plan, which Premier William Davis expects to have in operation at the start of the thoroughbred racing season next spring.

The premier said last week he has learned that Justice Minister John Turner will soon introduce amendments to the Criminal Code permitting provinces to license, operate and regulate off-track betting.

Establishment of the government-controlled operation, first announced by Mr. Davis last July, will end more than four years of confusion and controversy that began in the province when a betting shop opened in Welland in July, 1967.

The shop was closed down and the proprietor charged with keeping a common betting house. He pleaded that the operation was legal because he acted only as a messenger, transporting money to the legitimate betting outlets at the track.

The charge was dismissed and the Crown failed to overturn the decision in Ontario Supreme Court. When the Supreme Court of Canada refused to hear a further appeal, betting shops sprouted all over the province early in 1969.

They soon ran into new legal snares.

Responding to complaints from Ontario and other provinces, the federal government passed legislation in June, 1969, making it an indictable offence to place a bet for a paying client.

The shops attempted to circumvent the legislation by selling scratch sheets to their customers and placing their bets free. The Crown continued to prosecute, since placing bets for "consideration" also was illegal, but the proprietors argued that buying the scratch sheets was "optional."

Their activities were further curtailed by the Jockey Club, which operates the major Ontario tracks, Claiming that some bets placed at the shops failed to reach the mutuel windows, the club barred shop messengers from the premises.

Premier Davis said last week he has received "very, very few complaints" since his announcement last July.

"People are currently betting off the tracks," he said. "They are doing so in a way that is legally doubtful. The government is losing money and the tracks are losing money.

"Our aim is to give control to this betting and give stability to the racing industry."

Toronto Stadium Not Likely

TORONTO (CP) — Premier William Davis of Ontario says a new stadium for Metropolitan Toronto is an unlikely bet in the next five years.

He says the earliest likely target date is 1978, a Commonwealth Games year.

"This week Metro decided to make a bid for the 1978 Commonwealth Games," Davis said in an interview. "We had given Metro our moral support. I emphasize moral at this early stage."

A high school quarterback and baseball fan, the premier is a strong stadium booster but concedes that the time is not ripe.

Three Quebecers Discuss Province

TORONTO (CP) — Three political spokesmen, recalling the crisis in Quebec a year ago, looked to the future of the province Sunday and saw its relationship to the rest of Canada in differing perspectives.

Parti Quebecois leader Rene Levesque said the province should be ready to secede within five years; Quebec Justice Minister Jerome Choquette said separatism is not the answer, and State Secretary Gerard Pelletier defended the federal stand during the crisis.

All spoke of the aftermath of the insurrection, which culminated in the murder of Quebec Labor Minister Pierre Laporte after he and British Trade Commissioner James Cross were kidnapped.

Mr. Levesque decried the War Measures Act—invoked during the kidnappings—which gave police extraordinary powers of arrest and detention.

If seceding took place, he suggested there could be a type of common market between Quebec and the rest of Canada.

Mr. Pelletier defended the implementation of the War Measures Act, while conceding that the act might have been a contributing factor to the murder of Mr. Laporte. However, he added:

"I think the measures were justified because of the climate and the danger of an escalation."

Mr. Choquette took issue with Mr. Levesque's suggestion of a common market.

Under such a scheme, he said, both countries would have to have a common monetary policy so that one would not be trying to fight inflation while the other sought to stimulate its economy.

In determining such a policy, Quebec, with 25 per cent of the population, would be constantly overshadowed by Canada with 75 per cent, he said.

Dockers Drift Back To Jobs

NEW YORK (AP) — Dockworkers of the International Longshoremen's Association drifted back to work Monday at ports from Maine to Texas, under court orders to end the walkout which started Oct. 1 over a new contract.

"It was enough," said a longshoreman in a vanguard of 80 men at Manhattan's piers. Ten docks also reported to unload Caribbean cruise ships.

The Port of New York has 18,000 longshoremen who had not worked for 58 days.

Lonely Winter Job

Browsing through a magazine, 23-year-old lifeguard David Strachan basks in 85-degree temperatures in an indoor swimming pool at a hotel in Toronto. Although the water is maintained at a balmy 82 degrees, chilly weather discourages patrons, but digby he must stay on duty in case someone comes in for a dip.

Cadieux Fears Canada May Be Exporting Jobs

DETROIT (C) — Canadian Ambassador Marcel Cadieux said today that a 10-per-cent import surtax "remains in effect, we in Canada will be exporting jobs—not products."

"We will lose them at a time when Canadian unemployment is dangerously high," he said, "persistently higher than in the United States."

Cadieux was speaking to the Economic Club of Detroit. Text of his remarks was released to the press in advance.

He turned around the traditional U.S. argument that what is good for the United States is good for her trading partners.

"A weakened Canadian economy is not good for the United States," he said. "We are your best customer. We have been your most hospitable field for investment. We are a secure and reliable source of raw materials and products vital to your economy."

If the 10-per-cent tax and other measures "that are so injurious to us" are but temporary emergency measures, "then all will be well again."

However, if Canada "must accept such conditions for a long period then we will be compelled to make basic readjustments in our trading patterns."

And he warned:

"I find it hard to believe that we could so drastically rearrange the common structures of our economies without severely affecting our relationships in other aspects."

Reviewing the many fields of U.S.-Canada co-operation in defence, in aid to underdeveloped countries, in tackling environmental problems and the like, he added: "I do fear that if old structures are abandoned, in the end, the machinery in other fields may be strained."

No-fault Insurance Favored

TORONTO (CP) — A majority of persons taking part in a CBC survey here indicated they are in favor of no-fault automobile insurance.

Sixty-seven per cent of 971 Canadians polled in the survey, conducted for the CBC television program Weekend Sunday night, said they favored no-fault insurance. Another 16 per cent said they would favor the plan if it were cheaper than existing insurance schemes.

The biggest supporters of no-fault insurance were British Columbia residents—78 per cent favored the plan in which no legal liability has to be established and a driver deals only with his own insurance company.

Such a system now is in effect in British Columbia, and Manitoba. Ontario drivers were 66 per cent in favor of no-fault insurance.

health ministry office early today and a car showroom and telephone exchange building Sunday night.

In the Catholic Bogside area of Londonderry, troops used tear gas and rubber bullets Sunday night to disperse a crowd of stone-throwing youths. Three persons were reported arrested in another clash in the city between troops and a crowd which tried to break down a wire barricade.

A 15-year-old youth and a nine-year-old boy were injured when a petrol gelignite bomb exploded at a water pumping station in the town of Dungannon, southwest of Belfast.

British Troops Grab Four Terrorists

BELFAST (CP) — British troops grabbed four terrorist suspects high on their wanted list and netted an arms cache in raids on Roman Catholic homes in Belfast early today.

Spokesmen said five other persons had been arrested during the weapons raids in the Ballymacarrett district.

The soldiers uncovered eight rifles, three pistols, a sten-gun, a sub-machine-gun, nearly 3,000 rounds of ammunition and more than 30 pounds of gelignite.

Northern Ireland generally was quiet today following a bloody weekend in which three persons were killed and more than 30 explosions set off in terrorist attacks by the Irish Republican Army.

The upsurge in IRA attacks after a comparative lull in the last two weeks was seen as the organization's response to British assertions that the troops had the terrorists on the run.

Game Of Decade

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

A college football "game of the decade" is set for the night of Jan. 1 in Miami's Orange Bowl, with mighty Nebraska returning to the site where it won the 1970 national championship to defend it against Alabama.

Nebraska and Alabama, two of the five unbeaten teams in United Sleties college football, were rated first and third in last week's Associated Press poll and undoubtedly will rate first and second this week in view of Alabama's 21-7 mauling Saturday of previously unbeaten Auburn.

"We feis all along we picked the right two teams," said Bill Ward, chairman of the Orange Bowl selection committee which invited Nebraska and Alabama a week ago, "but I do feel kinda lucky about the way things turned out."

Alabama turned Johnny Musso and a blitzing defence loose on Auburn. Musso punched out 155 yards in 32 carries and scored twice while quarterback Terry Davis also ran for two touchdowns.

In other games Saturday, ninth-ranked Arizona State battered Arizona 34-10, 10 Louisiana State ripped Tulane 30?; Utah edged Wyoming 24-23; Florida State whipped Pitt 31-13, and Iowa State shot down San Diego State 48-31.

Good Guys Get Northern Win

The Good Guys clipped the Hornets wings with a 3-2 win in Northern Electric Hockey action Sunday.

Tom Peters paced the Good Guys with a pair of goals with Jim Hamilton adding the other. Netminder Don Ashley came up with his second outstanding performance in as many games for the Good Guys. Scoring for the Hornets were Bill Goodfellow and Gord Sine.

In the other game the Dukes dunked the No Stars 4-1. Rick Bedard scored twice for the winners with singles going to John Brunette and Bob Lloyd. Bob Bailey counted for the No Stars.

Skyjackings by Arabs Termed Part of Red Plot Against NATO

LONDON (AP) — The Arab skyjacking of four Western airliners last year was part of a worldwide Communist plot that delivered secret Atlantic Alliance documents to the Soviet Union, a new British spy book claims.

Pouches containing top-secret reports on a NATO air-sea exercise and the military budget were taken off the planes before they were blown up at Cairo airport and in the sands of the Jordanian desert, Edward H. Cookridge, a German-born espionage specialist, says in Spy Trade, published today.

The September skyjacking — and a fifth attempt which failed in a blaze of gunfire above the English Channel—put the world spotlight on the Arab guerrillas of the Marxist-Maoist Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, who did the job. The organization has now virtually vanished from the Arab scene.

The air piracy had little to do with Arab nationalism, claims Spy Trade.

"It was, in fact, part of a worldwide Communist conspiracy, although not necessarily stage-managed from Moscow. Cookridge, a Second World War intelligence agent and author of a half dozen books on spying, espionage and secret services.

Another was Cecilia Martinez Fernandez from Colombia. A fourth was a Costa Rican student, Alvara Fuentes Iglesias, the book says.

Even Leila Khaled, the girl guerrilla briefly jailed in Britain after she failed captured an Israeli El Al plane over the English Channel, may have been born in Honduras.

Wilson Fears Rightists May Oust Ian Smith

TORONTO (CP) — Extremists in Rhodesia might remove Prime Minister Ian Smith from power, if they feel his actions are giving too much power to the country's black majority, British Opposition Leader Harold Wilson said Sunday.

However, he did not elaborate on his fears of action by extremists but said he is concerned while Rhodesians might not live up to the terms of a settlement reached last week between Britain and Rhodesia.

Mr. Wilson, here on private business, told a news conference he expects his Labor party will take the view that the settlement does not meet five principles the British government had previously demanded for Rhodesian independence. The agreement is scheduled to be discussed Wednesday in the British House of Commons.

One of the five principles was unimpeded progress toward majority rule. Mr. Wilson criticized Mr. Smith's "method of selling" the agreement in white Rhodesians by emphasizing there would not be black majority rule soon. Rhodesian prime minister's lifetime.

The former British prime minister said it is impossible, under the terms of the settlement, to predict the number of years for majority rule to be achieved but he added it will probably be reasonable time.

Questioned about his recent proposal for an eventual coalition between Northern Ireland and Ireland, Mr. Wilson said: "What is the alternative but more bloodshed and murder?"

BOSTON (AP) — Ten men who identified themselves as members or supporters of Sinn Fein, the political arm of the Irish Republican Army, heckled Harold Wilson, Britain's former prime minister, here Sunday and put an early end to his news conference.

The men, led by a man who identified himself as Seamus MacGlolla, head of Sinn Fein, charged that British troops were the terrorists in Northern Ireland and challenged Wilson's defense on the issue of internment of political prisoners in Northern Ireland.

Lawrence Looking for Ideas To Improve Health Care

TORONTO (CP) — Ontario Health Minister A. B. R. Lawrence says private groups and others should come forward with ideas on how to improve the province's health-care system, and he will do his utmost to provide the money needed to implement their research.

Mr. Lawrence, back from examining British and Swedish health programs, said in a release interview money should be available to union groups, doctors, universities, businessmen or anyone else with good ideas.

The minister, whose department provided $2.5 million in health research this year, said the ideas must be "accessible and responsive."

No one will be happy learning that $2 million is to be spent on health care "if that night he or she has a sick child and cannot get a doctor," he said.

After speaking to European health administrators, Mr. Lawrence found that "we are all singing the same song—in Sweden or Britain or California, or you name the jurisdiction."

"We're all struggling to maintain some kind of control on health and social-service spending, and we are all very cognizant of the need to relate our health services to our other services of social support.

"We are all going at it in different ways but the objective is the same."

End to Aid To Greece Asked

NEW YORK (AP) — Lady Amelia Fleming, expelled two weeks ago from her native Greece, flew here from London Saturday to plead for an end of American aid to the Greek government.

"If foreign aid were refused, then the junta would fold," the 62-year-old widow of Sir Alexander Fleming, Scottish discoverer of penicillin, told an airport news conference.

She said she plans to appear before the Senate foreign relations committee this week in Washington.

CUSO to Stay Out of Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian University Service Overseas decided at a weekend meeting to stay out of Canada.

Dedicated to taking professional and technical competence to under-developed or emerging nations, CUSO ordered the idea of moving into the domestic arena.

The 150 delegates, representing 1,200 students in 17 countries, decided any domestic move on their part would only be an extensive duplication of efforts already being made by such groups as the Company of Young Canadians and Frontier College.

But the meeting did urge the CUSO workers and their host nations be given greater say in how to utilize resources available to CUSO.

NDP Re-elects Leader

CHATHAM, N.B. (CP) — J. Albert Richardson of Newcastle was re-elected leader of the New Democratic Party of New Brunswick here Saturday during a one-day convention which, federal party observers said, followed constitutional procedure "to the letter."

There was no confrontation between party members of the party and Waffle supporters, Donald MacDonald, federal NDP president, said the provincial party is again in control of "its own destiny."

Mr. MacDonald and Clifford Scotton, federal party secretary, who attended the convention as observers, are expected to recommend that the temporary suspension of the provincial party be lifted.

The federal council voted to suspend the provincial party earlier this month after moves and Waffle supporters broke into two factions, each electing its own leaders and executive.

Mr. Richardson was unopposed Saturday.

Nutritional Values Explained For Different Types of Milk

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Would you discuss the different types of milk on the market—that is, skim, whole and 2 per cent? Which would you suggest for a growing child?—Mrs. H.

Let's start with whole milk. While, actually, different kinds of cows produce milk with varying butterfat content, "whole milk" is pretty much standardized by law. Usual content is 3.5 per cent fat, and about 160 calories to a full cup. The fat contains vitamins A and D, but more vitamin D may be added. It is needed for utilization of the calcium and phosphorus, in which milk is rich.

Next is 2 per cent, meaning that nearly half the fat has been removed, down to 2 per cent. This does not alter the protein, calcium or phosphorus values, but does reduce the vitamins A and D.

Many pediatricians recommend 2 per cent milk because youngsters all need the protein and mineral content, but not all need as much fat as whole milk provides. It depends on the child. If the 2 per cent milk is not already fortified with vitamins A and D, the doctor can prescribe a vitamin supplement.

Skim milk goes a long step further in removing the fat, leaving only about 0.1 or 0.2 per cent. This brings down the calorie level, and the reduction in vitamin content to a very low figure, but the protein and minerals (calcium and phosphorus) are still there.

Evaporated milk has about half of the water removed. Vitamin D is added. This can be reconstituted by adding water.

Condensed milk is evaporated milk to which milk sugar (lactose) has been added, increasing the calorie value.

Still another! (and often useful) form is dried non-fat milk, frequently used when calories must be limited. It is, when you get right down to it, skim milk with all the water removed, so when it is reconstituted by adding water, you have the same characteristics as skim milk.

Buttermilk has the same food value as skim milk.

Yogurt can be made from either whole milk or skim milk, so the food value will correspond to whatever was used. Again the protein-calcium-phosphorus content is maintained.

Suggesting which kind of milk to give a growing child depends on the child, on what else he eats, whether he is too fat or too thin. Best let your doctor guide you here. If he is remarkably overweight child is far better off with fat-fat or skim milk, while the thin child can make good use of the calories in whole milk.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Where does the term "plastic surgery" come from, and does cosmetic surgery of the nose leave prominent scars? Would you recommend plastic surgery for someone emotionally bothered by a misshapen feature?—E. D.

"Plastic" means that something has the capability of being molded, or shaped, so "plastic surgery" involves the reshaping of some part of the body (not always the face). The term for constructive and cosmetic surgery are also used.

Surgery on the nose usually leaves no visible scars at all, since the incisions ordinarily can be made inside the nose.

In your final question, you plastic surgery is quite often done because someone is emotionally bothered by some feature. The question has to be answered in terms of how much emotional turmoil is involved and how truly misshapen the feature is.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I salt everything before I taste it. Sometimes in the morning I get a taste in my mouth like iodine. Would it be possible to get too much iodine from the iodized salt I use?—M. W.

Yes, it is quite possible. Change your salting habit.

The bidding:

Opening lead—ace of hearts.

This deal occurred in the first Bermuda Bowl world championship, way back in 1950, in the match between Great Britain and the United States. Oddly enough, the bidding was identical at the two tables, both teams arriving at four spades.

At the first table, with the U.S. holding the North-South cards, the British West started out with the ace and another heart, declarer (Sam Stayman) ruffing the second lead.

Stayman then played the ace and another spade. West rising with the king and leading a third round of hearts. Declarer ruffed, played a spade to the queen and returned to his hand with a club to the ace.

When West's queen fell on the ace, Stayman easily made the remaining trumps and the clubs and the ace of diamonds for a score of 620 points.

At the second table, with Great Britain this time North-South, the play went differently. West (John Crawford) chose the singleton queen of clubs as his opening lead. Declarer let that hold, well aimed shot was that South West now.

Declarer won with the ace and played the ace and another spade, towards dummy's queen. Crawford went up with the king and made the dramatic but necessary play of a low heart.

East won with the jack, returned a club which Crawford ruffed, and declarer eventually had to lose a diamond trick for down one.

So the outcome was that the U.S. team gained 720 points on the deal as a result of Crawford's sparkling defense.

Tomorrow: Technique.

House Leaders to Huddle Over Tax Bill As Slow Progress Is Proving Problem

OTTAWA (CP) — House leaders from all parties were expected to huddle today to negotiate the fate of the government tax bill.

Since the Commons began debating the bill in September, government spokesmen have reiterated their aim of getting the bill through Parliament by the end of the year.

But progress has been slow. After three months the Commons, sitting in committee to study the bill section-by-section, has given approval to only 75 of the bill's 253 provisions, many of them minor.

With less than a month left, the government is in a tough position.

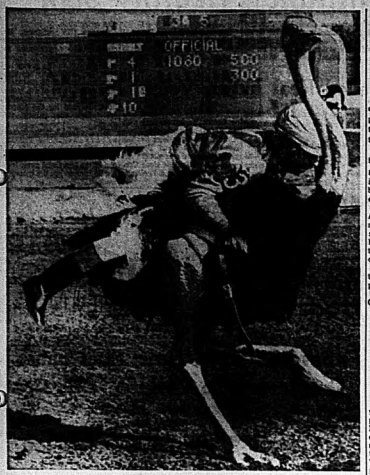
New Democrats and Social Crediters probably would settle for government amendments in a few key areas.

Both parties want more generous tax treatment of co-operatives and credit unions, beyond concessions made in two series of government amendments introduced over the last two months.

And the NDP has supported the Conservatives in demanding a lighter proposal for taxing basic livestock herds than is contained in the bill.

But the Conservatives say they want the bill split.

They would co-operate in getting it through the Committee and passed by Christmas if the government would agree that only popular measures such as personal tax rate reductions and increased basic exemptions would be implemented on Jan. 1.



Other measures—which the Conservatives maintain are too complicated to deal with by then—would be proclaimed sometime in the new year following a enabling motion passed in the House.

The Commons has been dealing with the sections in groupings agreed to by House leaders, whereby each grouping has been allotted one or two days for debate.

Government hopes of having the subclauses within the groupings passed during the allotted periods have not, in most cases, been realized.

The last grouping, taxation for corporations, is scheduled for Monday.

That means the House leaders will have to lay some plans by the end of the day as to where to go next.

Spock Is Choice Of People's Party

DALLAS, Tex. (AP) — The newly-created People's party picked Dr. Benjamin Spock of New York as a stand-in presidential candidate Saturday night with the understanding that he would step aside if a "bigger national figure" can be persuaded to take the party's reins.

Only 90 of the some 200 delegates to the convention of various United States activist and peace groups voted for a presidential nominee, with Spock beating Jack Hampton, 60, of Santa Monica, Calif., on the second ballot, by a vote of 47 to 43.

The problem of inducing a nationally-known figure to accept the nomination of a coalition of groups ranging from Spock's New party to the Gay Liberation Front had been debated throughout the day. The convention began Thursday.

The noted baby doctor and peace activist received a standing ovation when he said there "are millions of Americans disgusted with the present political parties and in despair over seeing the country sliding toward disaster."

Policeman Bruised at Grey Cup Parade

VANCOUVER (CP) — A Calgary Stampeders' fan provided some unscheduled excitement in the Grey Cup parade Saturday when he crashed the procession in a camper truck and collided with a motorcycl policeman.

Constable David Chamberlain spilled into the street before television cameras and thousands of parade-watchers, but needed only minor hospital treatment for abrasions.

Anthony Michael White, 55, of Forstburg, Alta., was charged with impaired driving. He was released after posting $500 bail well before the start of Sunday's Canadian Football League championship between the Stampeders and Toronto Argonauts.

Two other minor accidents occurred as the army of floats, bands and beautiful girls wound along the 1¼-mile route in the city's east end and into Empire Stadium, where about 12,000 people had paid for seats to watch both the parade and a salute to British Columbia's Centennial Year.

Gerald Hobbis of New Westminster, B.C., took a bad spill from his Penny Farthing bicycle on a steep ramp leading into the stadium and was taken to hospital with abrasions and a possible fractured wrist.

A motorcyclist riding in a team representing an Alberta branch of a fraternal order had the most embarrassing experience—skittering off his bike right in front of the royal box. He carried on after dusting himself off and righting his machine.

In the box, a galaxy of federal and provincial cabinet ministers, mayors, Miss Grey Cup contestants and other notables sat stoically through the three-hour program in 47-degree weather blessed by the occasional ray of sun.

The crowds lining the route leading to the stadium generally were quiet, with only ripples of applause for the more imaginative floats.

The 134 entries took about one hour and 40 minutes to pass a given point on the route, and many spectators came equipped with blankets, lawn chairs or pillows to view the procession in relative comfort.

There were hundreds of floats, including representations from all CFL cities. The Nova Scotia float took top prize in the non-commercial category with a replica of the schooner Bluenose, Centennial in that category went to the city of Ottawa. "Ottawa the beautiful" was shown as a giant butterfly made of flowers.

Chretien Says Indian Militancy Healthy Sign

OTTAWA (CP) — Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien says the current vocal militancy of Indians is a healthy sign, and has renewed his own attack against Harold Cardinal, leader of the Indian Association of Alberta.

"It's difficult but it's not a bad sign that now they speak up and they express their grievances. . . . That's a healthy sign because for too long they were not saying anything."

Mr. Chretien was speaking on CTV's Question Period, taped for broadcast Sunday.

Referring to his current dispute with Mr. Cardinal, he repeated his comment made in the Commons Wednesday that "some people are trying to build up some sort of little bureaucracy around themselves and they are not serving the people they should serve."

The blow-up with Mr. Cardinal began last Sunday when the Indian leader told a television interviewer that Mr. Chretien was withholding funds for an Indian cultural centre in Alberta to try to force the end of an Indian school strike in northeastern Alberta.

The minister told the House of Commons committee this week that the delay was related to sloppy book-keeping by the Indian Association of Alberta.

On the CTV program, Mr. Chretien repeated that the association had not accounted for the bulk of $230,000 in federal money given to the group last year for community development and training programs.

He said $130,000 of the money had gone into administration, "but not used for the purpose for which the money was given."

Mr. Cardinal told the Indians affairs committee Thursday that $165,000 of the funds had been sent a month before the end of the last fiscal year, leaving no time to put the money to work.

Iroquois Confederacy Called Real Indian Voice

BRANTFORD (CP) — An Indian woman told Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien Saturday he is dealing with the wrong people in talking to elected band councils.

The incident occurred after the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians, representing six southwestern Ontario bands, presented its position paper to Mr. Chretien at the Mohawk residential school near the Six Nations reserve.

Clara Powless, a supporter of the Confederacy council, a rival to the Six Nations elected council, said the association "is no way represents the Indian people."

"Why didn't you hear the Confederacy chiefs?" she asked at the meeting attended by about 300 persons.

Mr. Chretien said under the Indian Act his department had no alternative but to deal with the elected band councils.

Mrs. Powless, wife of Confederacy chief Coleman Powless, said the elected councils did not represent all Indians since Confederacy supporters did not take part in band elections.

Revision Said Needed In Law About Language

NORTH BAY (CP) — The commissioner reviewing French-language education legislation in Ontario said Sunday he will recommend changes to existing law but does not believe the nearby community of Sturgeon Falls deserves special treatment.

Dr. Thomas Symons said in an interview it "clearly is time" the existing legislation, passed three years ago, is reviewed and revised. He did not specify what changes he would recommend.

However, he said an "entire policy for the province" must be established and the government must "fit Sturgeon Falls within that framework."

"We cannot find an ad hoc solution for Sturgeon Falls and then try to apply it to the rest of the province."

French-speaking students at Sturgeon Falls secondary school demonstrated for 10 days last September to back up demands for establishment of separate schools for French- and English-speaking students.

The demonstrations in the predominantly-French speaking community of 7,000 stopped when Education Minister Robert Welch announced the appointment of Dr. Symons, president of Trent University in Peterborough, to look into student complaints.

Dr. Symons, who met informally with representatives of both the French and English-speaking communities in North Bay and Sturgeon Falls, said he does not know the reason for difficulties at Sturgeon Falls.

"Most bilingual schools in the province are working very well indeed. Sturgeon Falls secondary school is the exception."

Hull Fire Loss Said Millions

HULL, Que. (CP) — A fire at an E. B. Eddy plant Saturday night sent 12 firemen to hospital suffering from smoke inhalation.

The blaze broke out on the first floor of a three-storey brick structure used for making tissue.

While Eddy company vice-president, George Neil, said no damage estimate could readily be made, a fire official said damage could go as high as $3 million. And while Mr. Neil said cause of the fire could not be determined, the fire official said the probable cause was an over-heated conveyor belt system.

A huge crack was caused in the side of the building, but the greatest damage was in pile of stock consisting of 1,500-pound rolls of paper, tons of processed tissue and cardboard boxes to pack the tissue in.

Three Held For Having Firearms

TORONTO (CP) — Police arrested three Toronto men on weapons charges in separate incidents during the weekend.

A police constable confronted a man behind a service station and found a rifle pointed at him. He talked the man into giving him the .22 calibre rifle.

Michael William Doherty was later charged with pointing a firearm, possession of a restricted weapon and possession of a weapon dangerous to the public peace.

In a second incident, William Harry Wright was charged with wounding his brother, Verdun F. Wright, 55, of Toronto. The victim was in serious condition in hospital after he was shot twice in the stomach.

In another case, Ernest John Davies was charged with having a dangerous weapon, dangerous use of a firearm and being a common nuisance. The charge was laid after three shots were fired from a shotgun. There were no injuries.

Teenagers Are Held For Holdup

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Two teen-agers, sought by police following a $50,000 bank holdup in downtown Detroit Wednesday, a block-and-a-half from police headquarters, were arrested here Friday night.

Windsor police said the youths, both 19, surrendered peacefully at a city home. There was no sign of the third person believed involved in the robbery and no guns or money were recovered.

Police said they were holding the two youths for questioning by American authorities and possible extradition. No charges have been laid.

Preserving Dignity, Owner Folds Quintes

Trade Studied
Cautious Hope Rules Parley

ROME (CP) — With an air of cautious optimism, finance ministers from 10 of the leading non-Communist countries are grappling today with major problems of world trade and finance, hoping to head off developments they fear would wreck years of international co-operation.

Few of the ministers, including Canada's Edgar Benson, expressed hope that any firm settlement will be reached to the difficulties resulting from the United States decision Aug. 15 to impose a 10-per-cent surcharge on imports and suspend the dollar's gold convertibility.

But sources close to a number of delegates, notably U.S. Treasury Secretary John Connally, said there is some optimism—however guarded—among the ministers that the basis for agreement may be laid.

If a consensus does emerge, particularly on the issue of currency realignment, it would not necessarily be announced at the end of the two-day meeting.

Sources say it would more likely provide a confidential framework for bilateral discussions scheduled over the next two months between U.S. President Nixon and a number of major world leaders, including Prime Minister Trudeau.

Benson said in an interview Monday no one should expect any final solutions from the meeting. There would be no dramatic results, he added.

Monday, deputy finance ministers and other financial experts from the 10 countries—known as the Group of Ten—emerged in tight-lipped silence from a meeting lasting more than two hours.

Asked why there had been no official statement, a U.S. spokesman said: "I read it as an indication that they had some pretty substantial things on the table."

If Monday's meeting did produce new proposals, they would have to be presented to the ministers today for consideration and possible ratification.

Deputies from the European Common Market countries represented stayed behind after the Canadian, U.S., Japanese, and other countries left the meeting, leading some observers to conclude the European delegation may have introduced new suggestions.

Some sources said the U.S. has already proposed a compromise package calling for an average 11-per-cent increase in the value of most major currencies against the dollar in return for suspension of the surcharge.

Adding to speculation about the meeting's importance was an earlier statement by Paul Volcker, U.S. undersecretary for monetary affairs, who said the meeting would be extremely brief. Why had it been prolonged? observers asked.

No Pressure On Canadian Dollar --- Benson

ROME (CP) — Canadian Finance Minister Edgar Benson says there is no pressure from the United States for an upward revaluation of the Canadian dollar.

Commenting on reports that the U.S. has offered to remove the 10-per-cent import surcharge imposed Aug. 15 in return for an average 11-per-cent revaluation of major currencies, Benson said today the freely-floating Canadian dollar is not included in any such package.

Revaluation Demands Withdrawn

LONDON (CP) — The United States averted a threatened breakdown of the Rome monetary talks by agreeing to withdraw a statement demanding an average 11-per-cent revaluation of major world currencies.

Published reports here today confirm information from other quarters that the U.S. made the demand at the Monday meeting of deputy finance ministers as the price the world had to pay for removal of the American 10-per-cent import surcharge.

When other delegates protested that issuing such a statement by the U.S. would jeopardize the ministerial Group of Ten meeting, which opened today, the Americans agreed to withdraw the statement which it had circulated among some reporters.

Some delegates are reported to have said flatly that if the U.S. insisted on an average 11-per-cent revaluation, there would be no point in holding the ministerial talks.

Senior Hockey Future Unclear

By ERIC EMERSON
Sports Reporter

Team owner Ken Murphy informed OHA president Clarence "Tubby" Shultz that the Belleville Quintes would be unable to honor further playing commitments in the eight-team Senior A loop. It was the sixth season for the Belleville franchise, which had operated under the team name of Mo-Hawks until purchased by the local hotel owner this season.

Mr. Murphy's decision is attributed to disenchantment of some elements of the team with financial arrangements, geographic location, inept play by the Quintes during the past month and falling attendance at the Belleville Memorial Arena home games.

"I think that it's better that we withdraw now, while we can still maintain a little dignity", said the Belleville owner. "We did win our last home game and two out of our last four, so it isn't as though we're pulling out after losing five in a row. The way things were progressing, however, we could very well have finished with only a handful of hockey players."

Murphy refused to lay the blame for his team's withdrawal on either financial losses or at the feet of the Belleville fans. "Certainly we were taking a loss, but it wasn't really that great", he said of the Quinte's abbreviated 17-game schedule this season.

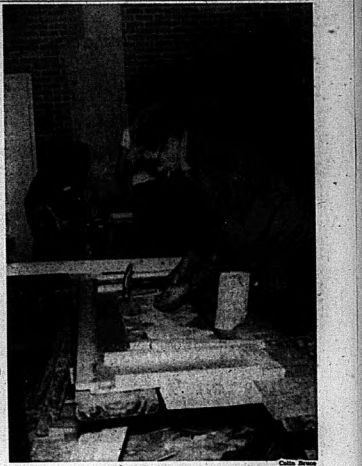
Of the faltering fans support he offered, "Yes, when attendance did start dropping off, it really dropped off, but you don't really blame the fans. Let's face it, some games we were lousy." The team was averaging 800-900 fans per game.

An apparent bone of contention to some players was the financial arrangement of $25 dollars "off" game fee for each player with a share the wealth arrangement if the team realized a profit. "Maybe it wasn't fair that some veteran players were making the same as a rookie, but we felt that in taking over a losing team we'd at least try that arrangement for one year." "Maybe we made a mistake", the club owner said.

Murphy made it clear that the team's dissatisfied element did not extend to the majority of players, but added that, "it only takes three or four who aren't putting out to spoil things."

The decision to withdraw was not a spur of the moment one. "It's been something I've been thinking about for three weeks. I knew there was something wrong after we dropped the Orillia game (a 4-0 loss on Nov. 6). We could have won that game with a little effort but it wasn't there," advised the owner.

The fate of the Belleville franchise and the team's $1,000 performance bond will be decided upon later by the Ontario Hockey Association. The league will meet in Toronto Thursday night to discuss the matter and an executive meeting on Dec. 8 will decide the final outcome.



"About the only thing I can say for sure right now is that Belleville's remaining games

Golda Meir Will Talk With Nixon

JERUSALEM (Reuter) — Israeli Premier Golda Meir leaves today for Washington for crucial talks with President Nixon on policy differences between Israel and the United States.

Officials said the discussions will centre on two main problems—the resumed supply of Phantom fighter-bombers which the U.S. administration has held up for several months, and the question of a Suez canal settlement with Egypt under U.S. auspices, which has been deadlocked for some time.

Nixon's Peking Visit Is Set for Feb. 21

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — President Nixon will arrive in Peking Feb. 21 to begin a historic visit aimed at improved relations with China after more than 20 years of enmity between its Communist rulers and the United States.

The eagerly-awaited date was announced jointly by the White House and Peking Monday, almost five months after presidential adviser Henry Kissinger opened negotiations with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai during a secret mission to the Chinese capital last July.

The start of the president's visit will be the only detail disclosed in a one-sentence statement, and the White House said that its duration and other information would be released today.

Nixon will be flying to China three months before undertaking a similar peace mission in the Soviet Union next May and slightly more than two weeks before the first primary election of the 1972 presidential campaign is held in New Hampshire March 2.

His journeys to the capitals of the two Communist powers are widely regarded as having important overtones in the coming campaign, in which the president is expected to seek election on his record of winding down in the Vietnam war and finding ways to reach peaceful agreements with the Communists.

Pakistan Accuses India Of Expanding Hostilities

From REUTER-AP

The East Pakistan high command has accused India of throwing more troops into the fighting along the East Pakistan border and of expanding the hostilities.

A command spokesman said Monday night in Dacca, capital of East Pakistan, that while the situation was not deteriorating, the fighting was broadening gradually as the Indians opened new fronts and brought in more men.

The Pakistani government announced that President Agha Mohammed Yahya Khan has asked UN Secretary-General U Thant to post UN observers on the Pakistani side of East Pakistan's border to report any frontier violations by India. Yahya's message also drew attention to the rapidly deteriorating situation on the subcontinent.

Diplomatic sources said Thant would concentrate on consulting the five great powers, but unless Pakistan or India asked formally for the convening of the council, it was unlikely it would be called into session.

If the secretary-general were to attempt to send observers without a formal request by the council, the Soviet Union would be expected to object in deference to India's expected opposition. The Western powers and China are believed sympathetic to the Pakistan request.

Reports continued to reach New Delhi of East Pakistani guerrilla activity throughout the strife-torn province.

The Press Trust of India news agency, quoting reports reaching the West Bengal town of Krishnagar and Bangla Desh rebel government headquarters in Calcutta, reported heavy Mukti Bahini (Liberation Army) pressure in widespread areas of East Pakistan.

The Pakistan army spokesman reported very lively attacks in the northern Sylhet region, the Mymensingh sector in the north, and in the Jessore region to the southwest. He reported "fierce fighting is continuing" at Kalampur, 18 the Mymensingh area, but said the Indians were repulsed with heavy casualties in Sylhet and in Jessore.

Storm Causes Havoc

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

A snowstorm which killed three persons east of Montreal and another in Ontario and caused traffic havoc in Toronto, where four inches of snow caused scores of minor accidents, blew eastward today.

Behind it the first real fall of the season brought out the snowplows and the salting trucks in many southern Ontario centres. Light snow and flurries continued today. However, in southwestern Ontario and the Niagara Peninsula the fall was barely an inch. It may reach as much as eight inches in Montreal by mid-afternoon.

Blowing snow which obscured train tracks was blamed by Quebec Provincial Police for an accident at St. Lucien, about 50 miles east of Montreal, where three St. Lucien residents were killed when their car was hit by a train at a level crossing.

At Niagara Falls a 21-year-old Crystal Beach, Ont., woman, Donna Kay, was killed in a single car accident which police blamed on slippery road conditions. She was a passenger in a car driven by her husband William, 22.

Falling temperatures during the next few days are expected to keep the snow from melting. Provincial Police in eastern Ontario warned that conditions were treacherous. The snow was expected to end in Ottawa during the afternoon.

At Toronto four inches of heavy, wet snow blowned in from Lake Ontario on a southeast wind caused police to close off several streets until sand trucks could reach the scene. One accident involvet eight cars.

Some Air Canada flights were delayed briefly.

North of Toronto about 1½ inches blanketed Orillia and was capped with freezing rain, making roads slippery.

They were also slippery in eastern Ontario where side streets in the Brockville and Kingston areas were in bad shape. CFPR at Brockville said five inches had fallen by 8 a.m.

Band an Expensive Project

By MARGARET HAYLOCK

BLOOMFIELD — Prince Edward county councillors will be invited to confer with county school trustees to discuss reasons why a high school band cannot be bought for a song.

Quintes

will be forfeited, naturally, but those that have played will stand," said Mr. Schmale.

All players have been released from their contracts and are free to join another team. "I imagine there'll be a few phones ringing," interjected veteran Belleville Senator Rene. "the Belleville players would probably be interested in playing for Kingston if they were contacted, but it's going to be pretty tough on those from Peterborough. It may mean a lot more driving for them to play for Barrie or Orillia."

It was this geographic location that Murray felt was yet another reason for Belleville's failure to provide a team which could compete adequately in the Senior A loop. As he explained, "We're so far away from many of the other centres that it's almost impossible to bring in players that have made it pretty difficult to compete with the big guys."

Organization of a band at Prince Edward Collegiate Institute was discussed by trustees through a motion, forwarded by county council, would cost an estimated $25,000 to $30,000, according to earlier investigations by members of the board of education.

"In fairness to their interest they should be updated on our efforts to establish a band," commented trustee Edward Rutter during a school board committee meeting.

He explained trustees definitely have tried to organize a school band and the project remains under consideration. It was learned some time ago that if instruments were purchased and a music teacher hired for students the program could cost from $25,000 to $30,000.

Director of education John McNeil recalled that trustees had considered the purchase of instruments but first wanted to determine the extent of student interest.

"It wasn't very reassuring for the size of the school," he remarked.

Mr. McNeil added the initial cost for instruments would be from $5,000 to $10,000.

George Flower, chairman of the Board of Education, explained that a committee including trustees James Plomdon, Clare McPaul and Everett Robinson had been selected to examine the possibility of organizing a school band.

This committee agreed there was no point in initiating a program without a capable instructor. His salary involved an estimated $15,000.

Trustee Everett Robinson said the project was "laid to rest temporarily" because the failure to obtain instruments by tender made a lack of student interest. He added the band did not seem "very feasible." In view of the financial situation confronting trustees.

Edward Rutter added one of the major considerations in formation of a school band was the creation of a suitable practice area. No suitable area for soundproofing was available at PECI.

He commented that the school band would have to become part of the education program and not an extra-curricular activity.

"The thing is not as dead as it may appear to be," he said. Later in the meeting, Mr. Rutter observed that discussion of a school band among trustees represented an initial start in a program of education through music which could be developed and continued through high school.

He reminded fellow board members that bands visiting PECI on two occasions to play for students in an effort to stimulate their interest.

Chairman Flower asked that it be noted for the record that PEDHSSA principal Earl Bax discussed the proposal for a school band with trustees last February and pointed out it would be very expensive. He recommended consideration of a band should be delayed until 1972, a voluntary band organized on an extra-curricular basis later was mentioned.

At the suggestion of trustee Hutton Martin, board members were asked to meet with members of county council for further discussion of all sour notes on the score at the suggested band.

Lunch Meat Recalled

Company officials from Swift Canadian are advising residents of the Trenton and Belleville area to check any cans of PREM luncheon meat they may have in their homes.

An underprocessed can has been turned up in the Trenton area and the cans are confirmed reports of more in the district.

Cans subject to this underprocessing are numbered on the top of the can from 1 to E 246 inclusive.

Company spokesman say to return the cans to the place of purchase.

The action was taken voluntarily by the company as a precautionary measure. No incidents of sickness have been reported as a result of eating any of the meat.

Direct Dialling Proves Popular

Belleville - area subscribers are using direct long-distance dialling sooner than Bell Canada expected.

The Quinte district was linked into direct distance dialling two months ago.

Bell originally expected 75-80 per cent of long distance subscribers would use the new system immediately, with the remainder joining in later, George Thompson, Bell's Belleville area manager said yesterday.

"We sort of under-guessed," he added. "We find almost 90 percent . . . now are going through on direct dialling."

Students Request Ruling on Trip

BLOOMFIELD (Staff) — A six-member student delegation from Prince Edward Collegiate Institute met with school trustees last night to ask if board members have decided to waive "arrivederci Roma".

In connection with a proposed student trip to Rome.

Spokesman for the PECI pupils, Donna McNeil, said that chaperones needed for the trip do not have to be teachers. If teachers from PECI accompany the student tour they will be forced to forfeit one week's salary.

Miss McNeil added if 15 students make the trip a former PECI Latin teacher would be asked to chaperone. If 30 persons join the trip a French and chaperone has been selected and a third can be asked if 45 students wish to visit Rome.

It was noted by George Flower that the county school board must consider its liability in the event of mishaps.

If students are accompanied by teacher - chaperones the board's insurance company will provide complete coverage, said Flower, policy also will be applicable if parents, chaperoning student on a trip authorized by the board of education, accompany the group.

If parents chaperone, however, on a trip not sponsored under the auspices of the board, no liability is assumed and therefore no insurance coverage is extended.

Mr. Flower said he understood that teachers were willing to chaperone the tour but had asked for full pay during the trip.

He remarked that the board of education "took exception" since the company concerned was in effect, paying their way. Teachers then, according to the chairman, expressed reluctance to accompany students to the eternal city.

Mr. Flower promised the student delegation a definite answer concerning permission for the trip in a very short time. He explained the matter must be left with the board because five trustees were absent at a committee meeting and could not join that night's discussion.

Merchants Urged To Stay Open

PICTON (Staff) — Picton merchants yesterday voted to extend store hours for the holiday season from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. beginning December 13 through the Christmas shopping rush.

At a meeting attended by only 10 of the town's 70 store owners and managers it was agreed shops would remain open until 5.30 p.m. each Wednesday until Christmas beginning December 1, since at least three stores have planned special promotion drives on these days.

It was noted that an appeal should be made to all merchants to support customers' Friday night opening in Picton which is now reportedly observed by many store owners.

Drug store owner William Jones noted that customers at his coffee bar frequently complain that they have driven from distant points in the county into town only to discover that many of the shops are closed on Friday nights. Angered, they shop in Belleville and other nearby centres to avoid this inconvenience.

"It's depressing to see the stores closed and the street only half-lighted," observed a second merchant.

Ronald Scott, chairman of the business and professional man's committee added that there are "a lot of hard feelings when people come and half the stores are closed."

"You've just got to get people you don't want office business if you close on Friday nights," suggested William Jones. He added that the dissatisfied would-be customers then "beat it and go to Belleville."

In further discussion of holiday hours, merchants agreed to close on the Monday following the New Year.

I Wanna Help

Everybody was getting into the act last night in the Bleeker Auditorium, getting ready some of the 60 floats scheduled to appear in this year's Santa Claus Parade. While parents worked at a float, Andrew Smith, 2, had a great time sawing at the wagon.

Float Builders Busy

What is a parade without floats?

The Belleville Santa Claus Parade is going to be a real parade if floats are the answer, because there are going to be 62 of them.

Beginning last night, work crews converged on the Bleeker Auditorium to loan from the city for float construction, to begin the task of fitting all the bits into a puzzle" together in time for the coming parade.

Parade date is set at Saturday, Dec. 4 at approximately 10 p.m.

There wasn't much floorspace to be seen last night as some 62 wagons were towed into the auditorium.

Many floats are decorated by area farmers, by the time they are finished will not be recognizable, said one builder.

Almost 100 people pitched in last night, on a voluntary basis, to make sure that all would be ready in time.

Groups including Parents Without Partners, the Air Cadets and various business and contracting firms, began their floats and by the end of the evening had their displays in various stages of near construction.

Cartoon characters and stuffed animals universally loved by children began coming to life as veterans of many moulded paper mache and chicken wire.

"It's surprising what you can do with a little paint," said Bill Greenwood, leaning back self trimming a float. "It makes you feel good to make something like this because no one ever knows you had a hand in it. You can just sit back and watch the smiling faces on parade day."

Even though construction of the floats started formally last night, organizers and workers connected with floats have been fabricating materials and props for their float for the past year in some cases.

"A super market bread requires about 15 man hours to construct," said Gary Marriott, responsible for dozens of items to be used in the parade.

First a frame of chicken wire is made and then rags are wrapped around it. After this the framing process begins by applying paper. Usually eight coats are needed and then paint is applied.

The same system is used for building the eight-foot-tall comic personalities such as Mickey Mouse. These require about three weeks, working at them every day.

While carpenters worked building side skirts for the wagons, little children busied themselves by getting in the way of their parents.

While many of the floats are kept from previous years, most are built from scratch.

"The biggest problem with floats is there is no place in store them after the parade," said Mr. Fuster. "Because of the storage problem, we make everything we can in a collapsible form."

One float that remains the same each year is the sleigh and reindeer used for the Santa float.

One man, walking around scrounging chicken wire, said so far I have spent at least $500 on the preparation of my float and probably by the end of the week I will spend another $100."

The Flintstones, and friends, Walt Disney characters, cooped from outside Bleecker and Sleeping Beauty will all be relived in the parade that will last for well over an hour.

Geese Gaining Ground As Yule Dinner Stars

Violet Elliotts' goose isn't cooked yet.

In fact, it isn't even ready for the oven.

But come Christmas Day, one of the four geese now lodging in the barnyard on her Plainfield-area farm will be part of the yuletide table-top fare for Mrs. Elliott family.

Mrs. Elliott — she can pluck and dress a bird too — wouldn't take credit for starting any trend, although goose has been a seasonal staple at her home for years.

Yet, more and more people may be following her example.

Although it may never oust turkey as the symbolic centrepiece of the nation's Christmas tables, goose seems slowly to be regaining some lost ground. (Once, it had pride of place as the main yuletide dish).

Not everybody in the business agrees. But those that do, are convinced that each year an increasing, if select, number of Christmas consumers are in search for goose.

"There's quite a demand for geese now — and the supply doesn't seem to be as great as the demand," said the manager of one downtown Belleville food chain store.

"I don't know why the trend, or when the turning point was, but coming on Christmas you always get people coming in asking for geese. They (the customers) say if you haven't got them for Christmas will you have them for New Year's?"

He adds his store can't keep up with the demand.

A main reason is the almost year-round popularity of turkey, now among the cheapest — and thus one of the most promoted — foods on the market.

Thus, the once-traditional Christmas turkey becomes a matter of dietary repetition and "I think people just want that added variety (offered by geese)," he says.

A western chain manager bluntly disagrees:

"It's just a certain type of people that like geese. I don't think they'll every replace turkeys."

The meat-counter manager of an east-end chain is somewhere in between.

He says there seems to be a stepped - up demand for geese each Christmas — until consumers learn the price.

"The demand is there — but the price is too high."

During the last two or three years the fowl fetched around 89 cents a lb. — compared to 39-41 cents for turkey. However, he adds, geese this year are selling more cheaply.

An estimate given by another store spokesman ranged the this year's geese prices at 65-69 cents.

Sam raised turkeys for 20 years before cheap market prices and a hint "decide the birds were no means to a egg. He switched to geese a few years back. This year he's feeding a flock of 200 — raised from tiny goslings purchased in early summer — for the Christmas trade.

He sells them to individual buyers and many already have placed their orders.

"There's a good demand for geese — and it seems to be getting a little better each year," he says.

Cheese Show Tomorrow

The trend of the times in cheese manufacture is again evident at the British Empire Dairy Show, scheduled to open Wednesday at the old Tip Top Tailor building at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets.

Whereas at one time entries almost without exception would have been the 80-pound block cheese, this year there are only 18 of the "large" variety. Big share of the entries in the now more popular 40-lb. square blocks.

In all there are 135 cheese at the show, plus 10 cheese factory displays of cheese specialities.

One of the newcomers in the cheese factory display class is the Joss Swiss cheese factory at Trent River and another the Balderson factory in Eastern Ontario.

Once again Thomas Heath, William Moore and Keith Hubbs, Quinte area fieldmen with the Ontario Milk Commission, set up this year's attractive show.

Judges for the event are Ontario cheese graders Thomas Aicken, Maurice Martin and James McMillan.

The cheese show is being held in conjunction with the 44th annual convention of the Central Ontario Cheese Makers' Association being held Wednesday and Thursday at the Sun Valley Motor Inn.

Doodle Dialling

This 15-month-old Bellevillian (who prefers to remain anonymous) dialled Bell Canada's repair service (1181) twice in the same week while doodling with phone. Direct distance dialling, push-button phones now in Quinte district may provide older tots with even busier outlets.

Dial Doodling Can Produce Weird Results

It's one of those things you can't dial any authoritative source about and get a pat answer.

It involves coincidence — and in just the right series of combinations.

It couldn't have happened in the Quinte area until this past fall. And it may never happen. Then again ...

It concerns direct distance dialling, the boon of speeded-up commercial communications finally introduced in the Belleville area two months ago.

Now, any local Bell Canada subscriber can directly dial hundreds of communities in Canada and the United States without a long-distance operator as go-between.

So can anyone else in the household — and thereby hangs this matter of coincidence and combinations.

For, is it not possible for a younger member of the family to toddle to a phone within reach, begin toying with the dial and unwittingly place a long, long-distance call on the household's telephone account?

As yet, says Bell's Belleville-area manager George Thompson, no such problem has been brought to the attention of his department.

"When it (direct distance dialling) was in . . . bigger centres we used to have problems with kids dialling . . . — and ending up calling somebody in the southern United States. But we've certainly had nothing like that here, that I'm aware of," says the manager.

To dial direct, the caller first must dial the area code, then the necessary area code and local number.

For a tiny toddler, fingering all the way around the dial likely would be a feat of strength. Yet, could enough numbers be available to maturing little fingertips to click in with the right combination for a successful call to Prince Rupert or Peoria?

(One Bellevillian recently reported his 15-month-old offspring — doodling with an extension phone left on a low bedside chest — had raised Bell's repair service in a week, by chance dialling 116).

Betty Zvedley, co-ordinator of Loyalist College's preschool education program, says to completely range around the dial would require considerable pressure from tiny fingers.

Yet, it's possible for some children under two years to toy with a telephone dial and come up with a workable combination for a long-distance call.

Educational television shows help acquaint the modern tot with numbers, while toy telephones also add something to the imaginative process.

Hence parents should stress that the real telephone is no toy but a serious piece of equipment," suggests Mrs. Zvedley.

Older children — nearing the end of their third year or in their fourth — may also be able to recognize certain combinations of numbers, she believes.

Mr. Thompson also agrees that if there are any problems, parents should teach youngsters to be "a little more responsible."

He's also certain that most youngsters four or five years old can dial their own numbers quite accurately — "as long as somebody will take the trouble to show them how."

But for the younger toddler given to phone-fiddling, modern innovation may also complicate the possibilities in unsupervised moments.

Push-button phones, for instance, with their changing tones, may prove even more tempting than the standard dial set, requiring more finger-pressure, agrees Mr. Thompson.

If, inadvertently, a doodler makes a long-distance connection, Bell tries to be understanding about the subsequent cost, he says.

"I'm not anxious to issue a licence for anyone to do it, but we haven't insisted (on payment) in those cases," says the Bell manager, "If we can see it's that type of slip we normally absorb the cost.

"The only thing is if the customer did it two months in a row, we'd begin to wonder if he shouldn't exercise some control over his family."

Sidney Sidewalk Raises Objection

Albert College board of governors has registered objection to the proposed construction of a new sidewalk on the east side of Sidney Street.

City council several weeks ago approved the sidewalk construction and notices have gone out to Albert College and American Optical, abutting owners on the east side of Sidney Street.

At the council meeting, City Engineer Wilbur Purcell said a sidewalk on the east side of Sidney between Dundas and Bridge Street would best serve area residents.

Albert College, however, asserts the walk should be on the west side noting that no pedestrian traffic originates on the east side.

The board letter was included on the agenda of yesterday's traffic and light committee meeting and was tabled for two weeks for a staff report.

But while Albert College is objecting to sidewalk construction on the east side of Sidney, residents in the North Front street area are asking for a walk in their area.

Traffic committee chairman Ald. Arthur Keegan told yesterday's meeting that he had received numerous phone calls from residents who complained about the absence of a sidewalk north of Tracey Street.

As result, pedestrians are forced to walk along the curb or on private lawns.

Committee members were told there was considerable pedestrian traffic in the area since the opening of the new Quinte Mall.

Driveway Widths To Be Restricted

Residential and commercial driveway openings will come under specific regulations if a draft bylaw being considered by the city traffic and light committee receives council approval.

- The bylaw would set out maximum allowable widths for driveways as well as minimum lot widths for which double driveways would be allowed.

City Engineer Wilbur Purcell told the committee that currently there are no definite regulations concerning driveways and instead his department was having some difficulty in convincing owners that there should be maximum allowable widths.

Many owners of residential properties with double garages were requesting driveway openings 30 feet in width. Single residential driveways should be limited to 14 feet and double driveways to 20 feet, he said.

Wider driveway entrances reduced the amount of legal street parking and also meant loss of control in the manner which vehicles entered and left the driveway.

The city engineer said that many gasoline station operators at corner locations were beginning to see the disadvantages of wide, driveways allowing almost unrestricted entrance.

In such cases motorists get in the habit of cutting through the gas station to avoid traffic lights.

1,500 Rotarians Coming to City

For what is believed to be the first time in 15 years, District 707, Rotary Club will move its annual conference from Toronto. In May of 1972, area clubs will pay host to the convention, expected to be one more than 1,200 Rotarians to Belleville.

The three - day conference, centred around a general theme of Rotary in business, will feature a full program of social affairs together with seminars. A special section of ladies' events is also in the planning stages.

Belleville Rotarian Dr. H. W. Burns said yesterday, 54 Clubs between Guelph and Belleville will fill the city's motels and hotels on May 5, 6 and 7, with the major portion of the conference at the Four Seasons Hotel.

Events include the Governor's Ball, which will, till two floors at the new Royal Canadian Legion hall on Pinnacle Street, a mid-day bird breakfast presented by Cobourg Rotary and the Picton Rotary district fellowship program.

Dr. Burns says the conference will centre around Rotary's attempt to improve business ethics and outlook.

The clubs are now negotiating for well-known speakers to take part in the weekend session.

Fifteen years ago, at about the time District 707 was formed, the city of Guelph was the site of a conference. Since then, the annual event has been held in Toronto.

Dr. Burns explained the presence of Will Wilkinson, District Governor who resides in Trenton, was a major contributing factor to Belleville being selected for the 1972 convention.

The request was referred for consideration as a capital works project.

Dual Clubs Thank Speaker

Belleville's Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs jointly gathered yesterday for a joint luncheon meeting at the Sun Valley Motor Inn. Guest speaker Robert Temple, centre, highlighted his vocal tour of Russia and Siberia with some 70 color slides. At the close of his talk, Kiwanis president Gerry Brennan and Rotary immediate past president William MacKay, presented the local solicitor with a plaque by way of thanks.

Condition Improved

KINGSTON (Staff) — Mrs. Rose Henry, 50, of RR. 2, Madoc, injured in a weekend accident which claimed the life of her husband James Edward Henry and daughter Sheila, has been removed from the critical list at Kingston General Hospital.

A spokesman for the hospital this morning, described her condition at this time as "serious."

Break-ins Investigated

Latest two occurrences, say police spokesman, indicate they were done in the same method.

Mr. and Mrs. K. Ojamae, of 48 Moira Street East, left their apartment at 10.15 a.m. yesterday and returned at 10.30 p.m. Their portable, 12-inch black and white television, valued at $104, had been stolen.

There was no sign of forced entry.

Sometime between Saturday and Sunday, the apartment of Brenda Angus, 52 College Street West, was entered. A radio and cassette player plus a mailbox shaped coin bank ... were stolen. $100,

Again, there was no sign of forced entry.

Police believe the "locks to have been slipped".

Popular Armful

Mrs. Violet Elliott totes goose in her Plainfield farmyard and expects it to grace her Christmas table. Selected number in Quinte district who appear to prefer goose to traditional turkey, appear to be on the increase, say some sources.

Parking Garage Scheme Approved

TRENTON (Staff) — The fate of the old post office appears to have been decided finally,

The decision to accept the parking authority's proposal to transform the former federal property into a modern downtown parking garage and municipal office, was made last night by town council.

By virtue of the approval, the parking authority received the green light to spend $220,000 to provide additional parking space for 70 cars and the new and larger accommodation for the town administrative operations.

The expenditure does not include the cost of furnishings and air conditioning in the proposed two-storey building.

Mayor Duncan McDonald shared Councillor George Brown's opposition to involvement of the town for financial reasons. He voiced agreement with the report on the study by the Trenton administrative staff, that the property should be sold. He said he preferred to see development by private interests while the revenue from the sale of the land "went into a cushion to keep the tax rate down." Councillor Brown wanted it known he was against the venture because he believed the town could not afford the risk of a possible deficit operation. If it were not for that, he would go along with the idea, he indicated.

Councillor E. M. (Ted) Parker voiced strong opposition to the arguments against the parking authority's proposed undertaking and emphasized he was not entertaining the recommendations of the administrative staff either. In indicating he favored municipal use of the former federal property, he noted the improving financial picture of the parking authority in the current eight months had mainly influenced his thinking.

Other factors were that there was never a better time to build town offices cheaper and the time was most opportune to boost morale in the downtown business core. Councillors F. J. Aziz, George Greer, Paul Tripp and Stanley Ketcheson, offered similar reasons for supporting the authority's proposal and voted accordingly.

It is understood that the old post office, including its familiar tower, at the corner of Dundas and Albert Streets, will be torn down to make way for the new structure.

Mail early. It feels good.

Let's all be sociable. Deliver Merry Christmas.

Japan's Progress

There was a time when "Made in Japan" was a term greeted with some derision. Usually it meant a cheap version of an article already available from western manufacturers. Today things have changed; the Japanese have long since shed that image and are now one of the world's leading manufacturing and trading nations. And not only that, but Japanese goods are synonymous with quality.

Japanese cars and cameras of course are the quality goods with which we are most familiar. The word is that one Japanese car manufacturer has topped the trading sportster to the Canadian market with 4,000 to 5,000 cars monthly, surpassing another Japanese manufacturer and a German company.

The top Japanese carmaker moreover is considering acquiring a one-third interest in Canadian Motor Industries Ltd., a Canadian car assembly plant, to facilitate assembly of its cars in Canada. CMI itself is 90 per cent owned by a Japanese trading house.

All this has been achieved following war time defeat and national humiliation. Indeed one wonders if Japan, not to mention Germany, would have reached such a peak of industrial excellence today had it not been for the fact that in 1945 it had nowhere to go but up. One thing about war, when it is all over, man's instinctive urge to rebuild is predominant. But even this would not have been possible without the native genius of the Japanese which makes them the most advanced people in Asia, and indeed one of the most progressive societies in the entire world.

Clubs for 'Singles'

Computer matchmaking is a modern phenomenon. So too is the growing number of singles' clubs. Kitchener-Waterloo has a couple of flourishing groups in the latter category, as a recent article in the twin city area's newspaper, The Record, reveals.

Stag night, notes writer Rose Marie Earle, is traditionally Thursday night when the thousands of singles invade the night spots, "ostensibly just to enjoy themselves, but mainly hoping to line a date for Friday or Saturday night. "For just as Thursday, she continues, "is stag night, Friday and Saturday nights are definitely 'date' nights and it's the brave soul who ventures into the usual spots alone."

However the two singles clubs, she suggests seem to fill a need. There is the Carlton Social Club, for the 21-30 age group. It will celebrate its fourth anniversary recently and has grown to more than 350 members. Then there is the Saturday Niters club. It nas nearly 200 members.

The Record's personal column, the article notes, almost daily carry requests from men and women — widowed, single, divorced and separated — to meet people in comparable situations. The same situation must prevail here although the newspaper carries fewer ads of that type. We understand Belleville has one or two clubs of a similar nature, and they do fill a need, for meeting people on any footing basis is not easy through chance meetings.

Hospital Budget

Belleville General Hospital's budget for 1972 has kept nearly within the seven per cent restriction by the Ontario Hospital Services Commission and it is interesting to observe the progress accomplished under plans for the year. The new 54-bed addition, for instance, in what used to be the administration area, and which will require 40 extra nursing staff. Also new staff for the school of nursing, a new staff pathologist, five additional in-service teachers and additional psychiatric unit staff. There will be other expenses too within this scheduled $7.3 million budget, but these are some of the major ones that reflect the city's growth and with it the inevitable and necessary increase in services of such vital institutions as the hospital.

OSD Charmer

A pretty girl, as the old ballad so aptly says, is like a melody and our news pages in recent days have graced by several such charmers, including OSD student Nancy Dillon. The 18-year-old Ottawa beauty in winning the Miss Santa Claus Parade title will not only enhance the event in Belleville's downtown next Saturday; she will also be representing her school and the fine work it is doing in enabling young people handicapped by deafness to play their rightful place in society and enjoy life to the full.

From Maoists to Women's Lib

Socialist Dictatorship Aim of Canada's Radicals

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Would you believe there is a community of extremists here, alive and well and working in the National Capital, administrative heart of Canada, to dismantle the parliamentary form of government?

And replace it with "a socialist-radical dictatorship!"

Difficult to comprehend, you say?

Improbable if not impossible in quiet, unexcited, low-key, frequently bored Ottawa which, without its huge federal government establishment, is just as many critics, would be "just another Ontario town?"

Not even on Ontario's superhighway 401, the Macdonald-Cartier freeway, running like a concrete spine the length of the province from the Detroit River to the Quebec border.

But served by winding strings of two-lane "goat trails," as Energy Minister Joe Greene described the Capital's highway links with "the outside world."

Unlikely as it might seem at first quiet glance across The Canals Capital aide at the time of the late great C. D. Howe, "Minister of Everything".

Member of Prime Ministers Pearson's and Trudeau's Cabinets, serving hitches as Transport Minister, Privy Council President, Government House Leader, Public Works Minister and Solicitor General.

Now, before the next election, he will have been a parliamentarian for nuccessive years, McIlraith is cashing in his political chips.

Some of those chips include the influence he will wield — whether he wants to or not — in the selection of a Liberal candidate in the riding of Ottawa Centre to replace him.

And it is at this point that the radical warning comes through loud and clear.

Publicly, on the record, in print and in person, he has declared for "the widest possible taxpayer representation" in the choosing of his successor.

It is what he calls "the most urgent necessity" that the taxpayers speak out. And since George McIlraith has won 10 elections all in a row with a comfortable majority, it has not been only Liberals voting for him. He got winning margins of 10,000 and more.

"That's possible taxpayer representation" is so urgent, he has said, "because so many other elements are actively seeking to destroy the parliamentary form of government" and replace it with a radical despotism.

Who did he have in mind?

The answer is not surprises.

Speaking out of his knowledge and specialized background as Solicitor General in charge of the RCMP and the S and I directorate, he ticked off "the dangerous few."

He called the roll of "Maoists, Trotskyites, some elements of women's lib, some civil liberties groups, and activist socialist extremists" all working to replace parliament with "a radical dictatorship".

But in Ottawa? In his own riding? Of Ottawa Centre, very core of the National Capital?

"replied McIlraith: "These subversives are active everywhere in Canada, increasingly so all over the country, and neither Ottawa nor Ottawa Centre can safely be excluded from their aggressive frustration."

New George McIlraith is no hard-hat.

But insist on pin-pointing his emotional position, he comes near to being a "bleeding heart".

Proof? Well, he was "profoundly shocked" when, as Solicitor General was so "assaulted, gratified" when the Ohio National Guard shot the college students at Kent State. He said he "sorrowed" that so many "good, kindly Canadians" were "outraged" when in say "the students had it coming."

So George McIlraith is no hard-nosed right-wing super-cop.

"I'm not very hungry — Trudeau's cracking down on cabinet leaks and I had to memorize and swallow the minutes of the cabinet meeting"

'Super-Ministries'

More Departmental Surgery Forseen

By DON O'HEARN
From The Intelligencer's
Queen's Park Bureau

TORONTO — Further to last week's comment on the labor department, there are other departments which will be due to be combined and disappear as indentities of their own.

Premier Davis made this evident in the election campaign when he announced his plan of reorganization under which four or five new super-ministries would be established.

At the same time he stated definitely that the super-ministries would only be coordinators without any administrative responsibilities and that the overall cabinet would not be any larger.

And the only way to achieve this is to cut down on some of the present departments. Which means that a popular guessing game is on as to which department will go.

The first name that comes up is practically everybody's list is the department of the provincial secretary and citizenship.

This department is somewhat of a senate. It is used to give ministers close to retirement a job, to break in new ministers and to take care of civil servants of perhaps not too much ability who don't fit in elsewhere.

A second department often named is tourism and information.

It is quite a well run department. But it's scope isn't big. Mainly it just plans promotion, runs our tourist centres and inspects tourist accommodation.

It could easily be a branch of another department, possibly Trade and Development.

Beyond it, however, forecasters begin to zone down.

Probably the next most logical department to disappear would be Public Works.

Its main function now is operating the many government buildings.

Formerly it did a lot of building and maintenance on its own. But the trend has been to rental and lease-back for accommodation and to contract out maintenance.

A logical step, however, would be to combine some of its functions with the inspection and standards policing now done by the Labor Department. So these could be combined.

Which would mean one more department to go.

This could be correctional services. Part of its functions could be transferred to Justice and actual operation of the institutions transferred to health, education or welfare. Though this last department also is on the logical list for a change in status.

Marriage and Those Hidden Expenses

Reader's Digest

Because it almost takes a financial genius to cope with all mortgages, installment purchases, credit cards and taxes, marriage is surrounded by money traps. Even the more sophisticated husband and wife can fall into them. Reader's Digest article gives a fresh twist of a familiar technique which may help you to be more aware for things you really want.

Too Much Mower: A house can be a money trap in ways that a couple might never suspect. The man who spends his garden tools and weed killers; the fact that a man who pays for a working wife to keep a big house — or a working husband a 50,000 - square - foot botanical showplace — without help; the fact that the lawn is growing so fast and producing so many children that taxes will triple within a few years. For many couples, renting may be far more than buying a house, especially if they are not yet sure how much money they can expect to earn.

Too Much Automobile: Often it seems cheaper to own a second automobile than not. But, like a house, an automobile represents a financial commitment that is largely hidden: the monthly payment you make is the phone number is 416-923-5393 and tip of the iceberg. Insurance is expensive and getting more so. Gas prices are due for a big jump. You can get: Long cheaper by using cabs when or even rented cars when you

Rhodesia Survives Sanctions and Terrorist Activity

Rhodesian Viewpoint

"Despite the angry clamor raised by Black Africa and the United Nations, the white-dominated political system in Rhodesia stands in a strong position to survive indefinitely."

These are the conclusions of Kenneth H. Hilborn, Associate Professor of History at the University of Western Ontario and foreign affairs editor of The London Free Press. The article continues:

"Two terrorist organizations — the Zimbabwe African National Union (ZANU) and the Zimbabwe African People's Union (ZAPU) — seek to harass the Rhodesian government. Both of these extremist factions are bitterly hostile to the West, and both receive aid (including weapons) from Communist sources. ZAPU has developed ties in particular with the Soviet Union, and the small ZANU with Red China.

"Zapa and Zanu have major weaknesses which Communist assistance cannot overcome. For one thing, they are not on good terms with each other. They do not co-ordinate their efforts in any close or consistent way.

"More fundamentally, ZAPU and ZANU appear to lack broad support among the people they are supposedly trying to 'liberate'. If the black population provided a friendly environment in which guerrillas could obtain food, shelter and new recruits, the heavily outnumbered whites would have little chance in this contest.

"In reality, however, terrorists infiltrating from their sanctuaries in Zambia have often been reported to the authorities by their fellow blacks. Blacks as well as whites serve in the police, and are considered thoroughly reliable.

"Why have whites and blacks not become polarized into two antagonistic camps? One reason is the conservative influence of traditional tribal chiefs, who favor co-operation with the Prime Minister Ian Smith. Another reason lies in the fact that most blacks are not politically conscious. They are more concerned with the practical affairs of daily life than with such Western ideals as 'one man, one vote'.

"In practical matters, life medical care and housing, the government has implemented constructive programs. However disturbed the political scene, segregation to most Canadians, the 'African' (black) townships which I visited last July at Salisbury, Rhodesia's capital, do offer an impressive contrast with the huts which blacks have been accustomed to build for themselves. The townships have library, hospital and sports facilities (including a golf course), as well as schools and high-class owned shops. Competition from white-owned businesses is prohibited.

"Even for blacks who are interested in politics, violence is not necessarily the only course open. The Rhodesia house of assembly already has 16 African members along with 10 'European' — situation related to the respective shares of income tax paid by the two communities.

"The constitution provides that as blacks pay an increasing proportion of the total income tax collected, their representation will increase correspondingly up to (though not beyond) parity with the whites.

"Still another factor working against a black-white confrontation is the close ties between Mashona and Matabele. The two groups have a long history of friction — before European imposed order the warlike Matabeles forced to raid Mashona territory and steal Mashona eat the 'majority' government means a black government — 'one man, one vote', implies Matabele dominance. Actually, it is clear that outcome, the Matabele might resort to civil war.

"Sanctions have not been totally without effect. By causing the country to spend much more much that it previously purchased abroad, they have contributed to Rhodesia's financial growth. True, while the Rhodesian government has a surplus of spending, while tobacco farmers have been hard hit by difficulties in exporting their crop. Governmental assistance to the tobacco industry constitutes a burden on the treasury. On the whole, however, the limited damage done by sanctions has fallen more on the black population than on the ruling whites.

Cottage Lot Leasing In Area Next Year

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

TWEED — Crown land will be leased to prospective cottage owners in the Quinte district for the first time next year.

But just how much and where is not immediately known.

"If we lease any (lakefront lots) it will not be before June or July," said a Dept. of Lands and Forests spokesman here yesterday. "But at this time we're not in a position to say which lakes will be put up for lease. It's very uncertain at this time."

Also uncertain is what the public reaction will be to the leasing arrangement — which replaces the years-old system of direct sales whereby purchasers became outright owners of Crown cottage land.

Sales originally were on a first - come - first - served by auction sales. This year, the provincial government inbasis. This was later replaced bydeced regulations to cover by lease land.

Bidders are offered a 30-year lease with option for renewal and must build a cottage — valued at least $1,200 — on the property within two years.

The price formula works this way: Auctions are held in the same fashion as an ordinary sale. Successful bidders pay an annual rental of 10 per cent of the auctioned price of the land.

Just what affect such a formula might have on Crown land prices in the area won't be known until the first sale is held. Basic rate set by the government is $2.50 a foot.

This year, for the first time, there was no land auction held here, said the department's spokesman. Therefore an up - to - the - minute price comparison is not possible.

However, on previous auctions where land was sold, prices per lot averaged in the $1,200 - $1,500 range.

Another unknown factor — and a major one — will be the response of the public to the leasing formula, instead of outright land purchase.

"It's up to the people," admitted the official. "One never knows what their attitude will be."

He said the first leasing auction was held in the Parry Sound area some time ago but was not aware of what comparable price ranges emerged.

However, there was "quite a bit of interest" in the auction, he said.

Absence of a land sale for the first time at the Tweed district offices didn't slacken the number of inquiries for lots in that district during the year, he added.

North Front Street To Get New Lights

North Front Street between the CN overpass and Highway 401 will take on the appearance of the great white way as the result of new street light installation shortly to get underway by the Belleville Public Utilities Commission.

Utilities Manager E. L. Burnham told the city traffic and light committee yesterday that lighting of the above section of North Front Street would be practically doubled.

Generally, the new street lamps will be 400 watt mercury vapor lamps on six-foot arms with heavier units in immediate area of Bell Blvd. The installation are expected to be completed by the end of the year.

Mr. Burnham said that wide four-lane roadways cannot be lighted effectively from only one side of the street, and this was the reason for the new installation on North Front Street.

New lighting on the lower end of North Front—Settect south of the CN overpass will await decision on any new north-south arterial route out of the downtown area.

Mr. Burnham said that other city streets to be widened to four lanes would also require both side lighting.

One of these would be Dundas Street East with Sidney Street in all likelihood to eventually require the same treatment.

ANAF News

It is hoped that there will be a good turnout on Thursday Dec. 9, the date of the next general meeting. Remember it is also Nomination Night so nominate the comrades of your choice and persuade them to stand.

On Saturday Dec. 11 the last big open Duke of Edinburgh Unit Dart Tournament will start at 10 a.m. and a good number of entries are expected. Plenty of prizes. Make up your team and get in on the gravy.

Tickets for the New Year's Eve Ball are being picked up pretty fast, so, if you are planning to attend, get yours from the stewards right now.

The annual turkey rolls started last weekend with a good number of happy winners. They will be continued every weekend until Dec. 18. Lots of varied prizes including novelties and radios besides the usual Christmas groceries. Lots of fun, so try your luck and join the winners' circle.

The Chessmen, a fine group of entertainers will be on hand for next Friday evening's Fun Night with plenty of mirth and music to suit everyone.

At the last executive meeting a really beautiful desk pen set made by Cde. J. Acorn was presented to the Unit by him to use as they saw fit. It was accepted with sincere thanks and appreciation and it was decided that a fitting place for it would be on the desk of the newly renovated secretary's office after it was on display in the showcase.

An old comrade, Alf Sowden, paid a visit to the club last week and was made very welcome, marveling the hospitality of the members as they helped him celebrate his 72nd birthday. He sure enjoyed the afternoon.

Although it was short notice it was, nevertheless, a very pleasant surprise when it was announced that a President's venison dinner would be served in the clubroom on Sunday afternoon. Cde. J. Clarke donated the venison while several members assisted him in the preparation. A good number of the comrades availed themselves of the opportunity of eating a hearty meal while watching the Grey Cup game. As the tense and exciting events happened the din was terrific as the Calgary fans, though in the minority, tried to out-cheer the Toronto fanatics. Well, the results are well known now with those who backed the losers claiming they were robbed and their team got none of the breaks. The whoops of victory and the cries of despair soon died away as everyone decided it had been a very pleasant worthwhile and enjoyable afternoon and hoped for more of the same in the future.

The report on the sick list shows that Cde. R. Frehan is under care in Toronto; E. Brockhurst, 316, BGH; A. Tuck, 19-20 Connell Ward, KGH; A. Glew, New Queen's Annex; W. Shepherd in a private nursing home and resting in their own homes are Cdes. R. Mills, H. Latham and K. Hollands.

Though late in starting, the afternoon doubles was started with those winning as follows: Bill Anderson and Bill Gill, Jim Woodcock and George Christopher, Dick Burns and Rusty Garvin and Bill Royer and Hank Doyle. But the main event was when Cde Fred Telford, straining in every nerve, amassed the, for him phenomenal score of 126 while the onlookers loudly cheered. Sadly though, the effort exhausted him, surprised his partner and they lost the game.

Parking Restriction Is Eased

Rush hour parking restrictions on Bridge Street between Front and Pinnacle will be eased on a trial basis if a recommendation from the city traffic and light committee is approved by council.

Since the opening of the new Dundas Street bridge there have been frequent requests from downtown merchants for the lifting of the rush hour traffic ban but the committee has been reluctant to make any change until new traffic patterns were definitely established.

Yesterday still another request for lifting of the rush hour parking ban was received and this time the committee gave partial assent.

The recommendation is that rush hour parking be allowed on the north side of the street on a trial basis.

However, the rush hour parking ban on the south side of Bridge Street between Front and Pinnacle and also on the north side of Bridge between Pinnacle and John Street will remain in effect.

Death Leaves Board Vacancy

The death Sunday of F. John Follis of Bancroft has left a vacancy to be filled on the 17-member Hastings County board of education.

No election will be held to fill the post. Under the Public Schools Act, the trustees may appoint a person to serve the unexpired time of anyone who has died or retired.

One year remains of Mr. Follis's two-year term as trustee. This was his second term with the board — he was elected first in 1968 for the 1969-70 term and was acclaimed for the second term in December, 1970.

Economic Council Says Canada Being Isolated

OTTAWA (CP) — Canada is becoming increasingly isolated in world trade at a time when it needs to boost employment for a whole new generation of people, the Economic Council of Canada says in a report.

Because the tables born in the years immediately after the Second World War now are graduating and dropping out of school to set up new homes and families, the council sees the need for 1.4 million new jobs by 1975.

It calls for a new industrial strategy to meet the country's needs to provide remunerative work, and to meet the challenges of international trade.

With Britain entering the European Common Market, Canada soon will be one of the few industrial countries of the world without free access to a large market.

The council, of 28 members, including three full-time economists and 25 advisers from industry, labor, agriculture and other interests, cites the danger of President Nixon's new economic policies turning into longer-term protectionism in the U.S.

The council also forsees danger of a revival of inflation, with industry trying to recover usual profit margins after they were severely squeezed in the anti-inflation price restraints of last year.

And it calls for massive federal policies to encourage expansion of domestic demand. It notes that Finance Minister E. J. Benbo moved in this direction in his budget last Oct. 14, but says he didn't do enough to change the council's underlying assumptions.

The council was formed in 1963 to give advice to the government and the general public on how Canada should work towards relatively full employment, stable prices, an equitable distribution of rising incomes, and a viable balance of international payments.

The immediate goal, the council said, should be to get unemployment down to 3.8 per cent of the labor force. Its longer-range goal for Canada is to have unemployment, recently running to more than six per cent, brought down to three per cent.

The great problem is to find jobs for people in the 25-to-34 age group in the next few years. The rate of employment growth for them will have to be double what it was during the second half of the 1960s.

"This is the age group in which most families tend to become established, with their large demands for housing and durable goods and, associated needs for urban services," the report says.

"Any significant shortfall in meeting the employment needs of this group will produce serious economic and social strains in the 1970s."

Balancing the supply of jobs with the numbers of workers coming into the labor market is something that starts in the early years of the educational system. The council says Canada's performance in this area has been haphazard, and it should be possible to plan better for the future.

The council finds the Canadian economy operating three or four per cent short of potential output with relatively full employment. This shortfall is costing about $3 billion a year in lost output, costing treasuries of all governments more than $1 billion annually in lost taxes.

To close the gap, the council says real output—without any inflation—would have to increase at a rate of more than six per cent a year. Even then the gap wouldn't be closed before the middle of 1974.

B. C. Needs Help

OTTAWA (CP) — British Columbia will draw more heavily upon a $180-million federal fund to boost employment this winter than any province but Newfoundland and New Brunswick, it was indicated Monday in figures released by the government.

The amounts allocated to each province under the fund are determined by a complex formula based on the labor force and rates of unemployment in each province.

Worked out on a simpler per-capita basis, the figures show that Newfoundland and New Brunswick will get $15 per capita, British Columbia about $11, and Quebec and Prince Edward Island about $10.

Nova Scotia, enjoying a relative boom, will get less per capita than any province but Ontario and Alberta. Ontario will get about $3.75, Alberta about $5.50 and Nova Scotia about $6.

In between are Manitoba, about $9, and Saskatchewan $7.

Brampton District Gravel Pit Closed

TORONTO (CP) — Mines Minister Leo Bernier said Monday he has cancelled the licence of Consolidated Sand and Gravel Co. to operate a gravel pit in the Terra Cotta area about 10 miles northwest of Brampton, Ont.

Mr. Bernier said it was the first time the government has cancelled a pit and quarry licence. The licences come up for renewal every 12 months.

In a statement, he said the importance of preserving the natural beauty of the Terra Cotta area "exceeds the need for mineral production."

"Mining became a resource exists is not sufficient justification in itself that it be developed."

The gravel pit is just north of the village of Terra Cotta. In July, a Terra Cotta resident, L. R. L. Symmes, complained to a Toronto newspaper that the company had misled the department in the site plan it had filed.

Mr. Bernier subsequently suspended Consolidated's licence and ordered mining commissioner Forbes McFarland to hold a public hearing into the dispute.

Mr. McFarland, in a report Oct. 28 to Mr. Bernier, made no recommendation on whether Consolidated's licence should be renewed. However, the commissioner recommended that the suspension be lifted until Nov. 30, the date the licence came up for renewal.

Mr. Bernier disregarded the commissioner's recommendations and continued the suspension.

Aboriginal Rights Issue to Be Decided

OTTAWA (CP) — The Supreme Court of Canada began hearing an appeal Monday that could decide once and for all whether non-treaty Indians and Eskimos are entitled to compensation for land they occupied before the coming of the white man.

Before the court is a request from the Nishga Indians of British Columbia asking for a declaration that they are the owners of more than 4,000 square miles of land in the Nass Valley north of Prince Rupert.

The claim, made against the province of B.C., is based on the fact that the Nishga and their ancestors have occupied the land "since time immemorial."

Tom Berger, a Vancouver lawyer appearing for the Indians, said his case involved two issues.

One was whether the Nishgas had aboriginal title to the land that they claim "as their ancient tribal territory."

The second was if this were so, "was the aboriginal title extinguished by the old colony of British Columbia?"

The Nishgas did not sign a treaty, and Mr. Berger read parts of two royal commission reports, one dating back to 1888, in which spokesmen for the tribe claimed the land as their own.

The appeal continues.

10,000 Seek Jobs

TORONTO (CP) — Up to 10,000 of Ontario's 18-to-25 year olds with high school education or better are unemployed and at least half of those are on welfare, says a report prepared for the provincial department of social and family services.

The report, compiled by officials of Project 500, announced earlier this month by minister Thomas Wells to create 500 social service jobs for unemployed high school graduates.

The department said Monday 620 applications have been received for the jobs and 102 placement agencies have submitted 320 placement proposals. About 200 proposals are expected by the end of the week and the department now is receiving 120 job applications a day.

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1♥	Dble	4♠	Pass
5♦	5♠	Dble

Opening lead—four of hearts.

It is not terribly difficult to make five clubs if you see all four hands. All you have to do is time your plays properly so as to avoid losing two spade tricks.

However, to make the contract without seeing the concealed hands if quite a chore, since it requires visualizing the East-West cards extremely accurately and then taking advantage of this knowledge.

Nevertheless, this is by no means an impossible task. The bidding speaks for itself and the missing cards are apt to be exactly where the bidding indicates they are.

East is practically sure to have seven hearts for his strong-hearted leap to four, and West's treasures, considering his bidding, probably consist of a spade suit headed by the A-J. If so, the play becomes merely an exercise in good technique.

East wins the heart lead with the jack and continues with a heart which you ruff with the ten. Taking a long-distance view of the situation, you cash the A-K of diamonds before playing a club to the eight.

Next you ruff a diamond high, play a club to the nine, and ruff dummy's last diamond in order to run West out of diamonds.

Having attended to these preliminaries, you lay down West's last trump, reducing his hand to the A-J-8-7 of spades. By this time you have the Q-10-5 of spades and a trump, while dummy has the K-4-2 of spades and a heart.

Now you lead the queen of spades and West has had it. If he takes the queen he must return a spade and your ten and king become tricks. If he ducks the queen you simply play another spade to the king.

Tomorrow: Rectifying the count.

Government Thinks Tribesmen Should Wear Clothes

WAMENA, West Irian (AP) — The Indonesian government thinks the tribesmen of New Guinea should wear clothes and learn the Indonesian language.

Efforts to bring this about are getting under way in the muddy frontier town. It is headquarters for Operation Koteka, an effort to bring a sort of instant civilization to people more tuned to the Stone Age. Indonesia controls the western part of New Guinea, next to Greenland the world's largest island, and calls the territory West Irian.

Wamena is situated in the middle of the Baliem Valley, an area so fertile that the first outsiders entered only in 1938. The only way to reach it now is by plane.

Large tracts of land east of the valley are still unexplored and contain thousands of people who have never struck a match, heard a note of music or seen a white person, a wheel or a piece of meat.

The natives, dark-skinned, large-boned people with kinky hair, live largely as their ancestors did thousands of years ago. Tribes are so isolated that often groups who live only several minutes flying time from each other speak different languages.

Their axes are made of stone and their knives of bamboo. Women and girls wear miniskirts so low and so brief that they seem to be held up by what one missionary calls "female magic."

The men dress only in penis gourds called kotekas held on by a piece of string around the waist. Fingers of little girls and women, and sometimes men, are chopped off during funerals as a sign of mourning for dead members of a family.

Their diet is basically sweet potatoes and pork cooked in large pits heated by hot stones. There is no money. Goods are bartered for items of value such as pigs or women.

The society has no crime, no pollution, no ulcers, no poverty. Farmers rotate their sweet potato crops to avoid exhausting their fields. Birth control based on abstinence limits most women to two or three children. The tight village structure ensures that no one ever goes hungry.

Their languages reflect sophistication easily missed by someone from outside. Dani, most widely spoken in the valley, has 1,600 verb forms and 10 words for sweet potato.

It is this society that the Indonesian government wants to modernize.

"This is an operation for humanity," explains Brig.-Gen. Acub Zainal, military commander of West Irian.

"We have to prepare the people in the interior to participate in Indonesian development."

Despite official enthusiasm, few "civilized" persons living in West Irian think the ambitious plan has much chance of success. Some think it can only bring disaster.

Critics of the operation point out that putting clothes on the natives would create a revolutionary change in life styles that have survived for thousands of years.

Clothes present several practical problems. Each person would need at least two sets so one set could be worn while the other is being washed. This would mean soap, washing kettles and cabinets in primitive huts for storage.

On top of this, village chiefs seem satisfied with the present arrangement. "Old men particularly are ashamed by clothes," says one observer here.

Operation Koteka is not the first attempt by outsiders to clothe the natives. Around 1905 the Roman Catholic missionaries launched a major drive to do the same thing. The people refused to co-operate.

No matter how the project works out, it will bring changes to the people of the valley. Already many use steel knives and shovels supplied by the government and missionaries. In the major population centers, such as Wamena, many wear clothes.

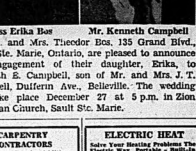
The Indonesian government has built a 6,000-foot asphalt airstrip here so that large transport aircraft can bring in jeeps and trucks. In the local market one can buy Dutch beer and Australian soda pop as well as steel knives, Indonesia rice, metal pots and textile shorts.

For Indonesia it is important that the people learn to speak and read the Indonesian language.

Before his tragic death in West Irian 10 years ago Michael Rockefeller talked about pressures from the outside world on these primitive people. The archeologist son of Nelson A. Rockefeller said: "The West thinks in terms of bringing advancement and opportunity to such a place. In actuality we bring a cultural bankruptcy which will last for many years, and what is more, poverty."

They're Not Acting!

The Belleville Theatre Guild is not all work and no play as the annual dinner dance held on Saturday night at Club Cedars proved. Caught in a jovial mood at the event are Mrs. Beverley Seemungal, Mayor Russell Scott, Mrs. Scott and Frank Seemungal, president of the Guild.



Mr. and Mrs. Robert Dennis Brunner are pictured following their recent marriage in Sacred Heart Church, Hull, Quebec. The bride is the former Giselle Lise Pilotte, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Pilotte, while the bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Brunner, RR9, Belleville.

Teenager Has Recording Contract

OSHAWA, Ont. (CP) — Shirley Eikhard wrote her first song when she was 11 years old.

"It was called Candlelight and Wine, I hate it."

Now, at the ripe age of 16, she has a five-year recording contract with Capitol Records, an album due to be released in January, and is waiting for royalties on another song, It Takes Time. Anne Murray recorded that one and has sold 20,000 copies in Canada so far and 100,000 in the United States.

All this has happened to Shirley since November, 1970, when she appeared on Singalong Jubilee.

Shirley says she has had to quit school because the pace got too hectic, though she's trying to keep up with correspondence courses.

"Some people told me I might regret it, but I enjoy it."

During a recent week when she was to appear on an Anne Murray special, she put in long hours commuting the 35 miles between Oshawa and Toronto for fittings, rehearsals and taping.

Shirley says she is to receive a royalty of one cent for every record sold.

"I'm going to put the money in the bank. I haven't received any royalties yet. They should be sending them to me, but I have no immediate use for the money."

Leader's Wife Wants Active Role

SAINT JOHN, N.B. (CP) — The wives of some political leaders are seldom seen.

But Rosemary Higgins, wife of Robert J. Higgins who was elected leader of the New Brunswick Liberal party in October, wants an active role in her husband's political life.

"It's an ideal situation for me," said the former Miss Canada of 1969, a honey-blonde who stands five feet, eight inches.

"With Bob's election as leader of the Liberal party, my hobby, politics, takes on a more important role than ever in my life. It keeps me with my children and involves me with my husband and I don't have to leave home that much."

The Higgins home, a modern bungalow in north-end Saint John, is a busy spot with four young children, Helen Ann, Bobby, Lenny and Andrew, and a dog, Oakie.

But a political campaign adds its own confusion.

"In every election, this house seems to end up being a headquarters," said Mrs. Higgins. "I'm on the phone constantly and after a while, I begin to feel lost without a phone-jack to my ear."

She is an effective political organizer and travelled throughout the province before the leadership convention.

One of her big problems was convincing people she had an independent point of view.

"I've a tendency to expound my own ideas and before I know it, people are taking it for granted that what I'm doing is just parroting Bob. No one knows better than Bob that I have ideas of my own."

Many are impressed with her energy and enthusiasm. She's poised and confident as well.

"I gained confidence during that year as Miss Canada and it has stood me in good stead. After a year of continual exposure to strangers, and in crowds day after day, you either gain the stamina and the confidence or you're finished."

With her children away most of the day, the youngest in kindergarten, Mrs. Higgins finds her involvement in politics a real asset.

"I find that I won't have to look around for something to take up the slack time that most women face at this stage," she said.

Her husband is expected to rely on her help as he takes up the post of opposition leader in the New Brunswick legislature.

MR. AND MRS. WAYNE F. RISTO

Risto – Outingdyke

Campbellford United Church was the setting for the November wedding of Cheryl Ann Outingdyke, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Reginald G. Outingdyke, of Campbellford and Wayne Frederick Risto, Belleville, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest G. Risto of Eganville. Rev. G. Ballantyne officiated and wedding music was rendered by organist Mrs. Carolyn Sheridan.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length white bridal gown featuring a crepe de ange panel down the front with scalloped lace edging with a matching lace bodice and a full length train of the same lace. A four - tier illusion veil was held by a satin floral headdress and she carried a bouquet of red roses centred with a solitaire white orchid.

Mrs. June Outingdyke, sister-in-law of the bride as matron of honor wore a full length gown in plum shade featuring a flowered French velvet bodice and a crepe chiffon skirt over taffeta. The long full sleeves were enhanced with velvet cuffs. She carried a heart shaped bouquet of shasta daisies and purple and pink pinnochio 'mums. Matching flowers adorned her hair.

Bridesmaids Miss Kathy Frederick, cousin of the bride and Miss Cheryl Risto, niece of the bridegroom wore dresses identical in that of the matron of honor, but in hot pink shade with pink centres accenting their bouquets.

Keith Risto attended his brother, while the ushers were Reg Outingdyke, brother of the bride and Ron Risto, brother of the bride groom.

A reception was held in the Riviera Inn. Campbellford where the bride's mother welcomed the guests wearing a mauve lace dress highlighted with accordion pleated sleeves. Black and mauve accessories and a corsage of mauve tinted carnations and matching flowers in her hair completed her attire. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a wine shade crimplene dress with black accessories and a corsage of yellow sweetheart roses.

Mr. and Mrs. Risto will reside at 262 Foster Ave., Apt. 1 in Belleville.

Do Clothes Remake the Woman?

By DORIS CLARK

We were discussing women's clothes — who doesn't! — A newspaper editor decried the modern 45 or 50, who try to look (and act) half their age by wearing mini skirts, hot pants, hip-hilts.

Then a psychologist suggested that the middle-aged favourers — as far as styles go — have a need to don something jarring, or shocking, or different. A deep-seated sense of inferiority, he said, causes them to be calling for an over-compensation in the way of dress.

They stand out in a crowd. If that's what they want!

Now I go for a change in styles as readily as the next person. I love bright colors, changing hemlines, peek-a-boo blouses tastefully handled.

But I do think it's a pity when a woman fifty-ish or more craves her lost youth so much that she forgets the charm of growing older with some serenity — making her look obvious in clothes as in other ways.

Dear Doris: My husband has been asked to stand in for the bridegroom's father at his nephew's wedding. He will be asked to reply to the toast and hasn't a clue to what to say. The entire party — except for the bridegroom — are strangers. — Tying The Knot

Dear Tying: Reply to what toasts? It is the bride's father who usually replies to the toast to the mothers.

Just the same, certain MCs include a few extra items, and your husband is honored to stand in for the bridegroom's father.

The main duties are to mingle hospitably with the guests and help the bridegroom's family to meet people.

If a friend of the bridegroom's family proposes the toast to the groom's parents, the father of the bridegroom (or the father who takes his place) makes happy sounds (and brief ones) about the fact that the bridegroom has found himself a lovely partner for life.

If he can tell an anecdote about the two lovers to prove his point and draw a little laughter, so much the better.

Dear Doris: I have been given a piece of land from one of my relatives. I have the title. But I think there is something fishy on this although I am not too worried if there is because the person who made it out could be sued quite easily.

I am not able to pay a lawyer's fee but could you tell me where I could go to get help before it's too late? — Seventeen and Alone

Dear Alone: If you have no adult to guide you, you need one. Take your title and the evidence of your bequest to a counsellor in Legal Aid. Your city clerk or welfare office will help you "sort it out or guide you to someone who will. There are legal aid services in most parts of Canada now, where such counselling is available for those who cannot pay for it.

You will find a friend there who will help you to sort things out.

SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL

Belleville Police Chief Douglas T. Crosbie predicted the inevitability of a "police state composed of citizens, policemen and politicians," if responsible people do not stand behind law and order.

Addressing the Nov. 22 meeting of the Sir Winston Churchill Home and School Chief Crosbie called for increased attention in the area of youth training. In this manner, youths will be brought up to be "responsible citizens and to make a better community for us all to live in."

An increase of 20 missing person reports were noted from 1970 to 1971. They rose from 75 to 95.

—Between 1970 and 1971, total investigations leaped from 188 to 300.

—General and specific occurrences rose from 8019 to 9890 between 1970 and 1971.

Members expressed appreciation for Chief Crosbie's address on Drugs and Youth, and their problems.

SURPLUS

MONTREAL (CP) — For the first time in 14 years, the Montreal Museum of Fine Arts registered an operating surplus in 1970-71 — $14,000 compared with a 1969-70 deficit of $131,000. — Museum treasurer Jacques M. Bruni said it was achieved by reducing the amount available for exhibitions to less than one per cent of total expenditures. The year — all result, he said, was inhibition "of our usefulness to the community."

Ann Landers

Choice of Name Is Reader's Gripe

Dear Ann Landers: Why do parents insist on hanging a millstone around the neck of a defenceless boy by saddling him with the same name as his dad — or his grandfather — or, heaven help the poor kid, make him be the fourth or even the fourth?

In our neighbor's family, it is nothing short of ludicrous. If you'd yell "Jim!" in the house next door during a family dinner, four people would answer. If a boy isn't as bright or as athletic or as popular as his dad, and he has the same name, there are always comparisons. I've said it before and I'll say it again, show me a junior and I'll show you the son of an egomaniac. If a boy has his dad's last name that should be enough. Right? — Logansport Gripe

Dear L. G.: You picked a nice question to ask me. My boss is Marshall Field—The Fifth. Thanks a lot. It so happens I don't agree with you. Most juniors have nicknames that set them apart from pa—James can be Jim, or Jimmy, or Jay or Jamie, etc.

Dear Ann Landers: Someone who put about a girl who had everything but a nice smile. He wanted to know how he could get her to see a dentist who would put her mouth in shape. You were right when you told him that fear is probably what keeps her from going.

I should not been to a dentist for 20 years. Fortunately, my teeth are in good condition, but my early experiences have me terrified. I recall vividly how the dentist propped my mouth wide open while he worked with a hammer or a pick, and the saliva trickled down my throat. I needed to swallow and couldn't—and I thought I was going to choke. When I told him of my fear he laughed so hard he could have heard him across the hall. I remember the agony of the drill—here every few minutes running. I had nightmares about it for years.

So please be more sympathetic, Ann. I can understand the girl who has pathological fear of dentists because I am in her shoes.—Hutchinson, Kan Authority

Dear Hutch: Sorry, a person who has not been in a dentist chair for 20 years is no authority. I hope you will go soon for a dental checkup and ask to see the equipment. Dentists now have a tube which eliminates the saliva problem. They also have electronic drills which rotate at an accelerated speed thereby reducing the time to a fraction of the old days. Welcome to the 20th century, lady. It's beautiful.

Dear Ann Landers: My brother has two little girls—aged 5 and 7. They are darling kids, but much too fat. I don't mean chubby. Ann, I mean grossly overweight. When we have dinner together it makes me sick the way their mother encourages second helpings of everything (including ice cream and cake) and praises them for cleaning their plates. I'm sure both little girls have come to believe that filling fat cells makes their mommy love them more.

My sister-in-law and her husband are of average size but obesity does run in my sister-in-law's family. Is is possible that these kids have a glandular problem? Should I say some thing to my brother?—Thinking Ahead

Dear T. A.: No. Say something to your sister-in-law. Suggest a thorough physical exam and dietary diet. If she resents your "interference," apologize and don't mention it again, but some situations are worth the risk of being told to MYOB. This is one of them.

Dear Carol: Here's your letter plus my thanks and heartfelt congratulations.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you said a physician is able to tell if a woman has given birth to a baby. Can a doctor tell if a woman had had an abortion?—Denver I—Of

Dear Dear: If the abortion was performed early, a physician would not be able to tell. If the abortion were performed late (after the 12th week of pregnancy) it is possible that a doctor could tell, but not likely.

Women's Institutes

MADOC WI

MADOC — Much theme at the November meeting of the Madoc Women's Institute held at the home of Mrs. Russell Lewis was Canadian Industries, with 20 members present. Miss Eileen Conrad and Mrs. Werner Roemer were assistant hostesses.

Mrs. Wilfred Forestell, as convener of the program, gave an informative talk on the motto, "Support Canadian products and Canadian Industries will support you." Mrs. Forestell noted that agriculture is one of the main industries in the Madoc area. She felt that in a world where more than one in five of the 22 billion people are hungry and more than half suffer from malnutrition the thought should be, "What can we do?" and then suggested, "Eat more meat — drink more milk for a healthy body — and for a prosperous agriculture".

Mrs. Forestell went on to trace the development of the meat packing industry which has replaced primitive methods of salting, drying and smoking, as meat is given to be one of the nation's leading industries. The high standards of its products have gained recognition throughout the world. The sales of dairy products — milk, butter, cheese and curd — are being widely promoted.

In continuing the speaker noted that the Canadian Carpet Industry has almost tripled in the past ten years, thanks to the increased use of carpeting in homes, offices, schools and hospitals; also the indoor-outdoor types. Snowmobiling has also become a popular winter sport which has produced a new employment through the manufacture of machines and clothing.

Other Canadian industries mentioned were Tolc at Madoc, Bethlehem Steel at Marmora and the bee-keeping industry. Most manufacturing companies are branches of American firms like the three great generals — General Motors, General Electric and General Foods. There is a growing interest in truly Canadian foods.

Mrs. S. R. Beatty presented an interesting report on the annual meeting of the area convention at Club Canara in Belleville. Over 200 attended from the combined districts of Hastings, Prince Edward, Northumberland and Peterborough.

The Madoc WI branch was greatly interested and concerned in the resolution passed which stated, "The property owner not be held liable for any theft of crop by any trespasser." The resolution was sustained by the convention delegates and will now go to the provincial resolutions convener to be presented to the government.

Mrs. Beatty also spoke of the triennial convention of the Associated Country Women of the World held in Oslo, Norway this past summer which was attended by 11,000 women from 60 different countries, and there was only one delegate who could not speak English. It was felt that this was a wonderful opportunity to become acquainted with other women from all over the world. The next ACWW convention is to be held in Japan in 1974. The new president of the organization, Mrs. Farquharson of England will be speaking at a luncheon in the Royal York Hotel in Toronto on February 12.

Members were gratified to learn that the objective of $50,000 for an extension to Queen's University has now been reached by the Federated Women's Institute of Ontario. The WI new project is to raise a somewhat similar amount in order to purchase the Erland Lee homestead at Stoney Creek, and preserve it as a historical site, for it was here that the constitution for the Women's Institute was first drawn up.

Mrs. Albert Bailey as area convener of citizenship and education also gave a comprehensive report on the recent convention and noted that next year's convention will be held in Peterborough Oct. 24-25.

Mrs. R. Wannamaker thanked the hostesses and speakers.

Women's Institutes

CARMEL WI

The November meeting of Carmel Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Clare Horton with 19 members present.

Mrs. Lyle Bradshaw, 1st vice-president, took charge of the meeting and conducted the business. Mrs. Russell Ritz gave a report from the district directors' meeting.

Mrs. Amos Whitmore, convener, introduced Mrs. John Vance from Shannonville who collects driftwood, and finishes the driftwood making seasonal decorations for tables suitable in various rooms of the home.

Mrs. Whitmore conducted a contest on trees, and read a suitable poem.

The meeting closed and a social hour was enjoyed.

Mirror of Your Mind

by JOHN CONWELL

Are top stars 'entitled' to tantrums?

NO MORE than anyone else, and, surprisingly, the percentage of top entertainment stars who do indulge themselves in displays of temperament is probably no greater than it is in any other business or profession. Many executives, politicians and leaders in other fields go into tantrums, too; not because they are "entitled" to raving and ranting, but because they use these outbursts to control everyone around them.

Do teeners enjoy revolting against parents?

THOSE who do openly revolt against their parents and all authority figures do seem to revel in giving vent to the universal urge to throw off all restraints. Yet many young people also have grave misgivings about their actions and attitudes. After they have seized control of their own destiny, they begin to wonder if they are rather feeble go-into tantrums, too; not because they are "entitled" to raving and ranting, but because they use these outbursts to control everyone around them.

Will a happy husband feel 'out of circulation'?

NO, even if he does make jokes with his cronies about being "retired from the field" now that he is married. He is in love with his wife and she loves him, a happy husband feels fortunate that he is married to the girl he chose, and imagines himself "envied" rather than constrained by the bundle of matrimony. He is at one with the poet Goethe, who said: "A wife is a gift bestowed upon a man to reconcile him to the loss of paradise."

Ottawa Accused of Financing Removal of Jobs from Ontario

OTTAWA (CP) — A renewed complaint cropped up in the Commons Monday that federal industrial incentives for depressed regions are financing the removal of jobs from Ontario.

Ed Broadbent (N D P—Oshawa-Whitby) asked about a grant of $1.2 million to Union Carbide of Canada to expand at Beauharnois, Que., which he said would cost about 50 jobs through the closure of a similar operation in Welland.

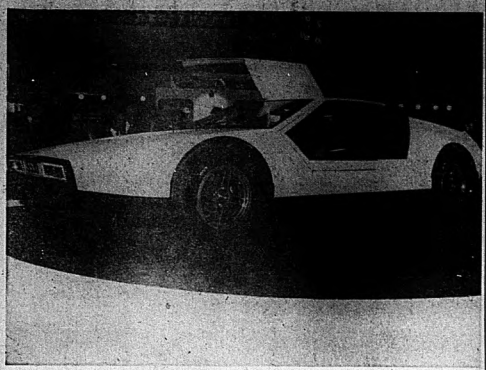
His question was ruled out of order on procedural grounds, so Jean Marchand, minister of regional economic expansion, made no reply in the Commons.

However, his department said later the Union Carbide decision to shift a mineral-processing operation to Beauharnois from Welland was based on business and related reasons rather than encouragement from the federal government.

Mr. Broadbent said outside the Commons that the Union Carbide move was the latest in a series supported by DREE—the department of regional economic expansion.

He cited also a move by Duplate Canada Ltd.' to Hawkesbury, in the Ottawa River Valley, from Oshawa and one by Aerovox Canada Ltd. to Amherst, N.S., from Hamilton.

In each case, the new location is in a region designated for DREE grants to industries that expand there or set up shop anew. The communities left behind are not designated for grants.



In addition to Union Carbide's $1.2 million to establish a new manganese-alloy operation at Beauharnois, south west of Montreal, Duplate received $980,000 for a car - windshield plant at Hawkesbury and Aerovox $235,000 for making electrical components in Amherst.

Mr. Broadbent said encouraging such moves out of industrial Ontario is self-defeating. The Economic Council of Canada has said the growth of depressed regions must be based on continued healthy growth in Ontario in order to finance regional expansion, he said.

Mr. Marchand has denied previously that the department is deliberately encouraging shifts by industry out of Ontario.

He has said the companies concerned might have closed or curtailed operations in Canada anyway and the federal grants helped convince them to stay in Canada.

Mr. Broadbent said he wanted a Commons committee to investigate such moves in detail to find out whether the companies involved are really being encouraged to move by the department program.

Five Treated Together Die in Identical Fashion

ADELAIDE, Australia (AP) — Five teen-agers who two years ago were members of the same mental therapy group at Glenside Mental Hospital have been found dead in identical circumstances in gas-filled autos.

Two boys and a girl were found dead Monday afternoon in a car in a lonely section of National Park, eight miles from Adelaide. On Aug. 21, the bodies of two other teen-agers were found in another car in the same area. In both cases hoses were connected from the vehicles' exhausts into the interior.

All five had been treated for a similar kind of mental depression. They had discussed their mutual problems under the supervision of a psychiatrist.

The group disbanded about 18 months ago and the two found dead in August were attending another treatment centre.

Entente Cordiale Blossoming After Lengthy Cool Period

PARIS (Reuter) — The entente cordiale between France and Britain is blossoming again after years of coolness—and the French are saying that this time it's the real thing.

The entente is the love part of the love-hate relationship which has marked ties between the two European powers since the middle ages.

The political winds have often shifted across the 30 miles of water separating the countries.

Students of history point out that the present warm understanding—growing out of agreement on British entry into the European Common Market—is the 10th entente cordiale since the first flowered briefly 4½ centuries ago.

The first was sumptuous and wine-soddden. It was inaugurated by Britain's King Henry VIII and France's Francois I, who embraced on the Field of the Cloth of Gold near Calais, then a British enclave, in 1520.

The two monarchs went on a royal binge, jousting and drinking for a fortnight. But the entente soon disintegrated amid intensive jockeying for power in Europe.

Few of the elements of the first entente are present in the new reconciliation, except that royalty will again be playing a role and that jockeying for position remains a factor.

Queen Elizabeth is due to make a state visit to Paris in May to set the royal seal on the new spirit of warmth which has replaced a decade of friction and resentment in Franco-British relations.

The visit has special value, as the citizens of the French republic are fascinated by kings and queens from other countries, particularly the Royal Family from across the Channel.

The Queen's visit crowns an agreement early last summer which dismantled the late General Charles de Gaulle's policy of keeping Britain out of Europe and made it inevitable, short of a rejection by the House of Commons, that Britain would join the EEOM.

Chemicals in Perspiration React with Metal Jewelry

By G. C. THOSTESON, MD

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My skin turns black wherever it is in contact with jewelry with a high non-gold alloy content.

An 18-K ring leaves only a slight smudge. A costume jewelry watch and other 14-K rings create large dirty-looking areas for several inches surrounding the area of contact. This is not easily washed off except with soap, water and scrubbing.

The same reaction occurs with silver service. I can take a clean spoon and actually write on my arm with it. Could you explain this? No one seems to have ever heard of it. — C. E.

It's not as uncommon as you may think. It is the result of a reaction of chemicals in perspiration (usually sulphides) and metals in the jewelry.

Pure gold does not easily combine with other things—but pure gold is too soft to make good jewelry so other metals are alloyed with gold to make it stronger and wear better.

Exactly why some people have traces of chemicals in the perspiration that cause a chemical reaction with metals, I do not know, but it is a complaint one encounters fairly regularly.

Jewelers, I understand, have pretty good success in overcoming the trouble by coating metal, where it comes in contact with the skin, with a transparent plastic, or coating it with rhodium.

As to table silver, the best suggestion I can make is to wash it very thoroughly before dinner, and—this is important—dry them very thoroughly. The less skin moisture, the less chance of chemical reaction.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: My son, 42, is bothered with severe pain in either his big toe or ankle at various times. It is swollen and he can't stand to have even a sheet touching it. It generally lasts three to four days. Do you have a diet for it? Are alcoholic drinks harmful?—Mrs. E. R. S.

Moderation in diet is helpful in controlling gout, but paramount importance is in use of one or another of the medications which keep the uric acid level down.

Colchicine remains useful to subdue attacks, but the drugs to lower the uric acid should be used permanently. Most physicians don't object to moderate alcohol, but excessive alcohol intake is definitely unwise for a gout sufferer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Two friends recently had operations for hemorrhoids and experienced practically no discomfort. The doctor kept the rectal area dilated for 14 to 21 days.

The only objection both had was that they had involuntary bowel movement some days later. Is this a new type of surgical procedure, and if so, are there any drawbacks to it?—W. W.

No, sir, it's not new. Dilation after the surgery is an essential part of the procedure, preventing adhesions from forming in the membrane of the rectum. This can be done either by digital manipulation or the use of bland bulk-producing medication.

Involuntary and rush movements are not unusual after a hemorrhoidectomy but normal control is soon established.

Moira Seniors In Queens Tourney

Moira Trojans parlayed strong defence, outstanding rebounding and a balanced scoring attack into a berth in the Queens University Basketball tournament. The Trojans blitzed Centennial into 88-63 submission last night to remove the remaining contender for Belleville's rights to enter the annual high school tournament.

The Trojans neutralized Centennial's strong front line with the tough inside scoring and rebounding of Jim Wiggins and Al Bender, while at the same time guard Bill Henry was lending offensive balance with some deadly outside shooting.

The Trojans led 41-27 at half time and 61-41 at three quarters with both teams substituting freely in the final quarter with the game out of Centennial's reach.

Henry's deft shooting touch from the top of the key accounted for many of his 28 points, while Wiggins and guard Ken LaPalm each potted 19 and Bender came up with 12.

For Centennial, Vahe Parmakouzian was the lone bright light netting 22 points from his forward position.

In the junior game Moira took an easy 38-27 win getting a big 30 point effort from Don McLain while Murray Dales was good for 12 points. The bantam Trojans made it a clean sweep by downing Centennial 59 - 56. Dave Cuff with 17 points and Dan Gutoski with 15 were top scorers for the winners.

The Trojan senors will now travel to Kingston December 28th for the annual high school event.

Something new in Bay of Quinte basketball will be initiated this Friday night at Moira Secondary School with an East-West game taking place. A total of 10 local schools including the Trojans, Centennial, Quinte, BCI, Nicholson, Albert College, Trenton, Napanee, Centre Hastings and Picton will compete in the event.

Each team will compete for 12 minutes with the total score between the two divisions to determine the winners. Trophies will be awarded to the top team and individual player. Starting time is 8 p.m. with admission 50 cents or 25 cents with a student council card.

Teachers Serve Notice

The Belleville High School Teachers served notice that school was out for the Intell handing them an 8-1 Gas House setback, while in the other contest played at Dick Ellis Rink Rollins Lumber tripped the Hospital 3-2.

The Teachers carried a narrow 2-1 lead into the final period before exploding for six unanswered goals to hand the Intell its first loss. The papermen had sported a league leading 3-0 record after successfully protesting the use of an ineligible player by the Hospital in last week's 5-3 win over the Intell.

Vince Steiner and Al Mott paced the Teachers with two goals each with singles going to Kevin Mason, Bruce Racicot, Paul Brown and Dave Bell. Steve Ling had the only goal for the losers.

In the other bout Rollins took an early lead on a goal by Gary Ray, but saw the Hospital come back with markers by George Jacklin and Rob Preston. Murray Brydson squared matters at 2-2 in the final period before Bill Nolan potted the winning goal for Rollins.

Dolphins Dump Bears

MIAMI (AP) — Coach Jim Dooley, standing amid a pack of sweaty and slaughtered Chicago Bears, already had a Super Bowl pairing in mind.

"If I had to pick two teams now," said the Bears' coach, "it'd be the Miami Dolphins against the Miami Dolphins."

Chicago had just absorbed a 34-3 licking from Miami in Monday night's National Football League game but, although delighted, Dolphin coach Don Shula wasn't ready to pack for New Orleans and the Jan. 16 title game.

The Dolphins have the NFL's finest record—eighth straight triumph—making Miami 9-1-1 with a 1½-game division lead over the world champion Baltimore Colts.

Bob Griese passed for two scores, increasing his NFL-leading touchdown total to 18. Larry Csonka plowed for 104 yards, recapturing the American Conference rushing lead with 878. Garo Yepremian booted field goals from 49 and 31 yards plus extra points to increase his NFL scoring lead to 79 points.

The massacre of the Bears included a 23-0 edge in first downs and 466-187 in total yardage. The frustrated Chicagoans had to go for a 15-yard field goal by Mac Percival to get on the board.

Griese suffered a slight injury to his left—and shielding—shoulder before departing to the roar of 75,312 Orange Bowl fans. The fifth-year pro had originally completed 12 of 17 for 214 yards.

The Dolphins' "magic number" in the American Conference East became two with games remaining against the Pats, Colts and Green Bay Packers.

Arnie Sets Mark

NEW YORK (CP) — Arnold Palmer surpassed the $2,000,000 plateau in Professional Golfers Association earnings for the first time in his career Sunday with a $4,000 cheque for a sixth-place finish in the Heritage Classic.

But Palmer, No. 2 on the over-all money list with $200,706, and Jack Nicklaus, who is second with $213,678, have a lot of catching up in the two remaining tournaments to overtake leader Lee Trevino and his $229,552.

Nicklaus, who collected $6,518 for a third-place tie Sunday, closed in slightly on Trevino who picked up only $2,318 for 12th place.

Hale Irwin, who took the $22,000 top prize for his first tour victory, boosted his annual earnings to $81,423 for 15th place.

Argos Welcomed Back

TORONTO (CP) — Bramalea Satellites retained their anonymity to the end Monday, walking off Empire Stadium Vancouver unannounced, clutching the Canadian senior football championship trophy. They have gone unnoticed all year.

Toronto Argonauts, who lost the national pro final to Calgary Stampeders Sunday in Vancouver, were the object of affection for several hundred supporters welcoming them home.

Even Mayor William Dennison went practically unnoticed as he alighted from the Jumbo jet ahead of the Eastern Football Conference champions returning from their first-ever Grey Cup loss.

Argos, who had not been in a national final since 1952, were greeted by more fans at the airport than witnessed the Satellites crush British Columbia Chargers in the semi-amateur championship at Vancouver last Saturday.

Some of the players appeared with sheepish looks as the chant for Argos went up from the throng. All had hoped to make an unobtrusive departure from the craft to begin the long process of unwinding from the 14-11 setback in the Western-champion Stampeders.

NHL Sued by New York Owner

NEW YORK (AP) — When Clarence Campbell, president of the National Hockey League, said last spring that the NHL didn't plan to expand until the 1974-75 season at the earliest, Neil Shayne went ahead and bought the option for New York franchise in the fledgling World Hockey Association.

Then, three weeks ago, the NHL reversed itself and announced it would, indeed, expand and award franchises for the 1972-73 season to Atlanta and Long Island, N.Y., Shayne's territory.

Shayne, contending "the NHL's sole purpose for expanding here was to knock us out," responded Monday by filing a $27 million anti-trust suit against the league.

The damages suit, filed in U.S. District Court in Brooklyn, names as defendants Campbell; NHL chairman of the board, William W. Wirtz; vice-president Don V. Rock and the chairmen and presidents of all 14 NHL teams.

Shayne, who already has a suit pending against Nassau County—his team plans to play in Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Hempstead when the 12-club WHA is scheduled to begin operating with the 1972-73 season—said the NHL "hasn't even got anybody to award the franchise to—they just gave it to the county."

At the Nov. 9 meeting, however, Campbell said there was one bidder, a group headed by Roy Boe, owner of New York Nets of the American Basketball Association which recently signed a five-year agreement to play in the Nassau facility.

Campbell refused to comment on Shayne's action.

"The place to discuss these matters is in court," he said from Montreal, the league's headquarters.

Shayne said the $33 million figure was selected "because the NHL and the New York Rangers have determined that the franchise out here is worth $6 million for entry into the league plus $5 million for indemnity to the Rangers for entering their territory.

"That makes $11 million and the Sherman Anti-Trust Act provides for triple damages," he said.

Meanwhile, Campbell is to meet today in Montreal with city officials and businessmen from Indianapolis, which is seeking an NHL franchise.

Heading the group are Deputy Mayor Jerry Wallis and John Weisert, general manager of Indiana Pacers of the ABA.

Indianapolis is building an 18,000-seat downtown arena to be the Pacers' new home, but officials believe basketball's dates alone would not be enough to keep the arena operating at a profit.

The city has not had a hockey team since 1953, when Indianapolis Capitols of the Central Hockey League moved after their home, the Indiana Fairgrounds, was destroyed by an explosion.

Betting Pool Suggested

TORONTO (CP) — Six messenger services called Monday for a non-competitive off-track betting system to be run along side the current pari-mutuel system in Ontario.

In a brief to a provincial government study of off-track betting, the group suggests the separate pool operate on the basis of a 24-per-cent return when compared with the current 18-per-cent return of the existing system.

Under the pari-mutuel system, Ontario's racetracks keep 9½ per cent of the money wagered; the provincial government gets 7½ per cent and the federal government gets the remaining one per cent.

The brief proposes that legal off-track shops keep 12½ cents of every dollar bet. The government would get 7½ cents and the racetracks one cent.

Another cent would go to local charities, and the Horsemen's Benevolent Association would get two cents "for the encouragement and betterment of breeding in the province."

The brief says the off-track system would give people in areas remote from a racetrack a legal means of doing what they have already been doing through book-makers.

The brief was on behalf of Golden Circuit Messenger Service, Unique Messenger Service, Eastern Messenger Service, Western Messenger Service, Easy Off-Track Betting Shops and Pari Mutuel Messenger Service.

The provincial government has announced plans to set up its own off-track betting services. Two days of hearings on the proposal will start here Wednesday.

A committee under the chairmanship of A. R. Dick, deputy attorney general, will hear representations on the plans which William Davis expects to have in operation at the start of the thoroughbred racing season next spring.

Establishment of a government controlled operation would end more than four years of controversy that began when a betting shop opened in Welland.

In 1920, "the federal government made it an offence to place a bet for a paying client but the shops attempted to circumvent the legislation by selling scratch sheets to their customers and pitching bets free instead of charging a "messenger" fee.

The Jockey Club, which operates major Ontario tracks, claimed bets placed at the shops failed to reach pari-mutuel windows and the club barred betting shop messengers from the tracks.

Bruins Hold Night Practice

BOSTON (AP) — Boston Bruins, idle in the National Hockey League until Saturday night, held a night practice at Boston Garden Monday and drew 6,000 spectators to a benefit for Salvation Army charities.

Coach Tom Johnson said he was pleased with the way the Bruins' two teams skated—new captained by goalie Eddie Johnston, the other by goalie Gerry Cheevers. They played 27 minutes to a 5-5 tie.

"We need all the work we can get," Johnson said after the session. "It's not the same as playing a game, no way. But they skated well and the over-all play wasn't bad at all."

Snooker Run Stops at 134

TORONTO (CP) — Cliff Thorburn of Vancouver came within two balls of shooting a perfect 147 game in the North American snooker championships Monday.

The 23-year-old Western Canada champion ran 15 reds, 15 blacks and the colored balls down to the pink before missing and nullifying his chance for a $1,000 bonus prize in the championship division. He finished with 134 in the third game.

Thorburn, however, dropped three of five games to Ken Shea, the Dartmouth, N.S., fireman who has rebounded from early playoff jitters to trail in the best-of-71 final by just seven games.

Shea trailed by 8-2 at one point of the series but has recovered the stick that carried him to a share of top place in the preliminaries with Thorburn, who still has a 16-9 edge.

The Maritime champion just missed notching his fourth victory of Monday night's play, losing on the last ball of game No. 2 by two points after leading throughout.

The series continues tonight.

Busiest Day Ever For Baseball Deals

SCOTTSDALE, Ariz. (AP) — Chicago Cubs and Oakland Athletics Houston Astros and Cincinnati Reds, Cleveland Indians and San Francisco Giants pulled off surprise trades Monday to open the winter baseball meetings.

As quickly as one could say (Sudden Sam) McDowell, the Indians' strikeout king was delivered to the Giants to top off an explosive day of swapping that involved 17 players, many of them big names.

The Indians, who had their problems with the temperamental left-hander, landed right-handed ace Gaylord Perry and infielder Frank Duffy in one of the biggest dealing days in history.

"I talked to McDowell, and he said: 'Thank you, I hope I live up to the faith you have in me,'" said San Francisco manager Charlie Fox.

Everyone else was happy.

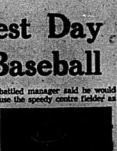
"The game today is speed—and that's what I traded for," said Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson, who also acquired quick-footed second baseman Joe Morgan from Houston.

Morgan and four other Astros—infielder Denis Menke, pitcher Jack Billingham, outfielder Cesar Geronimo and minor league outfielder Ed Armbrister —went to the Reds for slugger Lee May, second baseman Tommy Helms and outfielder Jimmy Stewart.

Perry didn't mind giving up the power-hitting May.

"Sure, we gave up power but I think the deal now gives us a chance to play the kind of baseball I like—the running game," said Anderson. "I took to Morgan to steal 50 bases for us this coming season."

Earlier the Cubs started things by sending another star Ken Holtzman to the pitching-hungry Athletics for outfielder Rick Monday.



Oakland was forced to trade for a pitcher because of the uncertainty of injury-plagued Chuck Dobson and John (Blue Moon) Odom. In Holtzman, they receive one of baseball's leading pitchers with two career no-hitters to his credit.

"He'll be the perfect partner for Vida Blue," said Oakland manager Dick Williams.

As happy as Holtzman was to have his new pitcher, Holtzman was just as thrilled to leave the Chicago organization. He was one of the dissidents during a period of open player rebellion against manager Leo Durocher.

"The air is clearer now," said Holtzman from his home in St. Louis. "I wouldn't have cared if I'd been traded one for two dozen eggs."

Durocher unfinchingly parted with Holtzman for a player of "Monday's quality." The enbattled manager said he would use the speedy centre fielder as a leadoff man.

SAM McDOWELL

Monday, a member of the American League's all-star team in 1968, batted .245 last season with 9 home runs and 56 RBI. Holtzman fell below career standards with a 9-15 won-lost mark last year, but notched his second major league no-hitter.

There was no question that May was the most coveted player in the Astros deal with the Reds. The big first baseman hit .29 homers last year and drove in 87 runs. In Tommy Helms, the Astros get a top fielding second baseman.

The McDowell-Perry deal was a swap of superstars.

McDowell, despite a sub-par 13-17 season, fanned 192 batters. His 2,159 strikeouts in eight seasons make 1971 on the all-time list.

Perry, four years older at 33, has thrived on work through the years. His record was 16-12 last season and the big right-hander has toiled 250 innings or more each of the past six campaigns.

Sport Briefs

JOHANNESBURG (AP) — Bernie Britz of South Africa retained his South African Professional Golfers Association title Monday when he won an 18-hole sudden-death playoff with a five-under-par 67. Britz won three strokes better than Peter Oosterhuis of Britain. Rhodesian Don Cammon came in third with a 71.

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Pittsburgh Penguins of the National Hockey League sold right winger Billy Hicke to Detroit Red Wings Monday for an undisclosed amount. Hicke, 33, who was purchased from California before the season began, scored 18 goals and 17 assists for the Golden Seals last year.

HAMILTON, Bermuda (Reuter) — New Zealander Alan Harriman, 30, scoffed a gallon of beer in five minutes 50 seconds Sunday to beat the world beer-drinking record claimed by an Australian two days before. The previous record-holder was 19-year-old Sydney schoolboy Peter Wilcox who downed a gallon of beer in six minutes 6 seconds.

BOLOGNA, Italy (Reuter) — Paul Nielsen of Toronto was disqualified after one minute 20 seconds of the fifth round of his heavyweight boxing bout Monday against Italy's Giorgio Bambini. Nielsen received two official warnings for fouling.

Willie Mays Is Married

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Mrs. Mary Allen was honeymooning in Mexico Monday with her famous baseball player husband, is a 32-year-old San Francisco social worker.

Mays, 40, and his bride, the former Mae Louise Allen, were married during the weekend in Mexico City and flew to Acapulco for the honeymoon.

San Francisco Giants' centre fielder was married once before, for six years. That marriage ended with a 1962 divorce. The couple had an adopted son, Michael, and May's first wife was awarded custody of the boy, now 11.

Mays, who lives in nearby Atherton, plans to play at least one more season. He signed a two year contract with the National League Giants before last season.

Leafs' MacMillan Ready to Start Again for Third Time

TORONTO (CP) — Billy MacMillan, Toronto Maple Leafs' hard-hitting right winger, is going through his third training camp of the National Hockey League season.

Coming off a great rookie season, the 28-year-old sophomore suffered a charley horse in his right leg early in the original training camp and missed nine of 10 exhibition games.

He got back in the lineup for 11 regular-season starts before reinjuring the leg and again heading for a period of recuperation that has kept him off skates until this week.

The rugged winger, whose checks have been missed by the Leafs through most of the current season, has also been missed by his linemates, captain Dave Keon, himself a victim of early-season injuries, and Garry Monahan.

What it amounts to is three training camps in a row for me and it's tough," MacMillan said Monday as he prepared to skate in his first workout since the second injury. "I was out three weeks the first time.

"This time it's been a month. Fortunately it's a long season yet, 55 games left."

Monday's workout was optional for the Leaf irregulars, with whom MacMillan is class at the present. He hopes to skate with the regulars today.

"I guess a few more days like that," said the Charlottetown native after putting in extra skating time for coach Johnny McLellan, "and I'll be ready to go."

The schedule tonight has Chicago Black Hawks at Vancouver Canucks and St. Louis Blues at home to California Golden Seals.

The Leafs return to action Wednesday night against St. Louis in Toronto, but McLellan has ruled out MacMillan's return to the lineup for that game. Saturday night here against Boston Bruins appears to be a more likely date.

The Toronto coach as much as admitted that the Leafs miss the MacMillan's presence in the lineup.

"The hardest-hitting forward we have," said McLellan. "Besides being a good checker, he scored 22 goals for us last year. You have to miss someone like that."

He added that MacMillan probably would be reunited with his linemates, Keon and Monahan. They formed Toronto's most reliable unit a year ago.

"Billy's out there hitting, a good, clean body checker, and that's the Billy MacMillan how he hit (New York Rangers centre) Jean Ratelle in the playoffs last year! He likes to get them after they've passed the puck and they're looking where the pass went."

MacMillan had just one goal in the 11 games he did play, probably because he missed centre Keon, mostly because he had yet to regain shape lost from the earlier injury.

"My leg was still bothering me too, for a while. I never got in good shape before I was injured again.

"I feel better this time. . . . They gave me a good rest and didn't rush me back. I'm told by the doctors if I get another bump on that leg I'll really be in trouble so it's important not to rush back."

Glennie Fodder For Expansion

TORONTO (CP) — Brian Glennie is a victim of numbers —hockey style.

The Toronto Maple Leafs defenceman is collecting $20,000 from a National Hockey League club that doesn't want him.

He admits he would prefer playing in Los Angeles or Oakland to standing by and playing at the discretion of coach John McLellan.

But, under NHL waiver rules, he doesn't expect to go near where this season. In the leaguedraft next June, he'll probably go to one of the expansion franchises—Long Island, N.Y., or Atlanta.

Glennie is one of 21 players with the Leafs. Only 19 can dress for the game.

Leafs have seven defencemen, one more than they can use.

The NHL has rules that make sure established players actually play. But the rules are flexible, and almost every team has players who switch from the press box; players who would be used elsewhere if made available.

The situation has Alan Eagleson, the NHL Players' Association chief, concerned.

"It's not fair to the players and it's something which will be on our paper for discussion at the league meetings in January."

Eagleson has suggested two rule changes.

—The number of players allowed on a team's roster should be reduced to 19, the same number allowed in uniform for a game.

—A player who sits out more than a stipulated number of games, perhaps five, should have the right to go to an arbitrator Clarence Campbell, NHL president. The arbitrator or Campbell would then have the right to force the team to pay a new, best trade offer they had received for the player.

Even if the NHL refuses to change the rules, Eagleson said the rival World Hockey Association, which begins operation next October, will resolve the problem.

"The WHA will get all the players who have a reason to complain."

Said Leaf general manager Jim Gregory recently:

"We're heading toward an expansion draft. We know we're going to lose three players. If we have seven defencemen going into the draft and we lose one or two, we're still in good shape."

Canadiens' Guy Lapointe Has Surgery

MONTREAL (CP) — Defenceman Guy Lapointe of Montreal Canadiens underwent surgery Monday to repair a fracture of his right cheekbone. The injury occurred in Montreal's 4-2 loss to Detroit Red Wings in a National Hockey League game when Lapointe was struck just below the right eye by the puck.

WOLFVILLE, N.S. (CP) — Two badminton players from the People's Republic of China said Monday their Canadian tour was a forerunner of closer ties between China and Canada. Tang Hsien-hu and Hou Chiachang defeated a Toronto team of Ed Yablonski and Ken Delf in all but one singles game.

LONDON (CP) — South Shields defeated Scunthorpe United 3-2 Monday in an English Football Association Cup first-round soccer replay. South Shields will face Notts County in the second round on Saturday, Dec. 11, when 20 matches will be played.

* * *

EDMONTON (CP) — City council decided Monday to bid for the 1978 British Commonwealth Games—and in connection with the bid spend almost $40 million. The final choice of a site will be made at Munich during the 1972 Olympics in August.

Orr Is Hot—Again In NHL Scoring Race

MONTREAL (CP) — Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins continues to lead in the National Hockey League individual scoring race today.

But defenceman Bobby Orr, Esposito's team-mate, has clipped the latter's lead to only one point and remains the hottest point-collector in the league of late.

Esposito has a league-leading 18 goals and 40 points, both ahead of his pace last season when he totalled 76 goals and 152 points for an all-time NHL high. Last season, he had 15 goals and 30 points after 22 games.

Orr has 11 goals and 28 assists—most in the NHL—for 39 points.

The Boston defenceman has collected 20 points in his last seven games, including seven goals.

Third in the scoring is Vic Hadfield of New York Rangers with 36 points, including 17 goals. Hadfield's linemates Jean Ratelle, with 35 points, and Rod Gilbert, with 32, are fourth and fifth respectively.

The big surprise continues to be the fine play of rookie Richard Martin of Buffalo Sabres. Martin has 30 points, including 17 goals in 23 games. Gilbert Perreault, rookie-of-the-year last season and Martin's teammate, has the same number of points on 10 goals and 20 assists.

Perreault, who had 38 goals and 72 points last season, had 11 goals and 18 points after 23 games ogo year ago.

Four goaltenders from West Division clubs continue their close battle.

Veterans Gump Worsley and Cesare Maniago of Minnesota North Stars have individual goals-against averages of 1.40 and 1.75 respectively to give their club a league-leading combined average of 3.60.

Tony Esposito at 1.57 and Gary Smith at 1.93 give Chicago Black Hawks the runner-up spot with a combined 1.73 average.

Worsley leads the individual lead at 1.40 with Gilles Villemure of New York, while Esposito is the second leader with three.

Meloche Rated as Coming Star

OAKLAND (AP) — When Garry Young, general manager of California Golden Seals, told Charles O. Finley that a 21-year-old goaltender would be facing Boston Bruins, the team owner said: "Oh, no!"

But, Young recalls, Finley added: "OK, I'll back you up even if the score is 10-0."

The score of the Oct. 28 game at the Boston Gardens was 3-2 in favor of the Seals. Giles Meloche, registered the shutout, first in nearly a year against the mighty Bruins, and the result was generally unbelieved around the National Hockey League.

"I couldn't do anything wrong that night," says Meloche. "It was great.

"Even the Boston fans cheered me at the end," says Meloche, who has had several rough nights since breaking into the Seals' lineup with the shutout.

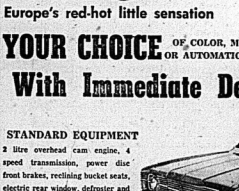
Young, who talked coach Vic Stasiuk into starting Meloche in Boston, agrees the youngster "is going to be a great one, an all-star goalie for many, many years."

"A goaltender doesn't reach his full potential until he's at least 25 years old," Young adds.

Meloche now shares the Seals' goaltending job with Lyle Carter, 22, who was in the net beat Buffalo Sabres 5-3 and Sunday night when the team moved into third place in the Western Division.

Meloche will probably start tonight in St. Louis against the Blues.

The young goalie was a junior player in Verdun, Que., two years ago. He spent most of last season with Flint Mich., of the semi-pro International Hockey League but was pressed into action with Chicago Black Hawks after veteran Gerry Desjardins broke an arm.



With Meloche in the lineup for two games, Chicago beat Vancouver 6-4 and the Seals 5-2.

"But I didn't feel like part of the team," says Meloche. "Here I do. We're all young and we've got great spirit."

The Seals sent goalie Gary Smith to Chicago in an off-season trade for Desjardins but ended up with Meloche when it was discovered that Desjardins' arm injury had not healed.

Reno Paper Gets Thank-you Note from Man Who Hijacked Jet

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A letter signed by "D. B. Cooper"—the name reported used by the hijacker who got $200,000 and then apparently parachuted from a jet airliner between Seattle and Reno last week—was received Monday by the Reno Evening Gazette.

The note, printed words pasted to paper, was turned over to the Federal Bureau of Investigation here.

An agent said an attempt would be made to trace the letter. The envelope was postmarked at Oakdale, a small town southeast of Stockton in central California.

The FBI agent said the note will be turned over to the FBI laboratory in Washington, for analysis.

The note, in various kinds of type, apparently from a newspaper, said: "Attention thanks for hospitality was in a rut D. B. Cooper." It was addressed in pencil to "Reno Newspaper, Reno, Nev."

The search continued in the Pacific Northwest for a man who hijacked the Northwest Airlines 727 last Wednesday and then apparently bailed out with $200,000 in ransom money.

The airline had delivered four parachutes and the money to the hijacker in Seattle after he commandeered the aircraft between Portland and Seattle.

The 36 other passengers and two of the six-member crew were permitted to leave the plane in Seattle.

He apparently bailed out over the Woodland, Wash., area as the plane made a slow, low-level flight—at his command—from Seattle to Reno, en route to his demanded destination, Mexico.

Cuba Scorns Hijackers But Wants Reciprocity

Free-lance Canadian journalists James and Beverly Reed, both formerly with CBC in Toronto, filed this dispatch following a vacation of several weeks in Cuba.

By JAMES and BEVERLY REED

MEXICO CITY (AP) — "My mother wouldn't believe it," mused the young girl living with other U.S. airplane hijackers in the Havana suburb of Miramar. "We've got a swimming pool, we live in a house that used to belong to a millionaire and we have a cook and a gardener."

The catch is that the pool never has any water, the house is falling apart and the cook and gardener are keeping us under surveillance."

For the hijacker in contemporary Cuba, life is unpleasant.

Cuban officials have stated repeatedly that the vast majority of hijackers are "common criminals, mentally unbalanced persons and socially unadapted persons anxious to change their country of residence for personal reasons of an unrevolutionary nature."

They also are a considerable drain on the country's slim economic resources, since the government must feed, house and clothe them.

The hijackers, particularly the Americans, despair of ever seeing their homelands and families again. Life for most is drab and uninteresting because they live in a basically unsympathetic society that has another language and customs.

The Cubans view hijacking as very much a two-way street. In the case of the U.S., which is only 90 miles away, they are prepared to hand over all American hijackers, except those deemed to be in danger of political reprisals.

But they insist that any agreement with the U.S. must include a right to extradite those Cubans who have hijacked Cuban aircraft and ships, including even rowboats.

They charge that the U.S. has rarely reciprocated. Cuba claims that since the 1959 revolution, when Castro came to power, more than 200 boats and more than 30 aircraft have been illegally hijacked to the U.S. and never returned.

Almost immediately upon arrival on Cuban soil, the hijacker is placed in solitary confinement. Then he is subjected to intense questioning and a detailed dossier on his private life and background is assembled.

Foremost in the minds of the Cubans is that the hijacker may be a Cuban exile or even an agent of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency.

The period of solitary confinement can last up to three months. In some cases it has a serious psychological effect on the persons.

Once the interrogation period is completed, the hijacker is removed to one of several houses which the Cubans have set aside as living quarters for them.

King Hussein and Family Under Sentence of Death

CAIRO (CP) — King Hussein of Jordan and his family are under sentence of death from the assassins who killed his prime minister Sunday, it was reported today.

The Cairo newspaper Al Akhbar said that the Black Septembar organization, to which the assassins belonged, has sworn to kill the entire Jordanian royal family and the army commander, Gen. Habes el Majali, to avenge the Palestinian Arabs killed in clashes with the Jordanian army in September, 1970.

Egyptian officials who have questioned four men accused of killing Premier Wasfi Tell say they have admitted flying to Pakistan earlier as an execution squad to try to kill Hussein's brother, Crown Prince Hassan, but failed because of tight security precautions.

Cairo police, who have completed their questioning of the four, revealed they are looking for a fifth man.

The man, so far unnamed by police, is known to have visited the other four shortly before the assassination was carried out at the Sheraton Hotel.

Al Akhbar said the four would be tried before a supreme state security court, and informed sources said the trial could be expected shortly. The four are being held under close guard.

The prosecution announced that the four would be charged with premeditated murder—a charge carrying the death penalty—as well as illegal possession of firearms and ammunition.

The "traction-action" winter tires to team up with your belted front tires!

Goodyear Polyglas Suburbanites are made with an interlocking "S" tread pattern. It bites hard and deep, self-cleans as the tires turn. It gets you going, keeps you going in the worst winter weather. However, on dry highways, the "S" tread provides a quiet, "no-hum" ride.

The carcass of the Polyglas Suburbanite is built with polyester cords to prevent flat-spotting, or "morning thump", in cold weather. Polyester is flexible, too . . . for a smooth, easy ride.

Belts of fiberglass under the tread reduce tread squirm, which wears away the rubber. With belts of fiberglass you get more miles per dollar, extra seasons of use. Caution: mixing belted and non-belted tires can be dangerous. If your front tires are belted, then you need Goodyear Polyglas Suburbanites on your rear wheels.

East Ontario Invaded By Corn Leaf Blight

OTTAWA (CP) — A corn-ravaging blight, which ripped through U.S. cornfields in 1970, has moved into Ontario and federal scientists say eastern Ontario's 1972 corn crop could be seriously hurt.

Dr. A. T. Bolton of the federal Agriculture department, says a survey of seven eastern Ontario counties—Carleton, Prescott, Glengarry, Stormont, Dundas, Grenville and Lanark—showed growing evidence of the disease.

Infected ears were found in several fields, usually where the southern corn leaf blight had already killed leaves.

The blight's fungus, called helminthosporium maydis—probably started in the U.S., Dr. Bolton says in a department news release. During wet weather, the fungus produces spores which are carried by the wind. They can also be splashed onto other leaves and into corn ears by rain.

The blight causes narrow oval brown spots on leaves which inch together to form large dead areas or lesions. When the fungus attacks cobs, it produces a black rot which begins at the tip and eats down through the kernels.

Before the 1970 epidemic in the U.S.—which caused serious feed shortages in that country—the blight had not attacked northern corn-growing areas.

But changes in seed production techniques and the discovery of new corn breeds has brought about a new strain of the blight which can survive in lower temperatures.

The disease was not found in eastern Ontario—which has been moving into commercial corn production during recent years—until September, 1970. Then, in September this year the disease appeared in force and spread rapidly. Corn production in Ontario this year is estimated at 7.48 million bushels, down from 7.85 last year.

Because of the late appearance, however, this year's crop was not hit as hard as it could have been had the disease appeared earlier. But if the disease survives during the winter, as it did last year, the blight could be widespread in 1972, Dr. Bolton says.

The blight presents additional problems for eastern corn growers hit this year with low-priced U.S. corn exports—the U.S. crop shot back following the 1970 blight epidemic—and seasonally low prices as growers glut the market with the fall harvest.

Added to this are estimates this year for a record feed grain crop, especially barley, in Western Canada. The western grain competes with eastern corn as livestock feed.

Du Pont Family Assailed

WASHINGTON (AP) — A study group associated with Ralph Nader has accused the Du Pont family and their directorial firm of creating "a company state" in Delaware which exploits the land, the people and the natural resources.

The president of Du Pont Co. said the report was inaccurate and distorted.

The Nader report said the Du Pont family's influence in Delaware is so widespread that:

—Professionals working for a non-profit Roman Catholic organization heavily financed by the Du Ponts were fired after a fund-raising expert decided they had endangered Du Pont support. The dismissed workers had protested the presence of National Guard patrols in Wilmington for nine months after Martin Luther King's assassination.

—One man was passed over for an annual bonus and subsequently resigned, and "about five" other Du Pont employees were threatened with dismissal when they organized opposition to a pipeline being installed through their southeastern Pennsylvania neighborhood. The pipeline firm and the petroleum companies which would use the line were Du Pont customers.

—When the editor of the Wilmington newspapers, which are owned by the family-controlled holding company, resisted Du Pont control, he found a newly-appointed executive editor installed at his boss. The new man came from the Du Pont public relations department. The editor resigned in protest.

—When the estate of one member of the Du Pont family wanted to claim a previously-disallowed tax deduction for personal property seized in Cuba, officials asked former U.S. senator John J. Williams of Delaware to introduce enabling legislation. The legislation was passed.

Williams denied in a telephone interview that the 1965 proposal was special interest legislation. The president of the Wilmington Morning News and Evening Journal issued a statement denying that the Du Pont firm or the family controls the newspapers, the two largest in the state.

The Du Pont statement calling the report distorted did not mention the incidents specifically.

The report proposed that Christiana Securities Co., the family holding company, sell the newspapers and that representatives of the public be named to the Du Pont Co.'s board of directors.

The report estimated the Du Pont family fortune at between 2 billion and 2½ billion. It described Delaware inheritance laws as among the easiest in the United States.

Decision on Procedure on Tax Bill Likely to Be Made Today

OTTAWA (CP) — The wellcooked government tax change bill completed 37 days on the Commons trimmer Monday with the future of the legislation still undecided.

Privy Council President Allan MacEachen, in an interview, said he has discussed with Conservative House Leader Gerald Baldwin a Conservative proposal to approve certain portions of the bill by Jan. 1 and leave the rest for next year. But he had not, reached a final decision.

"My objective is to bring this debate to a close within a specified number of days," he said.

The government has set Jan. 1 as target date for putting the entire bill into law.

But Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield has proposed formally last Wednesday that MPs speed approval of sections that Conservatives like by Jan. 1 while delaying others for further study later.

On Oct. 22, the government blocked out sections of the bill for debate and passage in a certain allotted time, but few of these sections have been completed. The House today returns to debate left over from Nov. 10 on administrative portions of the bill, such as appeals to the tax review board and the federal court.

Last Monday, MPs approved 10 out of the scores of items dealing with taxation of corporations and shareholders, but left the bulk of them for future action.

Of the big bill's 332 clauses and subclauses, 85 now have been approved during the current committee stage of detailed study—the step before third and final reading in the Commons.

But the most substantial sections of the bill, although already examined at length, remain to be voted. These include measures affecting capital gains, farm income, mining profits, and the income of business, property, co-operatives, credit unions and corporations.

Apart from largely-administrative or carryover items, about the only substantial measures approved in committee stage have been those to reduce taxes on personal income. Some work even remains to be completed on them.

Mr. MacEachen said he hopes to know sometime today whether inter-party agreement for speedier progress on the bill is possible.

Failing agreement, the government has said it will plod ahead with the bill into next year if necessary, curtailing the Christmas holiday and enforcing the legislative machinery to take effect from Jan. 1 as planned.

New Democrat Leader David Lewis told the Commons he disagreed with Mr. Stanfield's suggestion to split the tax bill.

While the NDP wanted changes in tax proposals to co-operatives and credit unions, "we do not think it is of any value to keep on talking on the bill for a further period of months."

He suggested the New Democrats would not prolong debate if these changes were made.

E. B. Osler (L—Winnipeg South Centre) called on the Conservatives to shorten debate by agreeing to a time allocation similar to an arrangement in Britain in discussing entry into the European Common Market.

British Commons this fall spent only eight days, by agreement, debating entry into the Common Market.

Mr. Baldwin said the British debate was on a simple motion with detailed discussion of legislation to follow later.

Don Mazankowski (PC—Vegreville) said the government could hasten passage of certain measures in the bill if it agreed to the Conservative offer.

Conservative financial critic Marcel Lambert (Edmonton West) said the government's tax proposals on small business as the first instalment on its foreign ownership policy.

He said certain tax incentives for Canadian-controlled private companies would not apply to foreign-owned companies. If passed, these sections could drive businesses out of Canada and cause unemployment.

Mr. Lambert suggested the government should shelve that provision until the over-all foreign ownership policy has been announced.

Under the legislation, Canadian-controlled private companies would pay a reduced tax rate of 25 per cent on the first $50,000 of profit while foreign-owned and public companies would be taxed on 50 per cent of profits.

All corporations currently are taxed on 21 per cent of the first $35,000 of profit.

The government policy on foreign ownership has not yet been announced.

Mr. Lewis slapped at the tax bill for applying a double standard to taxation—one approach to taxing income based on capital gains and another for ordinary workers.

He said shareholders are to be taxed on only half of their capital gains while income of wage earners is fully taxed.

Mr. Mazankowski said the men who prepared the bill are "grooming the wholesale production of small business in Canada."

He said small business is suffering in the current economic climate. The bill provided no relief and could create "wholesale unemployment, worse than we have today."

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo) said there is little evidence of reform in the corporation section in the tax bill.

Corporation taxes were passed on to the consumer. Inefficient corporations were rewarded and efficient ones penalized as taxes were collected only from those making money.

Former New Brunswick premier Hugh John Flemming (PC—Carleton Charlotte) said new tax law should deal gently with foreign-owned companies with a long and good corporate record in Canada. The government would go out of office if it acted against foreign ownership.

Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin) said the small-business provisions would hurt small business when the ingenuity of entrepreneurs was needed to maintain jobs in Canada.

Gas Shortage Faces U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chief White House overseer of fuel supplies says some major industrial plants in the United States could be forced to close down this winter because of several natural gas shortages.

Aries (March 21—April 19). An equal measure of caution and skepticism can serve you well today when dealing with cocksure folks attempt to convince you the sky is falling. Don't believe a word of it!

Taurus (April 20 — May 20). Harmful patterns will surely have you convinced that direct events are looming. If this includes some precautionary borrowing from you, hide your cash.

Gemini (May 21-June 21). A slowly growing conservative element in your outlook is starting to make you doubt the wisdom of maintaining a long-standing alliance. You've outgrown their old stuff.

Cancer (June 22 — July 22). Topsy-turvy happenings where you work can test your nerve-to-stable temperament. Co-workers don't seem to realize that you can't work under this pressure indefinitely.

Leo (July 23 — Aug. 22). Advice to the lovelorn today is opposite to what you'd like to be told. Friends are far more objective about setting you straight on the pros and cons of your latest fling.

Virgo (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22). The many little upsets in your professional life would be a lot easier to take if family, roommates, partners didn't add to them in your off hours. Shut your ears.

Libra (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22). Your judgment is far more cloudy than usual today, so think twice, ask for outside opinions, get your facts straight before you decide. Two heads are better than one.

Scorpio (Oct. 23—Nov. 21). Expensive projects, outings appear apt to be lone-wolf events, especially after partners see how quickly the bills are mounting. You'd be smart to pull out, too.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18). Love, when it's real, can cause you to have a lot of the knight-on-a-white-horse notions out the window. Someone who isn't your type may be the one to appeal now.

Pisces (Feb. 19—March 20). This year's holiday season is sure to be a lively one, especially on the social scene. Don't let all the partying cause you to neglect loved ones at home.

Time Ripe for Meeting

PM Hopes for Breakthrough on Canada-U.S. Economic Questions

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Monday he hopes for a breakthrough in Canada-U.S. economic questions in his December meeting with President Nixon.

He told reporters that Ottawa and Washington officials have taken matters as far as they can go and that it now is time for him [illegible] Mr. Nixon to try to bring matters to a head.

In this context, he referred to U.S.-proposed changes in the 1969 auto pact, the U.S. 10-per-cent surcharge on imports and "a lot of matters under study for the last several weeks and months."

The timing is ripe for a meeting, Mr. Trudeau said.

He added that the one-day meeting to be held before Christmas in the U.S. will not replace the planned two-day Trudeau-Nixon conference here in the spring.

But he also said that if he and Mr. Nixon completed everything in a December Monday assignment in Washington was the original idea of Philip H. Trezise, assistant state secretary for economic affairs who has been a key figure in talks with Canada and other countries about the Nixon trade policies.

Trezise, Acting Minister Mr. Sharp declined to read into the resignation a decision by some U.S. officials to use the trade restrictions with which Treasury Secretary John Connally has been identified as prime advocate.

Mr. Sharp said he understands the Trezise resignation had been in the cards for various reasons.

However, officials here involved with Canada-U.S. trade talks since the Aug. 15 announcement say privately that Trezise's counterpart—like Mr. Trezise usually free traders who have been thought considerable heroism about the switch.

Canada-U.S. talks on the various trade issues have been elevated to senior levels, they say, with traffic so heavy that it is difficult to keep track of the various delegations.

Outside the Commons Mr. Trudeau told reporters the December talks will cover all the economic questions which have upset Canada-U.S. relations in recent months.

He said Mr. Sharp will announce "pretty soon" the results of negotiations on the auto pact, which provides safeguards for Canadian content and employment in North American car making and trading.

Agreement on changes in the auto pact had virtually been reached at the official level. Now it was a matter for heads of government.

Mr. Trudeau repeated that the government's policy on foreign investment will be announced soon.

But he did not know whether this would be before his meeting with Mr. Nixon.

Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield said in the Commons that the minister had for three months rejected his suggestion for a Trudeau-Nixon meeting.

Mr. Trudeau denied rejecting the idea. The meeting was "one of timing."

Outside the Commons, Mr. Stanfield said it was evident that the "new economic thrust" in the U.S. is coming from the president and that it is hopeless for Mr. Trudeau to make clear the consequences for Canada.

Mr. Stanfield said that as prime minister he would establish regular annual meetings with the U.S. president.

The Trudeau-Nixon talk will follow hard on the heels of a meeting between Mr. Sharp and U.S. State Secretary William Rogers, for which no date has yet been set.

Montrealer Development Body Head

OTTAWA (CP) — Nearly six months after the new Canada Development Corp. was approved by Parliament, the government appointed Monday its 21 directors who immediately elected R. Anthony Hampson, a Montreal businessman, as the first chairman.

With Marshall A. Crowe, 58, now deputy secretary of the cabinet, as the corporation's new president, the CDC will be operating from an Ottawa office by Dec. 15. But the government has said it wants the headquarters moved to Vancouver within two years.

Mr. Hampson, 41, is president and chairman of Capital Dynamics Management Ltd., of Montreal. Both he and Mr. Crowe were given a major role in the selection of the 19 other directors who are drawn largely from Canada's medium-sized industries, but also include a union official and a woman vice-rector of a university.

The Canada Development Corp., talked about by two Liberal governments for eight years, was established to allow Canadians to invest in Canadian enterprises. It will have an authorized capital of $2 billion, and 90 per cent of this will be open to Canadian shareholders. But for the first three years, while the CDC is getting on its feet, the federal government will be the only shareholder, with a $250 million stock holding.

At a news conference Monday, Mr. Hampson said the assignment given CDC "is to develop profitable industries that wouldn't otherwise develop." Another purpose was to maintain Canadian-owned enterprises, but not necessarily to buy back foreign-controlled operations in Canada.

"There would be no investments in lost causes.

"We're not an employment agency."
